Cause of Lockjaw.

Lockjaw, or tetanus, is caused by a bacillus or germ which exists plentifully in street dirt. It is inactive so long as exposed to the air, but when carried beneath the skin, as in the wounds caused by percussion caps or by rusty nails, and when the air is excinded the germ is roused to activity and produces the most virulent poison known. These germs may be destroyed and all danger of lockjaw avoided by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm freely as soon as the injury is received. Pain Balm is an antiseptic and causes such injuries to heal without maturation and in one-third the time required by the usual treatment. It is for sale by all druggists.

THE FIGHTING CEASES.

Rains and Bad Roads Stop Operations in Manchuria.

The Number of Japanese Killed During the Fighting at Port Arthur is Placed at 50,000—Reckless Attacks.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 21.—Apart from skirmishes and exploits of scouting parties there is almost a complete suspension of operations in Manchuria. The heavens have interposed to put a stop to bloodshed. Rain, impassable roads and exhausted armies are factors sufficient in themselves to explain the cessation of hostilities, and these conditions are aggravated by a dense fog overspreading the whole of the theater of war. Behind this pall either side would be able to change the disposition of whole forces in absolute secrecy; but the obscurity renders absolutely dangerous any attempt at a forward movement. When the curtain of mist is lifted the fighting may be resumed under totally changed conditions.

Che Foo, Oct. 21.—According to a camp follower, who has been for some time with the Japanese army now besieging Port Arthur and who is at present in Che Foo, having arrived from Dalny, the number of Japanese killed before the forts has reached 50,000. He says the mikado's men recklessly attacked the strongest positions, making wild rushes in masses, the soldiers being stripped of their accoutrements and clothing. The result was that the Russian machine guns mowed them down. He also asserts that there is some talk among the officers and men that leads to the belief that the Japanese mean to try to carry the inner forts and citadel this month.

New York, Oct. 24.—So far as the dispatches from the far east show there has been no change in the relative positions of the hostile armies confronting each other on the line of the Shakhe river. There is an unconfirmed report that a Russian force of 20,000 men has been concentrated at Kauta Pass, 20 miles northeast of Liao Yang, which may be indicative of the direction in which Gen. Kuropatkin is likely to strike his next blow. Cold weather is causing suffering to the armies in the field, although it has wrought an improvement in the conditions for the movement of troops. A report has reached St. Petersburg, but lacks confirmation, that the Port Arthur fleet has left its anchorage in the harbor and has taken up a position in the roadstead.

Tokio, Oct. 24.—Manchurian headquarters reporting by telegraph says that the number of Russian dead found on the battlefield and interred up to October 22 makes a total of 10,550. Upon this total Russian casualties are estimated to exceed 60,000. The Japanese captured a total of 45 guns during the Shakhe operations. The report of the Manchurian headquarters following:

"The enumerated spoils, etc., of the battle of Shakhe follows: Prisoners, about 500; enemy's dead left on the field, 10,550; 45 guns, 37 ammunition wagons, 6,920 shells, 5,474 rifles, 78,000 small arms, ammunition, number of swords, shovels, axes and tents. Beside the enumerated property the uncounted property, extending over 25 miles, will reach an enormous quantity.

"The enemy's dead is being interred with military honors."

AMERICAN PEACE SOCIETY.

Mass Meeting in Cincinnati Preparatory to Organizing An Auxiliary.

Cincinnati, Oct. 21.—Preparatory to the organization here of an auxiliary of the American Peace society, a mass meeting was held Thursday night. Music hall, with a seating capacity of over 5,000, was filled. The meeting was opened by William Christie Herron, leader of the local organization. Prayer was offered by Bishop Walden. Judge Rufus B. Smith presided, in the absence of Melville E. Ingalls, who had been selected as president, making a strong speech against armament even for the Philippines.

Charles F. Thwing, president of Western Reserve university and Adelbert college, was the first speaker, giving reasons for hopefulness for the permanent establishment of arbitration.

First—The increasing breadth of the human mind which is becoming more comprehensive in knowledge and more reasonable in judgment.

Second—The increasing self-restraint of the human will, people becoming less excitable and mobile.

Third—The increasing power of associations, such as boards of trade, chambers of commerce, clubs, social, literary, philanthropic and others.

Fourth—The increasing [illegible] between England and America.

Fifth—The increasing oneness of the world.

Sixth—The increasing goodness of the world.

While discussing his fourth reason and showing how the good will between the Anglo-Saxon nations has increased during the past decade, Dr. Thwing was most enthusiastically applauded.

Baroness Bertha von Suttner, the Austrian author, reviewed the work of the 200 peace organizations in Europe that were combating the skeptics who doubted the possibilities of arbitration doing away with war. She gave an interesting account of an interview with President Roosevelt, who advised her that he would soon communicate with other powers relative to treaties for arbitration. She insisted that the Russo-Japanese war would continue for three years or more if left to arms and appealed for immediate interference in the far east and for the active co-operation of America, through the peace societies that are to be organized.

Dr. David Brown Clark, of London, for 20 years a member of parliament and who opposed the Boer war, said he had heard that militarism was now being feared in this country and urged that it be crushed out. He commended the work of Andrew Carnegie and other Americans, predicted that there would never be another war between Anglo-Saxon nations and held that the Anglo-Saxons could prevent war among other nations.

The meeting closed with an address by Benjamin F. Trueblood, of Boston, secretary of the American Peace society, on the demand of humanity for the organization of auxiliary societies and a war against war. Baroness von Suttner will travel throughout the United States and organize peace societies in the cities and large towns.

MILITARY ACADEMY.

The Annual Report of the Superintendent, Gen. Mills.

Washington, Oct. 21.—In his annual report Brig. Gen. Mills, superintendent of the military academy, dwells on the need for an infectious disease building on the grounds of the academy, as there had been a number of cases of such diseases during the past year. The discipline of the cadets is said to be satisfactory and they are showing an increasing disposition to comply willingly with authority, adhere to regulations and refrain from ill-treating the fourth class men. The academic instructions have been maintained at a high degree of efficiency which Gen. Mills attributes in large part to the fact that the instructors, graduates of the academy, are of great ability. He urges that only the best men be detailed to the academy for that purpose. The assignment of many officers to the general staff, he says, has greatly reduced the number of available for duty as instructors at the academy and certain changes in the detail laws are suggested to remedy this difficulty.

FOUGHT TO THE DEATH

Pistol Duel Between Detectives and Train Robber Suspects.

Two Officers and One Suspect Dead, Two Others Fatally Wounded and Others Badly Injured in a Room in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Oct. 22.—Two city detectives are dead and another is not expected to live during the night, while one train robber suspect is at the morgue and two others are in the city hospital, one probably fatally wounded and the other badly beaten up, as the result of a desperate battle Friday between five officers and three men whom they tried to arrest. Harry Adams, who escaped at the time of the shooting, was captured later by Detective Lee Killiam, who fired twice in making the arrest.

The dead: John J. Shea, detective; Thomas Dwyer, detective; Al Rose, suspect.

The wounded: James McClusky, detective, critical; C. C. Blair, fugitive, shot four times through the body; Harry H. Vaughn, fugitive, badly beaten about the head by detectives when he sought to aid his friends in the battle. The fight occurred in the front room of a house on Pine street, and the men whom the detectives sought to arrest are suspected of being implicated in a train robbery at Centralia, Ill., a few weeks ago.

The house had been under police surveillance for several days. A few minutes before the fight occurred Vaughn left the house and started to walk down Pine street. The detectives closed in on him after he had gone some distance from the house and he was arrested.

Accompanied by their prisoner the detectives returned and entered the house. Shea, McCluskey and Dwyer were leading; Boyle and James were behind with the prisoner.

Hardly had the detectives entered the room in which Rose and Blair were seated when they were met with a volley of shots from a heavy caliber revolver. Shea sank to the floor on the first shot and Dwyer followed almost instantly.

By that time the detectives had drawn their revolvers and there was a deafening exchange for several seconds.

The wounded officers and suspects were taken to the city hospital. Several hours after being taken to the hospital Detective Thomas Dwyer died. It was stated then by the physicians that it was feared Detective McCluskey and C. C. Blair could not live.

Harry H. Vaughn, who admitted that he sometimes went under the alias of Harry Adams, told Chief of Detectives Desmond Friday night that he had come to St. Louis from some place in Ohio, which he refused to name for the purpose of laying plans with Blair and Rose for train robbery.

The room in which the battle occurred was a wreck. Bullet holes perforated walls, window sills and furniture, and every article in the room was overturned or broken.

AT PUERTO PLATA.

The Custom House Seized By An American Claimant.

Washington, Oct. 22.—The reported seizure by the United States of the custom house at Puerto Plata presumably arises from the already accomplished or contemplated occupation of that port by an American designated by the commission which awarded to the Santo Domingo Improvement Co. $4,500,000 damages against Santo Domingo. That award was automatically self-executing and provided that if Santo Domingo failed to pay the award the agent named by the commission was to take charge of four of the customs ports of the island and apply 60 per cent. of the revenues to the payment of claims. The affair is not one in which the United States government is interested except in the contingency that the government of Santo Domingo fails entirely to meet its obligations to the improvement company and then only to the extent of seeing that its interests shall not suffer through such neglect. The officials say no forcible intervention by the government of the United States is contemplated at this time.

THE MARINE OFFICERS.

Important Opinion Given By Attorney General Moody.

Washington, Oct. 22.—Attorney General Moody has given an opinion to the secretary of the navy to the effect that officers of the marine corps who served during the civil war and who were retired prior to the passage of the naval appropriation act of April 27, 1904, are not entitled to advanced rank on the retired list on the ground that the benefits of that act applied only in the cases of marine officers thereafter retired.

The Czar's Relatives.

The list of the Russian czar's relatives includes a brother, an uncle, four cousins of the first degree, ten of the second, 13 of the third and a great-uncle. All of these except the 13 cousins of the third degree must be addressed as "imperial highness." These 43 male relatives of the czar are a great financial burden to the empire, as each of them receives an annual income of $460,000. They moreover own in the aggregate 5,000 square miles of land and 325 palaces, employing an army of 20,000 servants.

Jealousy of Poets.

"Minor poets," said Howard Chandler Christy, the illustrator, "are apt to be jealous of one another and to treat one another rudely and spitefully. At a literary dinner the other day I heard two minor poets in conversation. 'I saw your villanelle in the Blank Magazine,' said the first. 'Did you?' said the other. 'Yes, and I heard a neat compliment on it, too, by a young woman.' 'What did she say?' The first poet laughed. 'Why,' he answered, 'she wanted to know if I had written it.'"

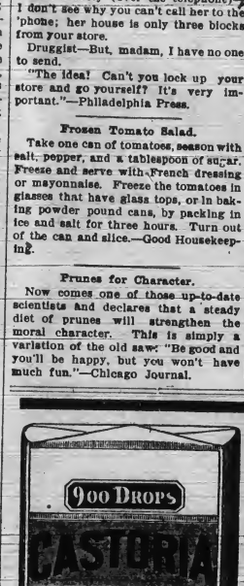
Prunes for Character.

Now comes one of those up-to-date scientists and declares that a steady diet of prunes will strengthen the moral character. This is simply a variation of the old saw: "Be good and you'll be happy, but you won't have much fun."—Chicago Journal.

BLOOD WILL TELL



A THEORY SUPPORTED BY FRESH, CONCLUSIVE EVIDENCE

A Recent Instance Proves That a Woman's Happiness is Largely Dependent on the State of Her Blood.

When the blood is disordered every organ of the body is affected unfavorably and fails to discharge its functions properly. In the case of every woman nature has made special provision for a periodical purification of the blood and so long as this occurs her health and spirits unfailingly reveal the beneficial results. So slight a cause as a cold or a nervous shock may produce a suppression of this vital function and until it is restored she is doomed to misery. The remedy that has proved most prompt and effective in all disorders peculiar to the female sex, is that which brought such great relief to Miss Mattie Griggs, of No. 807 Indiana street, Lawrence, Kansas, concerning which she speaks as follows:

"In the winter of 1902, from some unknown cause, there was a cessation of functions peculiar to my sex for a period of four months. I became very weak and could not get up stairs without help. I had nausea and pain and a constant headache. I was under the care of a physician for three months, but he did not succeed in curing me. Then a lady friend told me about the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which she had used in her family and she induced me to try them. It was in May when I first began to use them and in June I had fully recovered my health, and have since remained perfectly well."

In all cases of delayed development of young girls; in anæmia or weakness due to impoverished blood and showing itself in pallor, lack of ambition, despondency and nervousness; also in the great constitutional disturbances attending the period known as the change of life, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are invaluable for women, whose health is always closely dependent on the state of the blood. They are sold by all druggists. A booklet of valuable information, relating to the care of a woman's health at all important periods, and entitled "Plain Talks to Women," will be sent free in a sealed envelope to any one who chooses to write for it to the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

TROUBLE IN PANAMA.

Dissatisfaction Over the Management of Canal Zone.

United States Marines Will Remain There and the Secretary of War Will Leave November 14 to Investigate Matters.

Washington, Oct. 21.—American marines will be retained on the Isthmus of Panama for the present, prepared to meet any emergency which may arise as the result of the disgruntled elements in the new republic. This decision was reached Thursday and orders have been issued for a new battalion of marines to go to the isthmus.

Secretary Taft will go to Panama on the United States Steamship Dolphin. In response to the president's request to the secretary of the navy to provide a vessel for Secretary Taft, the navy department has selected the Dolphin. The Dolphin will be immediately put in preparation for the trip, and it is proposed that Secretary Taft should meet her at Tampa, Fla., and sail from that port for the isthmus on November 14.

GEN. GEORGE W. DAVIS.
(Governor of Panama Canal Strip.)

While Panama, in the treaty with the United States, willingly gave to this country full control of the canal zone, ten miles wide across the isthmus, it did not intend to relinquish its entire sovereignty, and, according to the Panamans, the latter find themselves treated as residents of a foreign country on either side of the canal lands which runs across the middle of their republic.

Misinterpretation by the United States and Panama, and bad faith in putting its terms into execution, is the principal accusation of the little isthmian republic against this country. Differences between the Panama government and Gen. Davis, governor of the canal zone, arising out of alleged undue exercise of authority by the latter, are what have caused the present situation, which the president regards as serious enough to have a personal investigation made by Secretary Taft.

JOHN F. WALLACE.
Chief Engineer of the Panama Canal.

Colon, Oct. 22.—News reached here Friday afternoon that about 200 armed men who are thought to be malcontent Panamans rather than Colombian soldiers, have been seen in the neighborhood of Culebra threatening hostilities against the Panama government. As soon as the American authorities of the canal zone became cognisant of this force, marines were sent out to ascertain their purpose. It is rumored that a skirmish occurred inland in which several were killed; but there is no confirmation of this report.

Washington, Oct. 22.—Assistant Secretary Darling said Friday night that so far as he was aware, no advices had been received at the navy department of the reported skirmish between United States marines and Panamans on the isthmus. If any dispatches have been received, the assistant secretary explained, they in all probability would be sent direct to the department and would not be delivered to the officials until morning. At this time the navy has about 450 marines on the isthmus, a sufficient force, in the opinion of the administration, to cope with any difficulty which is likely to develop.

REVOLUTIONARY MOVE.

Evidence of It Discovered in Various Parts of Russia.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 22.—The police continue to discover in various parts of Russia and notably in the south and in Poland, evidences of revolutionary activity, such as was described in the St. Petersburg dispatch on October 8. According to reports received at the ministry of the interior, most of the revolutionary literature that is being disseminated comes from Jews.

At Minsk, a great mass of proclamations, pamphlets, false seals and passports were discovered in a Jew's lodging, together with evidences that they came from abroad for distribution throughout Russia.

At Kerch, a Jew reservist who had escaped service on account of physical disability, was found running a printing press turning out addresses to reservists, urging them not to join the colors. At Toule, where an infernal arsenal was located by the police, several Jews were arrested for fomenting strike disturbances and street manifestations among workmen.

At Gredno, the baggage of a Jew arrested at the railway station was full of revolutionary literature. At Odessa, the police on October 15 surprised in a Jew's lodging a meeting of revolutionists, socialists and anarchists and during the attempt to arrest the participants a police officer was shot. At Vitebsk, on the same day, some Jews were arrested for gathering at the theater and distributing proclamations.

THE BALTIC SQUADRON

It Fired on British Fishing Vessels in the North Sea.

A Couple Sunk and Several Persons Killed and Wounded—Other Ships Badly Damaged—News Causes An Intense Sensation.

Hull, Eng., Oct. 24.—A. M. Jackson & Co., solicitors for the owners of 50 Hull fishing boats, have notified the foreign office and admiralty of an attack on the Hull fishing fleet by the Russian second Pacific squadron, commonly designated as the Baltic fleet. The official information is that shortly after midnight Friday the Russian squadron fell in with the Hull fishing fleet in the North sea. The first portion of the fishing fleet passed safely. Then the Russian ships turned their searchlights on the British vessels for some time and a little later opened fire. The steam trawler Crane was sunk and the decapitated bodies of her skipper and mate have been brought to Hull. The boatswain and other members of the crew are understood to be seriously wounded.

The steam trawlers Moulmein and Mino have arrived at Hull seriously damaged by shots, the latter having 16 holes in her hull. It is feared that other damage was done to the trawlers and that at least one more was lost with all hands.

The only survivor of the Crane who has yet reached here is J. A. Smith, son of the deceased skipper, and who, with the captains of the Moulmein and Mino, is going to London to consult with the authorities. Young Smith was asleep in his bunk when the firing aroused him. Just as he was getting up, a shot struck the starboard and penetrated to the forecastle, smashing a lamp near which he was standing. He rushed on deck where the searchlights revealed the horrible sight of his father and Leggett lying headless and the deck strewn with the injured. It was soon found that the vessel was sinking and signals for assistance were sent up. Smith and others concur in the details of the firing that have already been given.

London, Oct. 24.—The steam cutter Magpie, belonging to the Gamecock trawler fleet, which was fired on by the Russian Baltic fleet, arrived in the Thames Sunday night. Her captain, Peaker, confirmed the details of the story received from Hull. He says: "Friday night there were about 40 vessels of the Gamecock fleet fishing in latitude 55 degrees 15 minutes, and longitude 5 degrees 6 minutes. It was a misty, drizzling night. We spread over an area of some miles. Our admiral had just previously signalled by rocket and colored lights the fishing direction for the night. Whether that had anything to do with what followed I do not know; the whole thing is a mystery."

Hull, Oct. 24.—The news has created an intense sensation and indignation in Hull. The Moulmein arrived with her flag at half-mast. Her skipper states that the trawlers were fishing about 220 miles east by north of Spurn Head at 1 o'clock Saturday morning, the weather being heavy, when the outlines of several vessels, apparently warships, sailing in a line, were dimly seen. Whilst the crew were watching the warships, searchlights were flashed upon them, in the glare of which the Moulmein's crew observed what they took to be torpedo boats approaching, apparently with the intention of boarding the Moulmein. They steamed away, however, and soon the fishermen were horrified to find they were being fired upon. First one and then another trawler was struck by flying shot. What seemed to be a round shot went through the Moulmein galley. The Mino, lying nearby, also was struck with many shots, but fortunately the damage was above her water line and none of her crew was struck. The bombardment lasted about 20 minutes. When it had ceased the fleet sailed southward, and some of the trawlers sent up rockets. The Moulmein steered in the direction of the rocket. Soon cries were heard, and the Crane was found sinking with another trawler taking off some of her crew. Those seriously injured were removed to a mission ship and the bodies of Smith and Leggett were placed aboard the Moulmein. The other men with minor injuries were put aboard the trawler Sea Gull, which at a late hour had not arrived at Hull.

Washington, Oct. 24.—Astonishment that the Russian commander should have committed such a blunder as to fire on inoffensive fishing vessels as reported in dispatches from Hull prevailed in official circles Sunday night. At the same time these officials are prompt to express the opinion that the Russian government will promptly disavow the act and apologize when the facts are fully known. The tragedy, it is realized, adds to the complications which the Baltic fleet already encountered ever since it was determined that the vessels should go to the far east.

A CHILD KIDNAPED.

Later the Body Was Found With Skull Crushed and Throat Cut.

Philadelphia, Oct. 24.—With the forehead crushed and the throat cut, the body of four-year-old Michael Mayerski, who was kidnaped near his home in Phoenixville, 28 miles from this city, Friday evening by a band of men supposed to be gypsies, was found Sunday in an abandoned farm house a few miles from Valley Forge. In connection with the murder six men belonging to a party of gypsies were arrested by Chief of Police Carter, of Phoenixville, and several constables, and after an exciting time were lodged in jail at that place. Only the courage and quick action of the police saved the prisoners from being roughly handled by a large crowd of excited people.

The child was picked up Friday evening by a party of men who were driving through the town in two covered wagons. A boy saw them take the child but before he could attract any one's attention to pursue the kidnapers they had disappeared. All day Saturday and Saturday night searching parties were out trying to trace the wagons, but without success. Sunday while three men were in the woods gathering chestnuts they accidentally came across the body of the boy. Nearby lay a club with hair and blood on it. The authorities were quickly notified and the entire police force of Phoenixville and vicinity started out in search of gypsy bands. During the afternoon one party came across a company of them and took them into custody. They denied any knowledge of the crime.

The report that six gypsies had been arrested soon spread through Phoenixville and hundreds of men and women gathered along the streets. As the prisoners were brought through the streets there were cries of "Lynch them," "Burn them." The officers drew their revolvers and kept the angry crowd back. At the lock-up a large crowd was gathered, and the officers had difficulty in getting their prisoners through the threatening mob into the jail. The prisoners were badly frightened.

McCreary, chairman of the monument commission, and ask him to call a meeting of that body to pass on the work.

Owing to the election being so close at hand, Mr. Goebel believes it will be impossible to have a meeting of the commission until after that important event, as Senator McCreary's time will be fully occupied until after November 8. He will ask Chairman McCreary, however, to set an early date for the meeting in order that the work can be officially approved and done in bronze.

On the evening before his death Jones left Jackson in company with William Combs and Shade Combs. The latter stated that the party stopped when night overtook them and built a fire, with the intention of waiting by it until the moon arose and gave them light by which they would be enabled to resume their journey. County Judge James Hargis has come to the relief of the situation by having an extra force of deputy sheriffs sworn in. This order was made, without any comment, late Tuesday, and the citizens were agreeably surprised when there was no shooting or disorder in town Tuesday night. In four states—Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and Idaho—women possess the right to vote on equal terms with men at all elections. Either full or partial suffrage for women exist in twenty-six states. In eighteen states women possess school suffrage. In Kansas they have municipal and school suffrage. Montana and Iowa permit them to vote on the issuance of municipal bonds. In 1898 Louisiana granted them the privilege of voting upon questions relating to public expenditures. With this exception the southern states have been slow in advancing the woman suffrage cause. The women of Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and Idaho vote for presidential electors.

Throughout the land there is an inclination to employ a teacher of "my party," "my church," or to suit "my children," whether any one else is pleased or not, and a great many Trustees will vote only to reward some friend or punish some enemy, or for some sister's cousin's wife's daughter's son-in-law, to be their teacher, or let their school go to the bow-wows. Such narrowness is so contemptible that it ought to be downed and kept down. A man who is so narrow should never get hold of even one small string in control of a school.

Iowa has two novel political organizations that are playing an important part in the campaign for the presidency in that State. They are the "Knights of the Big Stick" named in honor of the president's policy of imperialism and formed by Republicans, and the "Knights of the Red Head," which was named in honor of Judge Parker's hair, and formed by Democrats. The "Knights of the Big Stick" hope to counteract the charge of monarchial tendencies in President Roosevelt, while the "Knights of the Red Head" will sound the praise of Judge Parker.

The certificate of incorporation of the American Tobacco Company was filed with the Secretary of State at Trenton, New Jersey, last week. It is the consummation of the shceme to consolidate the American, the Continental and the Consolidated Tobacco Co. It has an authorized capital stock of $180,000,000 with 1,000,000 of common stock at par value of $100, and 800,000 shares of cumulative 6 per cent bonds.

The big barbecue given by the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association in Lexington last week was attended by hundreds of tobacco growers from forty counties in the burley tobacco district, and was the biggest tobacco rally ever given in this state. The meeting was held at Woodland Park and was addressed by several prominent tobacco men.

The report of the Jury of Awards at the St. Louis Exposition embodies a record for the State of Kentucky of which every citizen may justly be proud. Some weeks ago in the livestock contests, and particularly as regards horses of various breeds, Kentucky was awarded the distinction almost universally conceded to her. To receive now, after six months' exhibit of her products in competition with those of all other competitors, such evidences of her superiority is very gratifying to the pride of her people. By the action of the jury she has been declared to be practically in the lead of other competitors, not only in the products of the soil, but in many other departments in which her superiority has not been heretofore known or acknowledged. The fact that there were awarded 186 prizes including six grand prizes, thirty-five gold and forty-three silver medals, constitutes in itself a record which will repay the cost and energy required to secure such recognition.—Courier-Journal.

Some people will do nothing unless they have Bible authority for it. Men will not wipe dishes because they claim it is woman's work. Let them turn to their Bible; to II. Kings, xxi., 13: "I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish wiping it and turning it upside down." Women, cut this out and show it to the men when they refuse to wipe the dishes.

A Lexington lady who was in St. Louis visiting the Fair put her diamonds in a little chamois bag and tucked it way in the end of her stocking one night on retiring. The next morning she noticed a slight bulge in one of her silk hose. Putting her hand in to see what the matter was she was frightened nearly to death by what she supposed to be woman's greatest enemy —a mouse. She at once hoisted her window and taking the stocking up gently by the end threw the whole business out in the street. She then promptly fainted. Luckily the jewels were recovered.

Citizens' Meeting.

The citizens of Petersburg and vicinity were asked to meet in Gordon's Hall at 7:30 p. m., Oct. 19th, to express their indignation against the persons, unknown at present, to the public, who have, by their unlawful acts, greatly disturbed some of our townsmen, and to adopt some plan to prevent a repetition of such unlawful acts.

The meeting was called to order at 8 p. m. by W. T. Stott, and organized by electing T. B. Mathews chairman, and L. N. Early, secretary.

The chairman was authorized to appoint a committee of ten to cooperate with the city council in preventing disorder in Petersburg, and in convicting those persons who may be guilty of disorderly conduct in our town. The names of this committee are not to be given to the public.

The citizens present were unanimous in the opinion that a pair of good blood-hounds would be helpful in finding violators of law, not only in Petersburg, but also in other parts of the county, and they authorized the secretary to request the Fiscal Court to buy a pair for the use of Boone county.

A committee on resolutions consisting of L. N. Early, J. M. Grant, S. C. Buchanan, and T. B. Mathews, was appointed and authorized to embody in a few resolutions the feeling of the meeting.

The taxpayers present indicated their willingness to pay an additional assessment of twenty-five cents on the hundred dollars to be used in convicting the disturbers of their peace.

The secretary was directed to send the minutes and resolutions to the Boone County Recorder for publication.

The resolutions follow:

Whereas, Certain persons, whether they live in town or in the country we do not know, have, by their unlawful acts, brought anxiety to some of our citizens, diverted to other places some of the business that might have come here, damaged some of our houses and caused a depreciation in the value of all of our property, therefore be it resolved:

1. That every person in the community ought to feel, and to express on all proper occasions, the deepest indignation against those persons who have done us so much harm.

2. That every person in the community ought to report to the city council whatever he knows that may help convict the guilty.

3. That every person in the community ought to declare that he believes that the person who, under cover of darkness, annoys the people of Petersburg, should be punished so speedily that "he will not know who hit him," and so severely that he will know, by an experience, not easily forgotten, that "the way of the transgressor is hard."

4. That we are DETERMINED that lawlessness shall cease in Petersburg. L. N Early, Sec.

A Very Remarkable Remedy.

"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever." For sale by all Druggists.

IN New York, West Virginia and Indiana, the people know that a presidential campaign is on, and the stump orators are putting in full time.

MR. BRYAN'S speaking tour through Indiana aroused considerable enthusiasm among the Democrats, and the campaign will be kept moving from now until the last day in the evening.

The People's party failed to file petitions with the Secretary of State in time to get their candidates for Congress on the official ballot. Nominations were made in the First and Third districts.

J. W. Calvert, of Trimble county, has been nominated by the Republicans for Congress in the Seventh District. Are the Republicans out of material in the Seventh that they have to go to the Sixth for a candidate?

In four states—Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and Idaho—women possess the right to vote on equal terms with men at all elections. Either full or partial suffrage for women exist in twenty-six states. In eighteen states women possess school suffrage. In Kansas they have municipal and school suffrage. Montana and Iowa permit them to vote on the issuance of municipal bonds. In 1898 Louisiana granted them the privilege of voting upon questions relating to public expenditures. With this exception the southern states have been slow in advancing the woman suffrage cause. The women of Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and Idaho vote for presidential electors.

Throughout the land there is an inclination to employ a teacher of "my party," "my church," or to suit "my children," whether any one else is pleased or not, and a great many Trustees will vote only to reward some friend or punish some enemy, or for some sister's cousin's wife's daughter's son-in-law, to be their teacher, or let their school go to the bow-wows. Such narrowness is so contemptible that it ought to be downed and kept down. A man who is so narrow should never get hold of even one small string in control of a school.

Iowa has two novel political organizations that are playing an important part in the campaign for the presidency in that State. They are the "Knights of the Big Stick" named in honor of the president's policy of imperialism and formed by Republicans, and the "Knights of the Red Head," which was named in honor of Judge Parker's hair, and formed by Democrats. The "Knights of the Big Stick" hope to counteract the charge of monarchial tendencies in President Roosevelt, while the "Knights of the Red Head" will sound the praise of Judge Parker.

The certificate of incorporation of the American Tobacco Company was filed with the Secretary of State at Trenton, New Jersey, last week. It is the consummation of the shceme to consolidate the American, the Continental and the Consolidated Tobacco Co. It has an authorized capital stock of $180,000,000 with 1,000,000 of common stock at par value of $100, and 800,000 shares of cumulative 6 per cent bonds.

The big barbecue given by the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association in Lexington last week was attended by hundreds of tobacco growers from forty counties in the buriey tobacco district, and was the biggest tobacco rally ever given in this state. The meeting was held at Woodland Park and was addressed by several prominent tobacco men.

A man never realizes how foolish he was until he accidenatlly comes across a love letter he wrote to his wife before they were married. And the woman usually wonders why the husband is not as wise as the lover was.

The report of the Jury of Awards at the St. Louis Exposition embodies a record for the State of Kentucky of which every citizen may justly be proud. Some weeks ago in the livestock contests, and particularly as regards horses of various breeds, Kentucky was awarded the distinction almost universally conceded to her. To receive now, after six months' exhibit of her products in competition with those of all other competitors, such evidences of her superiority is very gratifying to the pride of her people. By the action of the jury she has been declared to be practically in the lead of other competitors, not only in the products of the soil, but in many other departments in which her superiority has not been heretofore known or acknowledged. The fact that there were awarded 186 prizes including six grand prizes, thirty-five gold and forty-three silver medals, constitutes in itself a record which will repay the cost and energy required to secure such recognition.—Courier-Journal.

The Canadian Railroads can buy steel rails $10 a ton cheaper from the steel trust than any American Railroad can buy them. The tariff discriminates in this and a hundred other ways against the home consumer in favor of the foreigner.

The base ball column in the daily papers has a lonesome look.

Occasionally a candidate drops in and orders 500 cards—they cannot do without them.

The probabilities are that cold weather will find a very short supply of water in this part of the country.

Weather indications have been watched closely all this month, but as always is the case in dry weather all signs of rain fail.

An unusual number of cards and cigars have been distributed during the present campaign for nominations for county offices.

Only two months more of leap year, girls. If you let it pass without securing a hubby, you will discover that four years is a long time to wait.

A Bracken county grower sold his crop of tobacco last week at 15 cents a pound. Buyers are paying from ten to fifteen cents for the most of the crops.—Exchange.

Water gave out in many of the pastures hereabouts last week, and stock had to be transferred to new quarters, and in some instances it was necessary to carry water for them.

The day after Johnnie Hogan returned from the World's Fair the report his back was broken was circulated, and investigation proved the fact to be he had only come back broken.

Bruce Roberts, of Walton, was in town last Wednesday with a commercial tourist. Bruce has established a route through the county, and he swings around the circle as often as once in ten days.

Rock spring in the Middle Creek neighborhood, came very near going entirely out of business, last week. When that spring fails entirely the water situation in this part of the country is critical.

Mr. A. O. Hall showed us, the other day, a pair of shoes that he wore when he was a kid, 80 years ago. They have leather soles and cloth uppers, and are a well preserved specimen of ancient footwear.

About all of the tobacco crop has been housed. The crop will be damaged somewhat by having been cut too soon, but with all it is a good crop and should bring a good price. Some farmers are talking 20c.—News-Herald, Owen county.

If you didn't know it in any other way, the fact would be forced by the stained hands of the small boy that the time for gathering walnuts has come. The boy without blackened palms is "not in it," and is missing one of the crowning pleasures of the season.

Uncle Alfred Cason has the record on the boys of this county as the best corn raiser. He was awarded a bronze medal on the corn that he sent to the World's Fair at St. Louis, where he had as his competitors corn producers from every corn district in the country.

An old fashioned husking-bee with the negro plantation songs that always accompanied them would be a novelty to the people of this age. Fifty years ago about this time of the fall, these gatherings were quite popular and productive of a vast amount of work and amusement.

Owing to the appearance of a small thread-like poisonous worm in cabbages in many sections of the mountain counties, physicians have begun a crusade against the use of the vegetable. Some people will do nothing unless they have Bible authority for it. Men will not wipe dishes because they claim it is woman's work. Let them turn to their Bible; to II. Kings, xxi., 13: "I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish wiping it and turning it upside down." Women, cut this out and show it to the men when they refuse to wipe the dishes.

Many Mothers of a Like Opinion.

Mrs. Pilmer, of Cordova, Iowa, says: "One of my children was subject to croup of a severe type, and the giving of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy promply, always brought relief. Many mothers in this neighborhood think the same as I do about this remedy and want no other kind for their children." For sale by all druggists.

A Lexington lady who was in St. Louis visiting the Fair put her diamonds in a little chamois bag and tucked it way in the end of her stocking one night on retiring. The next morning she noticed a slight bulge in one of her silk hose. Putting her hand in to see what the matter was she was frightened nearly to death by what she supposed to be woman's greatest enemy —a mouse. She at once hoisted her window and taking the stocking up gently by the end threw the whole business out in the street. She then promptly fainted. Luckily the jewels were recovered.

The Cincinnati Post headlines its account of the political doings in Indiana, as follows:

"While there's Apathy elsewhere the Hoosier State is burning redfire and yelling the atmosphere full of holes—torches, dough barbecues and rallies till you can't rest.

"It's war and death if Roosevelt is elected; from the other it's starvation and bread riots if Parker is chosen.

"There's kissing the babies and buzzing the ladies, and sometimes getting the two mixed, as a feature of the hottest old campaign that ever came down the pike."

Citizens' Meeting.

The citizens of Petersburg and vicinity were asked to meet in Gordon's Hall at 7:30 p. m., Oct. 19th, to express their indignation against the persons, unknown at present, to the public, who have, by their unlawful acts, greatly distnrbed some of our townsmen, and to adopt some plan to prevent a repetition of such unlawful acts.

The meeting was called to order at 8 p. m. by W. T. Stott, and organized by electing T. B. Mathews chairman, and L. N. Early, secretary.

The chairman was authorized to appoint a committee of ten to cooperate with the city council in preventing disorder in Petersburg, and in convicting those persons who may be guilty of disorderly conduct in our town. The names of this committee are not to be given to the public.

The citizens present were unanimous in the opinion that a pair of good blood-hounds would be helpful in finding violators of law, not only in Petersburg, but also in other parts of the county, and they authorized the secretary to request the Fiscal Court to buy a pair for the use of Boone county.

A committee on resolutions consisting of L. N. Early, J. M. Grant, S. C. Buchanan, and T. B. Mathews, was appointed and authorized to embody in a few resolutions the feeling of the meeting.

The taxpayers present indicated their willingness to pay an additional assessment of twenty-five cents on the hundred dollars to be used in convicting the disturbers of their peace.

The secretary was directed to send the minutes and resolutions to the Boone County Recorder for publication.

The resolutions follow:

Whereas, Certain persons, whether they live in town or in the country we do not know, have, by their unlawful acts, brought anxiety to some of our citizens, diverted to other places some of the business that might have come here, damaged some of our houses and caused a depreciation in the value of all of our property, therefore be it resolved:

1. That every person in the community ought to feel, and to express on all proper occasions, the deepest indignation against those persons who have done us so much harm.

2. That every person in the community ought to report to the city council whatever he knows that may help convict the guilty.

3. That every person in the community ought to declare that he believes that the person who, under cover of darkness, annoys the people of Petersburg, should be punished so speedily that "he will not know who hit him," and so severely that he will know, by an experience, not easily forgotten, that "the way of the transgressor is hard."

4. That we are DETERMINED that lawlessness shall cease in Petersburg.

L. N Early, Sec.

A Very Remarkable Remedy.

"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever." For sale by all Druggists.

Renovation Versus Regeneration

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. H. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Oct. 23, 1904.

Text:—"Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit."—John 3:3, 6.

GOD makes conditions which men often do not recognize or realize. Living like a Christian is not being a Christian in the Scripture sense of the term. The man who does not know Christ as a personal Saviour, and does not recognize any religious obligation, may live very closely in harmony with the teachings of Christ. And on the other hand the man who has accepted Christ as his Saviour, and has been born again by the operation upon his heart of the Divine Spirit, may live so far below the ideals and teachings of Jesus as to have the genuineness of his religious experience called into question. To the world the former would be classified with the people known as Christians, and probably the latter would be placed in another list, and yet in the sight of God the classification would be exactly reversed. That there is great and growing confusion as to what constitutes a Christian is evident from the increasing number of so-called orthodox ministers of the Gospel who are preaching a religion of renovation rather than of regeneration. The test is not the blood of Christ which has been applied to the sinful heart, it is not the faith which has accepted Christ as the one and only Saviour, it is not the new birth which comes with the quickening work of the Holy Spirit, but the test is rather one of ethics and charitable benevolences. Does a man live outwardly in beautiful harmony with the teachings of Christ? Is he honest and clean in his life? Is he a faithful husband and father, a loyal citizen, and a contributor in time and money to charitable and reform movements? Then, says the world, he is a Christian if ever there was one. It is a question of what a man has done for himself, instead of what God has done in him and for him. It is renovation; not regeneration.

THAT Nicodemus had a misconception which Jesus sought to correct is evident from the conversation between the two. If that exemplary teacher and leader of the Jews, that worthy member of the august body of Sanhedrin, had been presenting himself before the liberal exponent of the modern day religion there would have been a very different test proposed than that which Jesus made of regeneration. There would have been little talk of the Christ lifted up upon the cross and shedding His precious blood for the redemption of the world. There would not have been an emphasis of the spiritual, and an ignoring of the excellences of the life and character. Evidently Nicodemus lacked something which was absolutely essential to his coming within God's classification of the members of His kingdom. It was plain that the test was not one of so many commandments kept, of so much good done, of so high a standing in the community attained. Had it been so, Jesus would have welcomed Nicodemus as a most promising acquisition and have added his name to the list of the members of His kingdom. But when the test was that of the new birth, the being born into the kingdom through the operation of the spirit of God, here was something which went beyond the realm of the flesh. It was something which could not be realized by the effort and attainments of the natural man. It was a process in which God was the moving power. It was a transition from the kingdom of the world to the kingdom of God, which God by His Holy Spirit alone could accomplish for man.

AND have the nineteen hundred years which have come and gone since then so changed the conditions of entrance to the Kingdom of Jesus Christ that it is no longer a question of regeneration, but of renovation? Is it a question now of culture and refinement, and ethics and philanthropy and charity? Are repentance for sin and faith in Jesus Christ as the only Saviour from sin through His atoning sacrifice upon the cross to be set aside as out of date and unsuited to this advanced age of culture and refinement, and external tests satisfactory to man to be substituted? Certain it is that there is great confusion in the minds of many as to what really constitutes a Christian. God's preachers have, many of them, developed an ambition to write the Kingdom in large and liberal letters, and to bring within the compass of the church all who act and appear like Christians. Because there are a refinement and culture in the world in harmony with the teachings and principles of the Christian religion; because very many in the world are discovering that honesty is the best policy, that cleanness of life and moral rectitude give the best joy and satisfaction in life; that man owes something to his fellow man in the way of sympathy and help; that the Golden Rule has proved a high and wholesome standard by which to order life; because all this is true, does not prove the extension of Christ's Kingdom in the hearts of men. We call this Christian, we pride ourselves as the Christian community in which we live, but the term Christian thus used is not Scriptural. God's Kingdom is not chaff in a bulk. God picks its members one by one. And each one must submit to the searching test of the new birth, he must be born again. God does not receive men in carload lots and permit the ungenuine to slip in with the genuine, as the grain merchant might the inferior corn that had been mixed with that of first grade.

NEITHER has God turned over the registry office of His Kingdom to man and commissioned him to write the certificate of membership. But one would think so to hear the bland way in which some men, and even ministers, discuss the matter and persuade men to identify themselves with the visible church on earth. Not long since at a gathering of ministers and lay delegates of one of the large denominations a prominent pastor of one of the large city churches delivered a formal address on the topic: "Evangelism for an Age of Culture," in which he emphasized and reiterated the statement that the old Gospel of emotion and feeling was being supplanted by a religion of what he called reason. Men were no longer to be influenced in the old way by the Gospel. The test was no longer to be what a man experienced in his heart, but what he was in his life. He told the story of a young woman of sweet and lovely character whose life was devoted to works of benevolence and philanthropy, but who was not a member of any church, neither felt inclined to be. He told of how in conversation with her he asked her if she did not love Jesus and of her startled and perplexed expression. "What do you mean by loving Jesus?" she asked. And he explained that it was loving the good and doing good and living in harmony with the teachings of Christ. He told her she was a Christian without knowing it. And this cultured and benevolent young woman eventually accepted his view of the case and united with his church. God grant that the work of God's grace had been wrought in her heart and that she was really born into the Kingdom of God, but such views and methods as were held and pursued by this pastor are pernicious and dangerous, and are the means of getting into the churches an unregenerate element which eventually may destroy the spiritual life and evangelizing force of the church. It is a usurpation of the Divine prerogative! It is destructive of the true mission of Christ to the world! It is a direct and positive ignoring of the plain teachings of the Gospel of Jesus Christ!

WHEN Jesus Christ said that "except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God," I believe He meant just exactly what He said. And when He goes on to define the new birth as an operation of the Spirit of God, and something distinct and apart from the operation of the flesh, or the natural man, I know that Salvation is not something which man can get himself into by his own effort, but something which God does for him, "for by grace are ye saved through faith; and that NOT OF YOURSELVES; it is the GIFT OF GOD." And if the new birth is an operation of the Holy Spirit, and I hear Jesus say that the Spirit "shall convince of sin and righteousness and judgment to come," I know that the test of membership in the Kingdom of God is not what man is in his external life, that it is not what he does for himself, even though he produce a character that bears likeness to Christian principles, but that it is a test of what the Holy Spirit has done within the heart. I do not believe that it is possible for one to experience the regenerative work of God's Spirit and live in utter ignorance of the blessed transformation, for God plainly declares that "the Spirit beareth witness with our spirit that we are the sons of God." There is a witness within which is better and more reliable than all the external evidences of church membership or excellences of character. The solemn charge to Nicodemus is one which comes to every soul: "Ye must be born again." It is not: Ye must be made over, ye must be renovated, for at the very best when you get through you have the same old man, for "that which is born of the flesh is flesh." But it is: "Ye must be born again." Ye must be regenerated. Ye must be made anew.

HAD Jesus been talking to the sinful woman who had come in repentance to anoint His head and feet with oil, or with Zaccheus, the despised and hated publican, it would not be strange that confusion should arise as to the need of and meaning of regeneration. It can be readily understood how the woman of the town and the extortionate tax-gatherer needed to be made new creatures, but when it was Nicodemus, that splendid, God-fearing and God-like man, who was being plainly and emphatically told that except he was created anew by the Spirit of God, no matter what his standing in the synagogue and the community, he could never see the Kingdom of God, it puts a different light upon the matter. And, oh, men and women of to-day, who are conscientiously striving to live according to the precepts of God's Word, who are giving of their time and their effort to make the lives of others brighter and better, oh, ye modern Nicodemuses, do not be blind to this great and solemn condition which bars your entrance to the Kingdom of God! God cares not for your standing among men if your standing with Him has not been made sure through the cleansing and saving power of Jesus' blood. God cannot accept your righteousness. If you are accepted at all it must be through the righteousness and merits of God's dear Son. Why cling to the delusion of a renovated human race gaining the shelter and safety of Heaven when Jesus says: "Verily, verily, except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God."

MUCH IN NEED OF NEW DEAL

Frauds and Scandals Enough to Condemn the Republican Administration.

No such general apathy in the ranks of the G. O. P. has been since it commenced business, the old Hanna machine is sulking and nothing but "boodle" and lots of it will bring back the old enthusiasm. The "workers" have been so accustomed to being well paid that they will not turn a hand until the cash is forthcoming. Now the trusts are responding liberally, there will soon be more ginger injected into the campaign, but even cash will not produce the harmony that Hanna inspired. Some workers loved Hanna, some feared him, but Cortelyou they don't know and do not care for.

The republican elephant is lumbering along, but lack of harmony among his new keepers is worrying the "critter" woefully. Meanwhile, the democrats are united and confident.

The postal frauds and the punishment of those who have been indicted appear to be lost sight of in other campaign issues. The Roosevelt administration evidently has postponed the trial of the cases so that the public will forget the scandal. The refusal of the republicans in congress to allow an investigation showed they feared the exposure of more frauds if the democratic demand for a congressional investigation was acceded to. That very fact should lead to the election of a democratic majority to the next congress, so that congress may do its duty as the grand inquest of the nation.

Beyond the postal frauds there are other scandals that need investigation. The interior department has land frauds that much surpass the postal frauds, as far as the amount involved is at stake, yet but little attempt has been made to punish the land robbers and the department refuses to make public what it has discovered.

A political party is seldom bold enough or honest enough to fully investigate the wrongdoing of its own partisans and the safety of republican institutions is best conserved by a change of administration to look into the way of doing things of its predecessor. The honest republican voter must wish to cleanse all the departments of the government of grafters, to reduce taxation, to stop extravagance and curb the trusts. He may even believe the trusts should be continued to sell cheaper abroad than here, rather than distrub the sacred tariff, but he must wish to stop the general trend toward universal grafting. How can he expect reform unless he elects reformers? These republicans from President down declare they will continue in the same rut they have been running in and are appealing to the voters to confirm them in power and take their word for it that everything is honest and prosperous. Even if an honest republican is elected to congress the machine at Washington will overawe and browbeat him and arrange to defeat his renomination if he shows a spark of independence. To effect reform there must be a new deal.

——President Roosevelt is going on a hunting trip with Buffalo Bill after the campaign is ended. Why wait until the campaign is ended? A wild west tour ought to be a splendid campaign document—with some people.—Utica Observer.

——The first national republican platform in 1856 denounced the "twin relic of barbarism—slavery and polygamy." Now the republican party has an alliance with slavery in the Sulus and is trying to carry Utah and Idaho by an alliance with polygamy.—N. Y. World.

——The desirability of voting for the democratic national, county, congressional and legislative nominees, as well as for the democratic state ticket, is daily impressing independents and disgusted republicans, as the best way to effect reforms in government, all along the line.—Albany Argus.

BICKERING REPUBLICANS.

Everywhere Pulling Hair and Leaders Busy Knifing Each Other.

Harmony is not gaining ground amongst the republican brethren, in fact the schisms are growing in intensity, and dissensions are cropping out daily. La Follette and the Stalwarts have gone beyond any hope of conciliation and the republican party of Wisconsin appears to be hopelessly divided. In Illinois many of the republican leaders are trying to cut the political throats of each other and the result of the election is by no means certain. In Delaware the Addicks and anti-Addicks factions are no nearer together than when the feud started. In West Virginia the republican party is divided on state issues and Senator Scott is afraid to enter the state, while Senator Elkins is not borrowing much trouble about the result, nor will it change the usual jollity of his countenance if President Roosevelt loses the state.

In New York, prominent republicans are opposing their candidate for governor, and as such a good republican authority as the Sun says he will be defeated, "it must be so." That the democrats will carry the state is admitted by close observers, the only question being the size of the majority. The Tammany leader puts it at 70,000.

Even the vice-presidential republican candidate has warmed up sufficiently to pout at Senator Dolliver, who received more applause at the meetings they jointly addressed than the iceberg did. They have parted company and hardly nod when they meet. In Massachusetts, reciprocity is splitting the republican party wide open and the democrats are making a bold and determined fight to carry the state. Senator Lodge is likely to be defeated for reelection and in retaliation he is trying to blast the prospects of some of the republican candidates for congress and the legislation.

In Indiana there is an under current of trouble between the republican factions which only the fear of losing the loaves and fishes keeps from coming to the surface. The republican workers of Indiana live on the money the party wrings from the trusts and corporations and the larger the amount furnished the greater the harmony. That is what keeps Chairman Cortelyou and Senator Aldrich so busy obtaining trust contributions.

CURRENT PRESS COMMENT.

——It did not take Judge Parker long to floor Teddy's childish interrogation points. Wonder, by the way, if Teddy still thinks there is no common law in the United States?—Atlanta Constitution.

——Teddy's knowledge of the constitution is like that of the boy who was asked if he had ever gone through algebra. He replied: "Yes, but it was in the night time, and I didn't see much of it!"—Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.

——There are upwards of 440 "big trusts." The administration prosecuted one through the supreme court and secured a verdict. Since then that trust has kept right on doing business, its managers have not been molested, and the people have been profited not at all. This is the sum total of the work done by the great trust busting administration whose head only a few years ago was talking about "shackling cunning."—The Commoner.

——Somehow, the syndicated political cartoons of Homer Davenport savor overmuch of the campaign document. There's a tag discernable betwixt the lines.—Boston Herald (Ind.).

——The announcement that Secretary Hay will remain in the cabinet if the election goes republican seems to be given out as a sort of party assurance that the government will be all right. Has it occurred to anybody to ask what may happen if Mr. Hay should take a notion to lay down the burdens of office? There are many vicissitudes in a human life.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

NOTE.—The following article has been widely published and is one of the most remarkable illustrations of the value of careful marshalling and analysis of facts in presenting a subject to the public.

LEVELERS

The Mission of Whiskey, Tobacco and Coffee.

The Creator made all things, we believe.

If so, He must have made these.

We know what He made food and water for, and air and sunshine, but why Whiskey, Tobacco and Coffee?

They are here sure enough and each performing its work.

There must be some great plan behind it all; the thoughtful man seeks to understand something of that plan and thereby to judge these articles for their true worth.

Let us not say "bad" or "good" without taking testimony.

There are times and conditions when it certainly seems to the casual observer that these stimulant narcotics are real blessings.

Right there is the ambush that conceals a "killing" enemy.

One can slip into the habit of either whiskey, tobacco or coffee easy enough, but to "untangle" is often a fearful struggle.

It seems plain that there are circumstances when the narcotic effect of these poisons is for the moment beneficial, but the fearful argument against them is that seldom ever does one find a steady user of either whiskey, coffee or tobacco free from disease of some kind.

Certainly powerful elements in their effect on the human race.

It is a matter of daily history testified to by literally millions of people that Whiskey, Tobacco and Coffee are smiling, promising, beguiling friends on the start, but always false as hell itself in the end. Once they get firm hold enough to show their strength; they insist upon governing and drive the victim steadily towards ill health in some form; if permitted to continue to rule, they will not let up until physical and mental ruin sets in.

A man under that spell (and "under the spell" is correct) of any one of these drugs frequently assures himself and his friends: "Why, I can leave off any time I want to. I did quit for a week just to show I could." It is a sure mark of the slave when one gets to that stage. He wiggled through a week fighting every day to break the spell, was finally whipped and began his slavery all over again.

The slave (Coffee slave as well as Tobacco and Whiskey) daily reviews his condition, sees perfectly plain the steady encroachments of disease, how the nerves get weaker day by day and demand the drug that seems to smile and offer relief for a few minutes and then leave the diseased condition plainer to view than ever and growing worse. Many times the Coffee slave realizes that he is between two fires. He feels bad if he leaves off and a little worse if he drinks and allows the effect to wear off.

So it goes on from day to day. Every night the struggling victim promises himself that he will break the habit and next day when he feels a little bad (as he is quite sure to) breaks, not the habit, but his own resolution. It is nearly always a tough fight, with disaster ahead sure if the habit wins.

There have been hundreds of thousands of people driven to their graves through disease brought on by coffee drinking alone, and it is quite certain that more human misery is caused by coffee and tobacco than by whiskey, for the two first are more widely used, and more hidden and insidious in the effect on nerves, heart and other vital organs, and are thus unsuspected until much of the dangerous work is done.

Now, Reader, what is your opinion as to the real use the Creator has for these things? Take a look at the question from this point of view.

There is a law of Nature and of Nature's God that things slowly evolve from lower planes to higher, a sturdy, steady and dignified advance toward more perfect things in both the Physical and Spiritual world. The ponderous tread of evolutionary development is fixed by the Infinite and will not be quickened out of natural law by any of man's methods.

Therefore we see many illustrations showing how nature checks too rapid advance. Illinois raises phenomenal crops of corn for two or three years. If she continued to do so every year her farmers would advance in wealth far beyond those of other sections or countries. So Nature interposes a bar every three or four years and brings on a "bad year."

Here we see the leveling influence at work.

A man is prosperous in his business for a number of years and grows rich. Then Nature sets the "leveling influence" at work on him. Some of his investments lose, he becomes luxurious and lazy. Perhaps it is whiskey, tobacco, coffee, women, gambling, or some other form. The intent and purpose is to level him. Keep him from evolving too far ahead of the masses.

A nation becomes prosperous and great like ancient Rome. If no leveling influence set in she would dominate the world perhaps for all time. But Dame Natnre sets her army of "levelers" at work. Luxury, over-eating and drinking, licentiousness, waste and extravagance, indulgences of all kinds, then comes the wreck. Sure, Sure, Sure.

The law of the unit is the law of the mass. Man goes through the same process. Weakness (in childhood), gradual growth of strength, energy, thrift, probity, prosperity, wealth, comfort, ease, relaxation, self-indulgence, luxury, idleness, waste, debauchery, disease, and the wreck follows. The "levelers" are in the bushes along the pathway of every successful man and woman and they bag the majority.

Only now and then can a man stand out against these "levelers" and hold his fortune, fame and health to the end.

So the Creator has use for Whiskey, Tobacco and Coffee to level down the successful ones and those who show signs of being successful, and keep them back in the race, so that the great "herd" (the masses) may not be left too far behind.

And yet we must admit that same all wise Creator has placed it in the power of man to stand upright, clothed in the armor of a clean cut steady mind and say unto himself, "I decline to exchange my birthright for a mess of potage."

"I will not deaden my senses, weaken my grip on affairs and keep myself cheap, common and behind in fortune and fame by drugging with whiskey, tobacco or coffee, life is too short. It is hard enough to win the good things, without any sort of handicap, so a man is certainly a 'fool trader' when he trades strength, health, money, and the good things that come with power, for the half-asleep condition of the 'drugger' with the certainty of sickness and disease ahead."

It is a matter each individual must decide for himself. He can be a leader and semi-god if he will, or he can go along through life a drugged clown, a cheap "hewer of wood or carrier of water."

Certain it is that while the Great Father of us all does not seem to "mind" if some of his children are foolish and stupid, he seems to select others (perhaps those he intends for some special work) and allows them to be threshed and castigated most fearfully by these "levelers."

If a man tries flirting with these levelers awhile, and gets a few slaps as a hint, he had better take the hint or a good solid blow will follow.

When a man tries to live upright, clean, thrifty, sober, and undrugged, manifesting as near as he knows what the Creator intends he should, happiness, health and peace seem to come to him. Does it pay?

This article was written to set people thinking, to rouse the "God within" for every highly organised man and woman has times when they feel a something calling from within for them to press to the front and "be about the Father's business," don't mistake it; the spark of the Infinite is there and it pays in every way, health, happiness, peace, and even worldly prosperity, to break off the habits and strip clean for the work cut out for us.

It has been the business of the writer to provide a practical and easy way for people to break away from the coffee habit and be assured of a return to health and all of the good things that brings, provided the abuse has not gone too far, and even then the cases where the body has been rebuilt on a basis of strength and health run into the thousands.

It is an easy and comfortable step to stop coffee instantly by having well-made Postum Food Coffee served rich and hot with good cream, for the color and flavor is there, but none of the caffeine or other nerve-destroying elements of ordinary coffee.

On the contrary the most powerful rebuilding elements furnished by Nature are in Postum and they quickly set about repairing the damage. Seldom is it more than 2 days after the change is made before the old stomach or bowel troubles or complaints of kidneys, heart, head or nerves show unmistakable evidence of getting better and ten days time changes things wonderfully.

Literally millions of brain-working Americans today use Postum, having found the value and common sense in the change.

C. W. POST.

TALKS WITHOUT TONGUE.

Robbed of Organ by Surgical Operation, New Jersey Man Articulates Better Than Before.

Tongueless, yet able to talk better than when in possession of his organ of speech—that is the remarkable condition of William Bunting, a wealthy bachelor of Elmer, N. J., who received treatment recently in Philadelphia.

Mr. Bunting came to the Habnemann hospital to have his throat treated for what he believed to be inflammation, caused by a severe cold. Upon investigation the doctors found the disease to be much more serious than the patient had suspected, and that in order to save his life his tongue must be removed. It was swollen to twice its normal size, so that Mr. Bunting was unable to articulate plainly.

After the operation the first words the patient spoke, "Is it all over?" were the plainest he had spoken since his trouble began, several years ago. Those in attendance were able to understand everything he said.

Wrong Department.

A prominent physician tells this story at the expense of the modern craze for specialization in the medical profession. A poor woman went to a dispensary to ask for aid for her little son, who had had one of his fingers smashed. At the first room where she applied she was told by a curt attendant that the boy could not be treated there.

"Wrong place," he explained, "this is the eye and ear department."

"Vere is der thumb and finger department?" inquired the woman, simply.—Tit-Bits.

Where the Sin Lay.

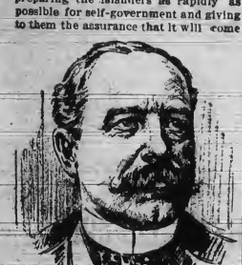
ATTACKS THE POLICY

PARKER ARRAIGNS REPUBLICANS ON PHILIPPINES.

Enormous Extravagance and Waste of Lives Charged to Present System of Governing Filipinos.

Democracy's candidate for the Presidency, Alton B. Parker, made his first formal speech at Esopus, N. Y., on Saturday, October 15. It was in reply to a delegation of democrats, and was limited to the Philippine question, upon which Mr. Parker spoke as follows:



"Col. Codman, Prof. Hardon, and Gentlemen: I greatly appreciate the compliment of your presence, and the assurance of the support of yourselves and those you represent. The importance of the issue to which you refer cannot be overestimated. It is attracting the attention of the thoughtful, patriotic men all over the country. Permit me to call your attention to the portion of the democratic platform relating to it.

"No government has the right to make one set of laws for those "at home" and another, a different set of laws, absolute in their character, for those "in the colonies." Wherever there may exist a people incapable of being governed under American laws, in consonance with the American constitution, the territory of that people ought not to be part of the American domain. We insist that we ought to do for the Filipinos what we have done already for the Cubans, and that it is our duty to make that promise now, and upon suitable guarantees of protection to citizens of our own and other countries resident there at the time of our withdrawal to set the Filipino people upon their feet, free and independent, to work out their own destiny.

"The declaration of independence, born in the brain of the father of democracy, says the same thing in effect, for it declares that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed."

Must Promise Independence.

"I have before said that we may not disregard the responsibility imposed by possession of the Philippines, and that responsibility will be best observed by preparing the islanders as rapidly as possible for self-government and giving to them the assurance that it will come as soon as they are reasonably prepared for it. This means independence for the Filipinos in the fullest sense of the word. When prepared, they may govern themselves, as the Cubans do, unassisted, unless asking help; undirected unless asking advice; untrammeled by our politics, unincumbered by our politicians, and uncontrolled by us.

"Secretary Taft has said:

"'A promise to give ultimate independence will be construed by the more violent element, disposed to agitation, to be a promise to grant independence in the near future and during the present generation. The success of the experiment we are making in the Philippines depends on making the Filipinos understand that we are there for their benefit, but that we expect to stay there indefinitely in working out the good we propose to do them."

Issues Are Defined.

"Here we have the issue clearly defined. The republican party stands for the subjugation of defenseless foreign peoples. Democracy stands for freedom.

"We relieved Spain of this thorn in her flesh, the Philippines, to plunge it into our own. We paid and are paying enormously for the privilege of performing the operation.

"Spain had been trying to conquer the islands since the early decades of the sixteenth century. She had never quite succeeded. That is not surprising. Every true American would despise a man who would not fight to the last gasp for the land of his fireside and the birthplace of his babes.

"Do not our illustrious ancestors in the revolution do so? For what does Mount Vernon revere the memory of Washington? Are not the Irish still under the English yoke? Will the sympathizer refuse his sympathy to the Filipino patriot defending his hearthstone against the Spanish spoiler and tyrant? Do we not honor every man who has sacrificed at freedom's holy altar?

"When the battleships of our great republic destroyed the Spanish war vessels, the Filipinos hoped that freedom for which they had struggled so long was finally approaching. Our history seemed to guarantee that our ambition would be to see them free, happy and prosperous.

"We perpetually point with pride to our love of liberty. The republican platform asserts that 50 years ago the republican party came into existence dedicated, among other purposes, to the great task of arresting the extension of human slavery. Arresting the extension of human slavery; that sounds well. But it speaks of the virtue of another generation. All the leaders of the republican party of that day have passed away. In their place have come different men. We need not point out that which principally differentiates them. It readily suggests itself. But we will refer to one of the results of that difference.

Enormous Expense.

"After our utter defeat of the Spaniards, the republican administration paid to the vain oppressor of the unconquered Filipino $20,000,000 for this uncertain option on this victim's lands, tenements and hereditaments. In the attempt to bolster the option we have wasted over $650,000,000 more of the people's money and sacrificed over 200,000 lives.

"And the waste of money and the sacrifice of lives are not yet ended, if the policy of the administration is to be continued indefinitely. That policy refuses to promise independence for the islanders, now, or at any time, or upon any condition. It does not even leave open the door of hope.

"The administration rails at the democratic proposal to promise them independence as soon as they are prepared for it. Indeed, it suggests to $0,000,000 of intelligent people that such a promise would stimulate the 'vicious' to be more vicious, instead of encouraging the improvement which would secure them what they most desire on earth—freedom.

Bondage for Filipinos.

"I but state the proposition. It argues itself. If our people agree that the administration is wrong in threatening by its silence that which it undoubtedly intends—namely: perpetual bondage for the Filipinos, the remedy is in their hands. We could have donated to Spain a number of millions and annexed Cuba with equal justice, and less suspicion of imbecility than we displayed in acquiring the Philippines.

"But we have done our duty to Cuba. We have left her to work out her own salvation—to take her place in the march of civilized nations. Shall we forbid the Filipinos to hope for independence? Shall we prevent their building up their own civilization, and try to force ours upon them? Civilization is a growth, not a disguise. Every race must work out its civilization in its own way.

"Our duty to the Filipinos demands a promise of independence. But if it did not, our own interest demands that we be relieved of the Filipinos just as soon as they are reasonably prepared for self-government. A colony holding nation to ever subject to expensive wars with other nations, and with its colonies. This necessitates strong garrisons and powerful navies and draws heavily upon the treasury. And history records no instance of a nation receiving from her colonies anything like an adequate return for the blood and treasure spent. England's national debt was doubled by the revolt of the 13 colonies it had cost her so much to secure.

Evils of Expansion.

"The American expansionist, following Euronean argument, alleges that annexation of the Philippines must promote progress, foster commerce and industry, and introduce the leaven of civilization into a backward and inferior race.

"The evidence of history is to the contrary. Certainly the claim will not be made that we can never get back the money that has been taken from the pockets of our tax payers and wasted on the Philippines. And it is alike certain that but two classes of our people can hope to be benefited by our holding the Philippines, the class which is always hunting for special government privileges, and the class which seeks to make of office holding a means of livelihood.

"The latter class in the Philippines comprise some officials of whom a student of conditions there recently said: 'Of the character of many in office too little cannot be said. At the best they have been inefficient, at the worst dishonest, corrupt and despotic. The islands seem to have succeeded in getting the very dregs of our people.'

Terrible Picture.

"He also said:

"'The situation in the Philippines to-day is so terrible that it passes the comprehension of people at home.

"'Agriculturally the country is for the time ruined. Land is going out of cultivation. The population is ill-fed, and, in some places, unable to get work. The country is overburdened with taxation; disease is prevalent; the farm animals dead; the towns in many places in ruins; whole districts in the hands of ladrones; the price of products poor and unremunerative.

"'Public opinion has no free expression; newspapers are bought up or are browbeaten into silence; men of influence who criticise the commission are ostracized; the plays produced in the theaters are censored; there is not an organ of expression of the popular voice that is not controlled. In private life men are subject to a complete, far-reaching, thorough system of espionage.

"'Detectives appear in the guise of servants, and the oath of a single one is enough to destroy a man's reputation, property, liberty, or even life itself.'

"This country should hasten to the relief of that situation.

Challenge to Republicans.

"I ask of the republican party whether, if the administration of the United States should be continued in its hands, it proposes to undertake to apply any remedy.

"Will it enact for the Philippines proper statutes, regulating their affairs with some view to their interest?

"Will it give their perishing shipping relief?

"Will it give them tariff regulations under which they can exist?

"We hold the Philippine islands. Have we taken proper steps to fulfill the obligations therein assumed? Are the Philippine islands to-day a self-supporting community?

"Are not their efforts toward acquiring such position embarrassed at every turn by the legislation we have forced upon them? Had we left them to their own devices they might have dealt with foreign nations. Had we brought them within the United States of America they might have dealt with us. To-day they can do neither.

"Where are the Philippine markets? Where the development of their natural resources? Why should not those islands, asserted by all and conceded by all to have great natural resources, be self-supporting? I warn the republican party that it is not an unheard of proposition that an oppressed—I use the term advisedly—an oppressed people should be restive.

America's Real Interest.

"The true questions which have concerned our relations with the Philippine islands from the moment of our taking them, and which remain today utterly untouched for any good to the islands themselves, and the questions which will regulate their future—in other words, the real basis on which the Philippine islands interest us politically—are: the Philippine tariff, Philippine taxation, and encouragement to their shipping interests. These matters regulated to the advantage of these islands, Philippine independence will appear on the immediate horizon. Continue as we are doing to oppress these people, and one of the most vexed questions that this nation has ever been called upon to deal with will confront us interminably.

Beware of Imperialism.

"But aside from the duty we owe the Philippines in preparation for the enjoyment of the blessed privileges we possess, we should guard carefully against the danger to ourselves of an imperialistic policy. History teaches that from republicanism to imperialism the movement is gradual and unperceived by the people. Its ominous progress when discovered leaves open but two courses—submission or resort to violence.

"That our people may never be compelled to choose between these fearful alternatives should be our prayer. But we should work as well as pray. And our work should be to guard the foundation on which our government rests. Its basis is that of declared ideas—ideas that are stronger than battleships and armies—ideas which for more than a century have stimulated our development, and which have given promise that our 'world mission' shall be not to seize the territory of distant peoples, and rule them with a scepter of iron, but to establish truth, honor, justice and peace among the nations.

"We must choose whether within our borders the basis of government shall continue to be this idealism or a materialism which is the sure precursor of dissolution, for no nation can endure upon a basis of materialism, however splendid. Prudence requires that choice be made in time. The time is now."

——It begins to look as if the republicans have decided to leave certain states to be stumped by the committee treasurer.—Baltimore Sun.

——Now, if the democrats were having a row in one of their "sure states," such as the republicans are having in Wisconsin, it might be considered the natural thing. Think of such a fuss, though, among the republicans, in a presidential year, in a state where some of their smartest politicians hold forth.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——One of the republican papers says that it is not necessary for the president to make any campaign speeches, because "the American people know where he stands on every issue that concerns their welfare." Where does he stand on the labor question and on the Philippine question? He studiously avoids these questions. And where does he stand on the second-term question?—The Commoner.

——If any man has up to this time had doubts as to Judge Parker's ability to make up his mind and keep it made up, he must be unconceived now. So must the cartoonists who have been asking who or what is behind the democratic candidate. By resisting the clamorous appeals that he go on the stump, Judge Parker has shown once more that there is no one behind him; that his own judgment and conscience control his actions.—N. Y. Post (Ind.).

——The prospect that Alton B. Parker will be the next president of the United States steadily, and visibly, improves. Let every democrat do his full duty, and New York will cast her 39 electoral votes for Parker and Davis; that much is clearly in sight.—Albany Argus.

——The decision of Judge Parker not to make a campaign speaking tour we believe to be a wise one. He will gain more by a conservative course, such as is natural to him, than by a strenuous campaign.—Utica Observer.

——During the present campaign republicans have shown considerable fondness for pointing to England as disgusted with free trade, and just about ready to embrace protection as her salvation. It seems clear enough that if there is any danger at all of England abandoning free trade, that danger comes not from the possibility that she will rush into protection with her eyes open, but from the possibility that she may be led into it through specious pleas which disguised the true nature of the steps she would be taking.—Baltimore News.

Splendid Courtesy.

A notable incident of the annual review of the Emperor William's guards was the splendid courtesy of the kaiser to the young grand duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, daughter of the duke of Cumberland. When the Eighth regiment of grenadiers was marching past, the kaiser galloped from where he was posted and invited the grand duchess to ride by his side as he led the regiment past the empress. On the review field he nominated her as joint chief with him of this famous regiment.—London Tit-Bits.

GOING TO STAY YOUNG.

Even Government Inspectors Couldn't Make Her Older Than She Looked.

A Brooklyn woman lately returned from Europe was describing to her husband who had remained at home her experiences with the customs inspectors who had taken her declaration in the cabin of the liner coming up the bay, relates the Brooklyn Eagle.

"When he asked me my age," she said, "I told him 30."

"But, my dear," exclaimed the husband, "you're over 30."

"I know it," she returned, "but do I look more?"

"No, you don't; that's a fact."

"Well," she concluded, triumphantly, convinced that mere man was squelched once more by the force of feminine logic, "until I look more than 30 I'm going to be 30, and I don't care for the old United States government and all its customs inspectors and declarations. They can't make me older than I look or want to be."

Six Doctors Failed.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 24 (Special).—After suffering from Kidney Disease for three years; after taking treatment from six different doctors without getting relief, Mr. J. O. Lauderman, of this place, found not only relief but a speedy and complete cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills. Speaking of his cure, Mr. Lauderman says:

"Yes, I suffered from Kidney Trouble for three years and tried six doctors to no good. Then I took just two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they not only cured my kidneys, but gave me better health in general. Of course I recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to others and I know a number now who are using them with good results."

Mr. Lauderman's case is not an exception. Thousands give similar experiences. For there never yet was a case of Kidney Trouble from Backache to Bright's Disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills could not cure. They are the only remedy that ever cured Bright's Disease.

A VOICE FROM THE PULPIT.

Rev. Jacob D. Van Doren, of 57 Sixth street, Fond Du Lac, Wis., Presbyterian clergyman, says: "I had attacks of kidney disorders which kept me in the house for days at a time, unable to do anything. What I suffered can hardly be told. Complications set in, the particulars of which I will be pleased to give in a personal interview to any one who requires information. This I can conscientiously say, Doan's Kidney Pills caused a general improvement in my health. They brought great relief by lessening the pain and correcting the action of the kidney secretions."

Miss Nettie Blackmore, Minneapolis, tells how any young woman may be permanently cured of monthly pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

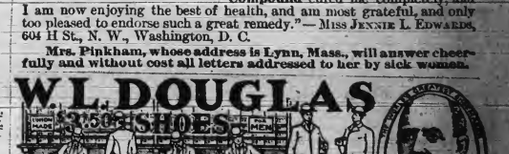
"YOUNG WOMEN:—I had frequent headaches of a severe nature, dark spots before my eyes, and at my menstrual periods I suffered untold agony. A member of the lodge advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I only scorned good advice and felt that my case was hopeless, but she kept at me until I bought a bottle and started taking it. I soon had the best reason in the world to change my opinion of the medicine, as each day my health improved, and finally I was entirely without pain at my menstruation periods. I am most grateful."—NETTIE BLACKMORE, 23 Central Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Painful Periods

are quickly and permanently overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The above letter is only one of hundreds of thousands which prove this statement to be a fact. Menstruation is a severe strain on a woman's vitality, —if it is painful something is wrong. Don't take narcotics to deaden the pain, but remove the cause—perhaps it is caused by irregularity or womb displacements, or the development of a tumor. Whatever it is, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is guaranteed to cure it.

If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. She can surely help you, for no person in America can speak from a wider experience in treating female ills. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

Details of Another Case.



"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and carelessness is the cause of most of the sufferings of women. I believe that if we properly understood the laws of health we would all be well, but if the sick women only knew the truth about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, they would be saved much suffering and would soon be cured.

"I used it for five months for a local difficulty which had troubled me for years, and for which I had spent hundreds of dollars in the vain endeavor to rectify. My life forces were being sapped, and I was daily losing my vitality.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me completely, and I am now enjoying the best of health, and am most grateful, and only too pleased to endorse such a great remedy."—Miss JENNIE L. EDWARDS, 604 H St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

The ... crop is smaller than last ..., but it is selling at more ... a bushel. Altogether it ...ears in that the value of the ... this year will be the largest ... the history of the country. It ...ould not be surprising if the ...otal value, for the first time in ...e history of the country, reach... the three-billion-dollar mark. ...As far as the farmers and planters of the country are concerned the most prosperous year in the history of the country is assured. A successful agricultural year has always meant a year of general prosperity for the entire country, and it is not too much to say that a year of general business activity is now assured for 1905.

The three principal crops are corn, wheat and cotton. The total value of these three crops in 1901 was $2,057,000,000. The total value in 1902 was $1,853,000,000, and in 1903 the total value was $1,848,000,000. The Government crop report indicates a corn crop in excess of 2,400,000,000 bushels. At the present market price this indicates a market value for the corn crop of about $1,100,000,000. Estimates of the size of the cotton crop naturally vary considerably, but the general expectation is that the crop will amount to at least 11,500,000 bales. At 10 cents a pound this gives a total value to the cotton crop of about $575,000,000. The Government report indicates a wheat crop of about 550,000,000 bushels, which at $1 a bushel would give a value to the crop of about $550,000,000. The total value of the three crops this year, therefore, promises to amount to no less than $2,225,000,000. In the light of these figures it is easy to understand the confidence existing in conservative circles regarding the future movement of prices.

Saves Two from Death.

"Our little daughter had an almost fatal attack of whooping cough and bronchitis," writes Mrs. W. K. Haviland, of Armonk, N. Our niece, who had Consumption in an advanced stage, also used this wonderful medicine and to-day she is perfectly well." Desperate throat and lung diseases yield to Dr. King's New Discovery as to no other medicine on earth. Infallible for Coughs and Colds. 50c and $1.00 bottles guaranteed by all Druggists. Trial bottles free.

Prof. W. A. Henry, whose reputation as an authority on cattle feeding cannot be doubted, suggests that American cattle can be fattened upon much less grain than our feeders generally give them. He says that many feeders in the Western and Middle States give to their fattening stock from twenty to 30 pounds, and sometimes thirty-five pounds a day of corn meal, while in England and Scotland they seldom use more than six or eight pounds a day. They give with this from fifty to one hundred pounds of sliced roots, usually rutabagas, four to five pounds of straw and from five to ten pounds of hay. They claim to send as good meat to market as we can furnish them, which we may not doubt, but we are not sure that we can grow the turnips as the corn which we feed here, and whether beef animals fed upon turnips would stand transportation as well, either alive or as dressed meat, as those fattened on corn. Prof. Henry thinks ensilage should take the place in our stock feeding that roots do in England, and we do not doubt that a judicious use of ensilage or some other succulent food with the corn meal might induce better digestion so that animals might be as well fattened with a less amount of grain.

WALTON.

James Gaines and family visited at R. B. Huey's, Sunday.

Many contracts for new houses have been let here in the last week.

Born, October 25th, to Elmer Atwood and wife, a fine 10 pound boy.

W. R. Rouse entertained his brother and family from Cynthiana, last week.

Mesdames Kate Rice and Mary Fields and daughter, left Monday for the St. Louis Fair.

One night last week one of our young men came near being killed by a big automobile that was being driven through town at a 40 mile rate without lights.

About 3:20 one morning, last week, Everett Stephens heard someone trying to break into his house. He got to the door just in time to see two men running down the street.

David Mancel and Miss Lula Graham, were quietly married Thursday evening at the home of the bride by the Christian Minister, Rev. J. D. Buck. Both are very popular and have the best wishes of many friends.

Henry Bradley, formerly of this place, was killed by a live wire in the southern part of the state, Sunday. He was an electrician for the L. & N. Railway, and a few years ago he married Miss Elva Bruce, daughter of the late Hick Bruce. The family has many friends here who extend them sympathy.

Elmer Griffith and Miss Sallie Finnell were driving home from a party, Saturday night, and when on a steep hill, a back strap broke and let the buggy down, and the horse took fright and ran off, throwing them both out of the buggy, hurting them badly. The horse was not found until the next day, and had the shafts and front wheels attached to it.

Last Thursday T. J. Booth and Mrs. Alice Hoffman sprang a surprise on their friends. They slipped off to the city and were quietly married at the residence of O. S. Rouse by Rev. Hoffman of this place. Mr. Booth is very prominent in business circles, and Mrs. Booth is one of our charming and most accomplished ladies. Their many friends extend hearty congratulations.

Saturday was a good day for Walton Graded School. For the last two weeks the foot ball team had not been saying much, but was at hard practice with the determination to score a victory to offset the defeat administered by Covington High School on the 15th. The opportunity came Saturday, when the team met the Erlanger boys on the home grounds. The weather was ideal for foot ball, and a large and enthusiastic crowd was present to encourage the game. Erlanger won the toss and chose to defend the east goal received the kick-off and advanced the ball several yards. Then by quick and snappy work, that disconcerted her opponents, the ball was advanced to Erlanger's 45 yard line. Then Erlanger got the ball but soon lost it in a fumble, when Robinson landed on it and went down the field for a touch-down with the Erlanger boys at his heels. Jones kicked an easy goal—Walton 6, Erlanger 0. Walton kicked off to Erlanger and soon held the visitors for downs, when Walton got the ball she pounded the line of her opponents and made steady gains until within a yard of the goal. Then Erlanger rallied, but at the proper time a hole in her line was made and Brown was pushed over for a second touch-down. Jones kicked goal—Walton 12, Erlanger 0. With one minute to play Erlanger picked off to Walton. The first half closed with the ball in Walton's possession. In the second half the visitors rallied and kept Walton from scoring. The star play of the half was made by Byland, when he tackled one of the Erlanger players and took him back 15 yards. The game closed with much enthusiastic yelling on the side lines. The visitors played good ball but they were a trifle slow and found it difficult to form and break up interference at the proper time.

The line up for the home team was as follows:

Umpire and Referee—Dickey.

Time-keeper—Dr. Cleek.

Linesmen—Robinson and Dahling.

Time of halves 20 and 15 minutes.

The team will play about two more games announcements of which will be made later. The management is pleased with the present condition of the team and with the support now being given it by the public. Those who object to football are with us, but, as usual, those who do the most talking against it are those who never saw a game and know nothing about its merits and only surmise as to its demerits. The game is all right and it is gradually gaining the patronage and favor it deserves.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is Pleasant to Take.

The finest quality of granulated loaf sugar is used in the manufacture of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and the roots used in its preparation give it a flavor similar to Maple syrup, making it quite pleasant to take. Mr. W. L. Roderick, of Poolesville, Md., in speaking of this remedy, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with my children for several years and can truthfully say it is the best preparation of the kind I know of. The children like to take it and it has no injurous after effect. For sale by all Druggists.

To the traveling public:—I learn it has been circulated around that I do not put up horses after night. I wish to state that I will continue to take all comers, day or night.

C. W. ROBINSON, Constance.

W. H. Moore had a big woodsawing a few days since for the benefit of his sick son. A large kettle of soup was served at the noon hour.

Walter Jones, of Hamilton, is fattening his hogs under canvass. No doubt but what they will thrive remarkably well, and produce an excellent quality of meat.

Grim-visage, death again appeared in our midst taking away the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Houston. Although we miss our little darling, indeed the life and joy of our household has departed, we can not wish her back; for we know that she is enjoying perfect happiness and pure bliss, "a shining angel" in the realms of our blessed Savior, who said: "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Numerous friends, where the little one passed its last days on earth, performed many duties to allay its sufferings, but all in vain, and now extend their deepest sympathy to the grief-stricken and sorrow laden father and mother, who only know the sorrow they must bear. In comforting them, we would have them look to their heavenly father, who alone can console them in their hour of saddest bereavement and humbly say, "Thy will be done."

A SINCERE FRIEND.

COMMISSARY.

Oct. 29.—A man seldom forgets a favor he does another.

Mrs. Alice Fleek, of near Erlanger, was visiting relatives near here the past week.

Mrs. Rose and Miss Julia Louden were guests of Mrs. Lou Kelly, last Saturday night.

William Blayback, mother and Miss Blanche Garland, were shopping in Aurora, last Tuesday.

Louis Merrick and wife near here spent Saturday night and Sunday with Noah West, of Clore's Ridge.

Mrs. Missouri Watson, of Erlanger, who has been visiting here and Bellevue, returned home last Monday.

If every person would be half as good as he expects his neighbor to be, what a heaven this world would be.

Henry Eanes, who has been quite sick, has so far improved, that he will be able to go to the election and vote.

James White, of Flickertown, passed here last Saturday on his way to Gunpowder to visit his mother, who is quite poorly.

Claud Popham made us a short call as he returned from his visit to his brother Bob. Claud is an old neighbor and valued friend of ours.

We hope every patron of the mail route will get mail the first day of its opening or have out going mail. We intend to have one going mail.

Frank Cantwell and wife, of the vicinity of Salem church, Ind., visited Geo. Ranes and wife from Saturday until Monday.

The rain on Friday of last week was a very wet rain and accompanied by considerable wind, more wind at Rabbit Hash than here and more here than at Burlington.

Frank Jeffries went home with Mrs. Phoebe Nettles when she responded to the summons of her husband, who had taken suddenly sick. Mr. Jeffries reported him much better when he returned.

Those foggy mornings are causing our boys to be behind time, but Capts. Akins and Maurers make up for time in accommodations.

Bro. Edgar Riley will preach for the Christian congregation here, Sunday, Nov. 6th, morning and evening. Sunday school just before evening services.

The attendance at the Christian church Sunday school last Sunday was 43. We are pleased to see such interest manifested by the school. The children seem to want to achieve as high a point in the school as the officers and teachers.

Mrs. John Deck has purchased a house and lot in Cincinnati and will move there this week. She rented her house to Mrs. Nancy Adams and she will move the postoffice there. We are sorry to see Mrs. Deck and her family leave, as they are among our best citizens.

We do not only invite but insist that all the Democrats in this precinct come to the polls on Nov. 8th and stamp under the rooster in the national election, and let the rooster do the scratching, and when you go to the primary booth vote for your man, for this is a family affair, and not only this precinct, but other precincts do likewise, and I am sure old Boone will come up a crowing.

In the death of Mrs. Corda Ryle, wife of Wm Ryle, just below McVille on Thursday, Oct. 20th, at 6 o'clock a. m., the husband loses a worthy and faithful companion; her two children are deprived of the care, love and indulgence of a devoted mother; her parents, brother and sisters feel the loss of such a kind and loving child and sister. She had never united with any church, but her walks were of a christian, if we are allowed to judge by ones walk. She was always found looking after the comforts and interest of her husband and children. Her remains were interred in the new cemetery, Friday at 2 p. m. The husband and children have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

Miss Maud Watson, of Rising Sun, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Ben Stephens, last week.

What the Rabbit Hash team did for the Bellevue boys in the ball game at Bellevue, Saturday, was a plenty.

Rabbit Hash residents and surrounding neighbors have built about two miles of gravel road this fall. There is talk among the men of a contract to haul gravel 5 days each year for five years, contract to be signed by at least ten men.

GUNPOWDER.

Another wire will be put on the Farmers' Telephone line between Florence and Union and several others will put in boxes on the line.

The meeting at Hopeful closed last Sunday, and in addition to those already reported, J. H. Tanner and Jesse Eddins united with the church, making six in all.

Mrs. W. H. Garnett requests me to say that she is very thankful to her neighbors and friends for the kind assistance given her during the illness of her husband and since his death.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Thomson entertained the following at dinner, Sunday: Henry Tanner and wife, Mesdames Lizzie Bartell and Cora Blankenbeker, Charles Tanner and family, Mrs. Ira Rivers and daughter, Miss Virgie Snyder, and the writer and family. A most bountiful dinner was served which consisted of all of the delicacies of the season and was enjoyed by all present.

FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

New Way of Using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. Arthur Chapman writing from Durban, Natal, South Africa, says: "As a proof that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a cure suitable for old and young, I pen you the following: A neighbor of mine had a child just over two months old. It had a very bad cough and the parents did not know what to give it. I suggested that if they would get a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and put some upon the dummy teat the baby was sucking it would no doubt cure the child. This they did and brought about a quick relief and cured the baby." This remedy is for sale by all Druggists.

THE INCIDENT CLOSED

Dispute Between England and Russia Settled.

The Czar Apologizes and Will Pay Indemnity For His Baltic Fleet Firing on British Fishing Ships in the North Sea.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 28.—The naval general staff publishes the following dispatch from Vice Adm. Rojestvensky:

"The North Sea incident was caused by two torpedo boats advancing to attack without lights under cover of darkness, against the vessel leading the detachment. When the detachment turned on its searchlights and opened fire, the presence of several small steamboats resembling steam fishing boats was discovered. The detachment endeavored to spare these and ceased firing as soon as the torpedo boats were out of sight.

"The English press is indignant because a torpedo boat left by the detachment on the spot until morning did not aid the victims. Now there was not a single torpedo boat near the detachment and none was left behind; consequently the vessel remaining near the small steamboats was that torpedo boat which was not sunk, but only damaged. The detachment did not aid the little steamboats because we suspected them of complicity on account of their obstinately cutting into the order a position of our vessels. Several of them showed no lights, and others only very late."

London, Oct. 29.—All danger of war between Russia and Great Britain has been averted and the settlement of the only points in dispute regarding the attack by the Russian second Pacific squadron on British trawlers October 21 has been referred to international commission under The Hague convention.

Premier Balfour, speaking at a meeting of the National Union Conservative clubs at Southampton Friday night, broke that silence which had been so long preserved and had brought the people of the United Kingdom to a condition of almost desperate irritation and given rise to misconceptions which Mr. Balfour Friday night himself exposed. "The Russian ambassador," said Mr. Balfour, "has authorized a statement to the following effect: The Russian government, on hearing of the North Sea incident, at once expressed its profound regret and also promised most liberal compensation. The government has ordered the detention at Vigo of that part of the fleet which was concerned in the incident, in order that the naval authorities might ascertain what officers and any material witnesses would not proceed on the voyage to the far east; that inquiry would be instituted into the facts by an international commission as provided by The Hague convention. That Mr. Balfour interpolated, had nothing to do with arbitration; it was the constitution of an international commission in order to find out the facts and any person found guilty would be tried and punished adequately. The Russian government undertook that precautions would be taken to guard against recurrence of such incidents. Special instructions on this subject would be issued."

Preliminary to this court, said Mr. Balfour, there would be the coroner's inquest at Hull over the dead fishermen, a board of trade inquiry and an inquiry by Russian officials at Vigo. The board of trade inquiry would be specially constituted by the British government to include representative men.

The Russian embassy had been asked to send a representative and give assistance. Apology and compensation having already been offered, nothing new remains but to determine which account is correct, Rojestvensky's or the trawlers. Mr. Balfour plainly said that Thursday evening Russia and Great Britain seemed to be on the brink of war and yet gave the frankest praise to the attitude preserved throughout by the emperor and Russian government. While the premier was unable to praise the pacific attitude of the government too highly, he bitterly assailed Rojestvensky's report, declaring that it was an insult to Great Britain as a neutral nation and ridiculed its probability.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 29.—It develops that quite independently Russia and Great Britain offered each other the same solution of the North Sea incident. Thursday night instructions were telegraphed to Ambassador Benkendorff in London to propose an international inquiry to the British government and Friday morning Ambassador Hardinge, who had received almost similar instructions during the night, submitted a proposal for a commission to Foreign Minister Lamsdorff.

Paris, Oct. 29.—Newspapers of all political shades welcome the settlement of the Anglo-Russian difficulty as the fortunate avoidance of a rupture that might have assumed the gravest international proportions.

EXPLOSION IN A MINE.

Between 30 and 60 Miners' Lives Were Lost in Colorado.

Trinidad, Col., Oct. 29.—A terrific explosion occurred at Mine No. 3 of the Rocky Mountain Fuel and Iron Co. at Terolo, 40 miles due west of Trinidad. Friday afternoon and the number of dead is variously placed between 30 and 60 men. The exact number of dead may never be known, as the mine is burning and in all likelihood the bodies will be cremated.

United States Government Inspector F. J. Foreman was at Terolo when the explosion occurred. He returned here Friday night and gives the following account of the affair:

"I was standing not more than 300 yards from the mouth of the tunnel when the explosion occurred. The explosion was preceded by a low rumbling sound, resembling an earthquake which made the earth tremble and startled the whole camp.

"I looked toward the mine and out of the mouth of the tunnel and two air shafts came a great volume of smoke and dust, which continued for nearly a minute. Out of the two air shafts, each of which are seven feet in diameter, timbers that were fully from two to three feet in diameter were shot into the air and broken into splinters.

"Rocks were thrown over the camp for a distance of a quarter of a mile, in fact, it rained rocks, broken timbers and all kinds of debris for fully a minute and many people were injured by being struck with these missiles.

"Immediately after the explosion, which for all the world was like a volcanic eruption, caused the wildest excitement. Women, men and children rushed to the mouth of the tunnel and women whose husbands were in the mine had to be brought away by miners to keep them from being killed by deadly fumes coming from the mouth of the tunnel.

"The mine in which the accident occurred works 80 men, and it is believed that at least 60 men were in the mine at the time. News of the explosion brought assistance from the adjacent camps and hundreds of men are trying to get into the mine. Deadly fumes overcome the rescuers frequently, but their places are immediately taken by others ready to risk their lives. It is not thought possible that any of one in the mine can escape death if they are not dead already."

The mine was opened only a year ago and extended 2,000 feet into the hill. The explosion is supposed to have been caused by dust. But one body has been recovered, that of T. Duran, a driver, who was just entering the tunnel when the explosion occurred. He was torn and burned almost beyond recognition. All mines within a radius of 20 miles have been shut down and the miners are on the way to assist in reaching the bodies.

Four Prisoners Escaped From the Michigan Penitentiary.

Jackson, Mich., Oct. 29.—Four convicts escaped from the state prison. James Wilson was serving a seven-year sentence for burglary; Edward McPherson, ten years for burglary; John Cabo, ten years for assault and robbery, and Thomas McGlynn, four years for larceny. The four prisoners with ten others were at work on a new cell block. Taking advantage of the noise made by pneumatic hammers used in riveting the steel ceiling, they climbed into an attic and then worked their way through the roof of the wall. By means of a 40 foot rope that they had picked up they climbed from the wall to the railroad track. A guard fired at the fugitives at long range but failed to hit any of them and they disappeared to the northward.

EX-GOV. NASH DEAD.

He Expired From Heart Disease In a Bath Room.

His Death Leaves Foraker and Campbell the Only Surviving Ex-Governors of Ohio, Hoadly, Foster and Bushnell Dying Recently.

Columbus, O., Oct. 29.—Ex-Gov. Geo. Kilbon Nash was, shortly before noon, Friday, discovered dead in his bath room. Before he started to take his bath, he did not seem to be unusually weak and there was no intimation of the sudden end. As is generally known, he has several times been declared near death, but had regained strength and displayed vitality which surprised his doctors. The end was not only sudden, but peaceful, his heart seeming to have suddenly stopped short, painless death ensuing.

The governor was in the bath room at the residence of his son-in-law, Worthington E. Babcock. He was alone at the time and the sound of a heavy fall called several members of the household to the bath room, where he was found on the floor unconscious and to all appearances dead. His physician was sent for but life was extinct when he arrived.

The ex-governor had been in precarious health since the launching of the Ohio, having suffered his first attack in Colorado on his return from the coast. After retiring from the executive office he resumed the practice of law, but could do little active work.

In the last four months he had been rarely at his law office. A week ago Thursday he went to the State university to attend a meeting of the board of trustees, of which he was a member. That was the last active work he did. While both the patient and his family knew that death might come at any time, there was no special reason to expect it at this time. He seemed no worse than usual during the forenoon.

Gov. Herrick Friday night issued a proclamation in which he pays a high tribute to the life, character and public services of former Gov. Nash and directs that as a mark of respect the flag on the state capitol be floated at half-mast until after the obsequies.

Cincinnati, Oct. 29.—The death of Nash leaves Foraker and Campbell as the only surviving ex-governors of Ohio, Hoadly, Foster and Bushnell having died recently. The defeated candidates during the past two decades in the order named still survive, John W. Bookwalter, Thomas E. Powell, Lawrence T. Neal, Horace L. Chapman, John R. McLean, James Kilbourne and Tom L. Johnson.

A FILIPINO STUDENT.

He Was Not Allowed to Register in New Haven, Ct.

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 29.—The registrars of voters here Friday twice refused to admit to suffrage J. E. Lagdameo, a Filipino student at the Yale forestry school. When asked for the reason for their refusal, the registrars said that as Lagdameo was not native born it was necessary for him to become naturalized before he could vote. Lagdameo claimed that as the United States owns the Philippines he was a citizen of this country. Assistant Attorney General Robb, in Washington, was called up by telephone and made the reply:

"The supreme court of the United States has held that a Filipino is not a citizen of the United States. Therefore, if the law of Connecticut requires a voter to be a citizen, he must be naturalized."

KING CHRISTIAN.

The North Sea Affair Caused Him the Deepest Anxiety.

Copenhagen, Oct. 31.—It is learned that the North Sea affair caused the deepest anxiety to King Christian of Denmark, who declared that should an Anglo-Russian war result it would be the cause of his death. The dowager empress of Russia promised her father, the king, to use her greatest ef-

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Oct. 29.—A lone woman held up three men near the town of Auburn Friday. The men, whose names were Woodbury, Vanderwede and De Young, were land buyers from Illinois. As they were approaching a secluded portion of the road a masked woman on horseback rushed from a thicket and commanded them, at the point of a rifle, to descend from the wagon and give up their valuables. She carefully searched the pockets of each man, but found no valuables.

"You are not the party I was looking for," she said, as she left the frightened men and hurried into the woods. There is no clew to the identity of the woman.

GAINS THIRTY POUNDS

MRS. WEBER TELLS HOW SHE WAS HELPED WHEN DOCTORS FAILED.

She Let Her Trouble Become Chronic Because She Hesitated to Consult Her Physician—Particulars of a Remarkable Case.

The natural reluctance which every woman feels to consult a physician regarding troubles peculiar to her sex caused Mrs. C. Weber, of No. 7035 South Front street, Columbus, Ohio, to let her illness run on until it became chronic, and even the excellent doctor whom she employed could give her no relief that was permanent. She gives the following details of an interesting case:

"I felt the trouble a long time before I went to our doctor, perhaps a year or more. When I did consult him he told me I had female trouble. I felt sharp pains through my stomach and could not walk across the room without suffering agonies which I cannot describe. My head ached so that it fairly thumped and at times it seemed that I would go crazy. My stomach became so weak that it would retain only the lightest food. Week after week I took the doctor's medicine, but I continued to feel worse and worse. On several occasions I was confined to my bed for a week at a time. My weight decreased to 103 pounds and I seemed a confirmed invalid.

"One day I read of a case similar to mine that had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and, although I did not have much confidence, I began taking the pills, having already discontinued my doctor's treatment. While I was taking the second box I began to feel a little better and the improvement continued until I was cured. In a few months I had recovered my health and strength and weighed 182 pounds. I owe everything to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

No discovery of modern times has proved such a blessing to women as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Acting directly on the blood and nerves, invigorating the body, regulating the functions, they restore the strength and health in the exhausted patient when every effort of the physician proves unavailing. These pills are sold in boxes at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had from all druggists, or direct from Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

For Rheumatic Hands.

Knitting, as a helpful exercise for hands that are stiffened by rheumatism, is the prescription of one physician, who thinks it limbers up the hands of sufferers wonderfully. Not only does this old-time art give the hands a healthy little exercise, but it furnishes a sedative form of activity to nerves that are shaky from insomnia or debility.—Chicago Daily News.

BY PROXY.

What the Baby Needed.

"I suffered from nervousness and headache until one day about a year ago it suddenly occurred to me what a great coffee drinker I was and I thought may be this might have something to do with my trouble, so I shifted to tea for awhile but was not better, if anything worse.

"At that time I had a baby four months old that we had to feed on the bottle, until an old lady friend told me to try Postum Food Coffee. Three months ago I commenced using Postum, leaving off the tea and coffee, and not only have my headaches and nervous troubles entirely disappeared but since then I have been giving plenty of nurse for my baby and have a large, healthy child now.

"I have no desire to drink anything but Postum and know it has benefited my children, and I hope all who have children will try Postum and find out for themselves what a really wonderful food drink it is." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Both tea and coffee contain quantities of a poisonous drug called Caffeine that directly affects the heart, kidneys, stomach and nerves. Postum is made from cereals only, scientifically blended to get the coffee flavor. Ten days trial of Postum in place of tea or coffee will show a health secret worth more than a gold mine. There's a reason.

FIRE IN PORT ARTHUR.

Japanese Shells Ignited a Powder Magazine.

A Successful Attack on the Russian Outposts at Wumingtaun and Two Unsuccessful Counter Attacks Made By Muscovites.

Che Foo, Oct. 31.—The third general attack on Port Arthur began October 24, according to unimpeachable authority, and on October 26 Japanese shells set fire to the only smokeless powder magazine in Port Arthur. Portions of the town caught fire, the conflagration continuing the whole day. On October 26 the Japanese captured the Russian trenches on the slope of Ripiung mountain, also a fortified position protecting that fortress. The Japanese consider the progress of the siege to be highly satisfactory.

Tokio, Oct. 31.—A report from the Manchurian army headquarters received Sunday records a successful night attack against the Russian outposts at Wumingtaun and two unsuccessful counter attacks made by the Russians. The report is as follows:

"On the night of October 28 a small force of the enemy attacked Waitao mountain, but was immediately repulsed. October 29 at 3 o'clock in the morning a detachment of infantry was dispatched from the center army against Wumingtsun. The enemy was surprised and the houses occupied by the enemy were set on fire. Wumingtaun is located midway between the outposts of both armies. Using the place as a base, the enemy made frequent night attacks against our outposts. On the night of October 28 a force of the enemy of unknown strength attacked an eminence near Santaokangtzu, but was immediately repulsed."

Mukden, Oct. 31.—The attack by the Japanese on the Buddhist Temple hill on October 27 led to sharp fighting. The Japanese artillery played on the position from early in the morning rendering the trenches untenable, shells and shrapnel sweeping everything and demolishing all the shelters. Two machine guns with the battalion defending the hill were smashed and disabled, but the defenders carried off the remains of the guns when they were forced to retire. The Japanase infantry attack under cover of the bombardment was made in close order. There was desperate hand-to-hand fighting in the trenches followed by a counter attack with the bayonet. The Japanese finally gained the hill, but were unable to hold it in the face of the deadly Russian artillery fire.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 31.—The military situation has not yet developed anything of great importance, though the fight at the Buddhist Temple hill on October 27 appears to have been decidedly a heavy engagement. It probably indicates that final moves on both sides are now occurring preparatory to another long, serious battle.

THE JAPANESE MINISTER.

An Operation For Appendicitis Was Performed On Him.

New York, Oct. 31.—An operation for appendicitis was performed on Japanese Minister Kogoro Takahira in a hotel in this city Sunday. The case is said to be a serious one, and attaches of the Japanese legation at Washington have been summoned to the minister's bedside.

Mr. Takhira arrived here from Washington Friday night and immediately after being assigned to a room at the hotel complained of illness and asked that a physician be sent for. The physician found the minister suffering much pain, but remedies were administered which eased his sufferings and allowed him to pass the remainder of the night comfortably. Saturday, however, the minister could retain no food, and this with other symptoms caused the physician to believe that the case was one of appendicitis, and Sunday, when it was positively diagnosed as such, an immediate operation was decided upon.

The operation on Minister Takahira was performed between 3 and 4 o'clock by Dr. William T. Bull, who issued the following bulletin at 7:45 o'clock Sunday night:

"The patient was taken ill Saturday morning with appendicitis. Symptoms of peritonitis rapidly supervened and an operation was decided upon by Drs. Bull, Delafield and Shrady. The operation was done early in the afternoon, since which time his condition has been satisfactory, although he can not be pronounced out of danger for two or three days. At present the outlook is favorable."

Dr. Bull announced that bulletins would be issued every three hours for several days.

PUPILS IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The Annual Report Shows That They Number 16,009,361.

Washington, Oct. 31.—The report of the commissioner of education for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904, made public Sunday by the secretary of the interior, shows that 16,009,361 pupils, or 20 per cent. of the entire population of the country, attended the public schools during that year. As compared with the previous six years, this percentage shows a slight decrease in the number of pupils as compared with the total population. The total cost of the public school system is given as $251,457,625. This is an increase of $16,000,000 over the previous year. It amounts to $3.15 per capita of total population, and $22.75 per capita per pupil.

Since 1870, the proportion of male teachers has decreased from 39 per cent. of the entire number to 26 per cent. of the entire number the past year. The average compensation for male teachers last year was $49.98 and $40.51 for females. This is a slight increase over the previous year.

The enrollment in the private schools for the year is given as 1,093,876. By the addition of pupils in elementary schools, academies, institutions for higher education, evening schools, business schools, private kindergartens, Indian schools, state schools and schools for defective orphans, the grand total of 18,187,918 pupils is reported. The report estimates that the average schooling given to each inhabitant in 1870 was 672 days and in 1903, 1,034 days.

The report shows that last year 1,578,632 colored children were enrolled in the common schools for that race in the former 16 slave states and the District of Colmbia. The enrollment in 1877, the first year statistics were taken of the colored schools, was 571,506. Since 1876, it is estimated that $130,000,000 has been expended in the education of the colored children in the former slave states, and nearly six hundred million dollars for the same purpose for the white children of the same section.

Ninety-six reform schools are recorded, with 31,468 inmates, 21,603 of whom are leading useful trades.

ELEVATOR COLLAPSED.

Loss on Grain and the Building Estimated at $350,000.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 31.—From some cause which can not be definitely explained the Ontario elevator collapsed Sunday and sank into the waters of the Evans slip. The elevator contained 370,000 bushels of harley, a large portion of which lies at the bottom of the slip. The loss on the grain and the building is estimated at $350,000. Charles Bartholomy, 62 years old, the elevator superintendent, was seriously injured.

The Ontario was built 15 years ago and had been in active operation all of this season. Various reasons have been given as to the cause of the collapse, but as nearly as could be learned, it had its origin in the weakening of the foundation about the dock. It is known that the land about the elevator contains large deposits of quicksand and it is considered probable that the accident was due to a settling of the earth on the dock side, caused by the action of the water on a bed of this quicksand. The slip has been deepened during the last two years and this also may have weakened the dock foundations. It was reported that an explosion preceded the collapse, but this could not confirmed. Superintendent Bartholomy was taken out of the wreck unconscious.

Hawley and Donohoe, who had never met before, became engaged in a warm argument on politics and Mordow stepped between them and ordered them to desist. For answer Hawley reached into his coat pocket and without withdrawing his hand from the pocket fired two shots with the result given above. Hawley escaped and is supposed to be on the way to his home in Addyston, Hamilton county, O.

CHALLENGE HONESTY

REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN METHODS SCORED BY PARKER.

Favors Bought by Trusts That Plan to Keep Roosevelt in Power —Buying Up Voters.

In a vigorous speech at Esopus on Monday, October 24, Alton B. Parker, democratic candidate for the presidency, applied the verbal lash to the trusts and republican campaign methods in the following words:

"Appreciating the responsibility put upon me by the democratic party, and the duty which acceptance imposed upon me, I have carefully considered the utterance I am about to make and am well persuaded that bad a situation calling for its consideration been at the time presented, it would have met the full approval of the convention, as it will now meet the approval of every thoughtful, right-minded citizen of the United States, without regard to party creed or party prejudice.

"Many years have passed since my active participation in politics. In the meantime a startling change has taken place in the method of conducting campaigns, a change not for the better, but for the worse, a change that has introduced debasing and corrupt methods, which threaten the integrity of our government, leaving it perhaps a republic in form, but not a republic in substance; no longer a government of the people, by the people, for the people, but a government whose officers are practically chosen by a handful of corporate managers, who levy upon the assets of the stockholders whom they represent such sums of money as they deem requisite to place the conduct of the government in such hands as they consider best for their private interests.

Need of Money.

"I make no complaint, nor should complaint be made of any individual who contributes toward the many legitimate expenses of a great campaign. The capitalist, as an individual, has as much right to contribute to such purposes and in proportion to his means, as has his less wealthy fellow citizen. Whatever he may do, based on a patriotic desire to help elect the candidate of that party which it seems to him will serve the best interests of the country should be encouraged.

"Equally is it true that all right-thinking men favor the encouragement of thrift; the accumulation of property and its due and just protection, and they are equally opposed either to the saying or the doing of anything that will array one class against another. All classes are mutually dependent upon and mutually helpful to each other, and no word or act of mine shall cause a gulf to be opened between them.

"But there is a wide difference between an individual employing his wealth in the manner authorized by law and individuals or corporations who operate in defiance of law. The first is independent of, the latter dependent upon, government favoritism.

Campaigns of Past.

"It is but a little while since the body of the people at large provided the legitimate expenses of a campaign. The farmer and lawyer, doctor and mechanic, day laborer and banker each contributed something toward the erection of banners, the circulation of literature and the expenses of public meetings, each contributor was a better citizen for it. It stimulated his patriotism, and the contributions were devoted to the legitimate advancement of the cause, not made for the deliberate corruption of masses of electors.

"Gradually, and, alas! effectively, but surely not permanently, has all this been changed. Some of the enterprises which have unduly thrived through favoritism, and which have been permitted by statute to indirectly levy tribute on the people, have in the course of time become so rich and strong that they can and do contribute vast sums when it is made clear that it will advantage them, and they contribute upon the promise, direct or implied, that they shall be permitted to continue to tax the people for their own benefit. Upon such promises contributions have been not infrequently made in such large measure as to induce and procure colonization, repeating and bribery in doubtful states.

"This has built up a class of voters known to local leaders as 'floaters,' a class so numerous that party canvassers allot to them in their canvass books a separate column headed with that name.

"This condition is recognized by party workers, local, state and national. They are no longer shocked by it. It has become so prevalent that they are becoming hardened to it. They sometimes wonder where it is to end, but under the stress of a campaign they postpone consideration until the next election.

"I am persuaded the time to begin the fight against those who would control the results of election contests for their private corporate interests as distinguished from the public interest should begin now, and whatever the result of the election may be it should be continued until the evil is checked.

"The excessively protected interests, which formerly poured out their treasure in order to continue existing and procure the passage of new laws permitting its further accumulation, have been joined by the combinations popularly called trusts. Their plan is to perpetuate the present administration. Such of the combination of trusts as do not profit by the aid of the tariff secure their profits by the exercise of monopolies. Hence their officers are opposed to the enforcement of law as against them.

"When such forces unite to furnish the money which they are promised will control the election their purpose is as clear as noonday; it is to buy election, to purchase four years more of profit by tariff or four years more of extortion from the public by means of monopoly.

Plain Corruption.

"Political combinations by corporations and trusts mean corruption. They cannot be honest. Merely business interests are moved by merely business considerations. A corporation will subscribe to a political party only because the corporation expects that party, through its control of public officers, executive or legislative, to do something for the benefit of the corporation or to refrain from doing something to its injury.

"No other motive can be imagined in the nature of things no other motive can exist.

"The relations established mean the expectation, if not agreement, actual or implied, that governmental action is to be influenced by and for corporation interests. No sophistry can give any other aspect to the transaction in the minds of reasonable men.

"Let the defenders of the practice, if it has defenders, answer these questions: Why do corporations and trusts subscribe to political campaigns? What would a trust think of a party which, after accepting from the trust a campaign contribution of $500,000, should permit the party representatives in office to take action inimical to the trusts? Would the public interests be safe in the hands of a party, the greater part of whose campaign funds had been contributed by corporations and trusts? If the public welfare and the interests of subscribing corporation or trust should conflict, which would likely be protected?

Favoritism.

"The scheme of our government opposes favoritism, but in its administration there has been much of it. Indeed, it has been growing with such rapidity in recent years that those few who have enjoyed favors contributed either directly by statute or indirectly by the nonprosecution of violations of law represent, control and are possessed of many hundreds of millions of dollars.

"These interests have decided to attempt to continue the present administration in power. Their representatives scolded about the president for some months, and thus contributed their part toward the effort which was assiduously made to satisfy the country that the trusts were opposed to their present administration.

"Whether there were real difficulties between these great powers and the administration, difficulties which have since been settled to the satisfaction of all parties concerned, or whether there were no difficulties to be compromised and adjusted, their action being but a play to deceive the voters, the fact remains that the trusts are not now opposed to the continuance of the present administration.

"On the contrary, it is common knowledge that they have determined to furnish such a sum of money to the republican national committee as it is hoped will secure the 'floaters' in the doubtful states for the republican ticket.

"Such an attempt constitutes both a menace and a challenge to every patriotic and law-abiding person in this country; a challenge which ought to be accepted. The question ought to be settled now whether the 'floaters' and illegal combinations can together control an election in this country.

"Such a contest means on one side vast sums of money and every man with an itching palm. It ought to array every honest, independent and patriotic citizen on the other side."

RHODE ISLAND FOR SALE.

Trust Magnates Using Their Money to Gather In the Pocket Borough.

Senator Aldrich's late visit to Wall street seems to have borne fruit, for the republican committee of Rhode Island have hired all the theaters and public halls in the state that were not engaged, until after election, so that the democrats could hold no meetings. The opera house at Providence had already been engaged by the democrats for one night, but the balance of the oratory will have to be in tents or the open air. It will be remembered that a son of Senator Aldrich married one of Rockefeller's daughters, and Aldrich is a candidate for reelection. How much the Rhode island campaign will cost the Standard Oil trust and the other allied combines, to hold their pocket borough of Rhode Island, will probably never be known, and there is a fair chance that, in spite of boodle and cheating, it will go democratic, and honest republican voters of Rhode Island must resent this debauchery of their state by the trusts.

Senator Elkins is actively at work in West Virginia endeavoring to carry that state against the Presidential ticket, on which the name of his father-in-law, Hon. Henry G. Davis, appears. Nevertheless Mr. Elkins and Mr. Davis are on the best of terms and very good-humoredly engage in this political opposition. Elkins will do all in his power to defeat his wife's father for Vice President, but that will not disturb the personal regard each has for the other. This is an illustration of good-humored and sensible politics, which might well be emulated by many people who think that in order to be earnest and affective in campaign work they must be rude and abusive. All politicians should first be gentlemanly and considerate. It is not necessary that people should be enemies or discourteous toward each other because they are affliated with opposing parties. It is a small man who believes or thinks he believes that a man in opposing him, is less sincere and honest than those in his own party.

Just as there are valuable strains in horses, cattle and other stock, so there are varieties of queen bees which are worth many hundred times their weight in gold. The most valuable strain is the Italian, and many Italian farmers demand and receive without question prices ranging from $50 to $200 for a single queen bee of a certain kind. Such bees are sent all over the world. The owner of a bee farm near Ottawa, Canada, goes to Europe annually and brings back with him bees of an aggregate value of thousands of pounds. He is enabled through the agency of an Italian firm to effect an insurance upon the most valuable of his queens.

Kentucky ought to give Parker and Davis 35,000 majority next Tuesday.

Grant-Duncan.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Grant gave a very enjoyable entertainment on the evening of the 27th of October in honor of the marriage of their son, Herbert and Miss Nellie Duncan. The marriage ceremony was performed the previous afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Duncan, Rev. Early officiating. The guests at the wedding were limited to the immediate families of the contracting parties and a select few of their friends. The bride and groom received a number of handsome presents. It was our privilege and pleasure to be one of twenty of the friends of the young couple, who were the honored guests of Mr. and Mrs. Grant at a 7 o'clock dinner in honor of the bridal party. The bride looked as handsome as a queen in a lovely gown of white silk, quite simply arranged with beautiful lace and silk embroidery. The groom in black coat and pants and white vest and tie was as handsome and happy as a lord. We look with pleasure upon the future of this young couple, in view of the congeniality of their natural characteristics. Nellie possesses the sweetest and loveliest disposition we have ever met with. We have known her from a child and have never witnessed the faintest display of an unruffled temper. She is tne soul of honor and the personification of frankness. She lives in the sunshine and is never troubled with the blues. Such a wife should make any man happy, and especially should Herbert, who possesses the same natural characteristics, be happy in the possession, and proud of the choice he has made in selecting a life companion. We have heard of matches being planed in heaven. If this be true, the wisdom of the great creator and planer is impressively manifested in bringing together these two young lives. G.

We desire to thank our neighbors and friends for their many kind acts and their expressions of sympathy and love in this hour of trial and bereavement.

Hon. Leonard W. Lassing passed away at his home near Union on the night of October 24th, having been in declining health for several years. Mr. Lassing was one of this county's oldest and most prominent citizens, many years of his life having been given to the service of his people by the faithful discharge of the most intricate public duties which he met in a fearless and prompt manner. He was a man of extensive information obtained by deep research, his most appreciated companions being the best literary and scientific writers of the present and the past.

Leonard W. Lassing was the son of the late Morris T. and Martha Lassing, and was born Dec. 26th, 1827. At an early age he commenced clerking in his father's store, which he quit at the age of 18 years to begin farming, of which he made a success from the start, owning at his death several hundred acres of the finest land in Boone county. Mr. Lassing represented Boone county in the General Assembly in the years 1882 3, and was elected without opposition to the Constitutional Convention held in 1897, and of which he was one of the most conspicuous members.

In 1858 Mr. Lassing and Miss Jennie M. Kennedy wedded. To them was born one child, Miss Therese, who survives them, Mrs. Lassing having departed this life in 1896.

Mr. Lassing was a member for many years of the Union Masonic Lodge, which took charge of the funeral, after a short religious exercise at the residence last Friday at 10 a. m., the remains being followed by a large concourse of friends and relatives to Highland cemetery, where they were consigned to the vault to await final interment by the side of those of his wife.

Prof. and Mrs. Hughes gave their pupils a halloween party, Monday night, and they enjoyed it very much.

Teachers Meetings.

The District Teachers' meeting was held with Woolper School October 29th. The meeting was called to order by the County Superintendent, the Vice-President not being present. The meeting was opened by song and prayer. Paris Akin was elected secretary. The program was then taken up, the first subject The Relation of History and Geography in School Work, was thoroughly discussed by Mr. Rumsey, the Superintendent and William Gaines. Uses of Participles and Infinitives and how to Distinguish them from a Pure Verb, were discussed by Paris Akin and the Superintendent.

After a recess at this point in the proceedings the meeting was called to order by singing. Primary Reading was discussed by Miss Leola McWethy, Elbert Ryle, Frank Rumsey, Wm. Gaines and the Superintendent. Mental Arithmetic was considered by Miss Katie Craig, Elbert Ryle, Wm. Gaines and the superintendent. How to Raise the Standard of Education was discussed by the Superintendent.

The meeting was not attended by a large crowd, and only seven teachers were present. The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That we extend our thanks to the people of Woolper District for the hospitality shown us in this meeting.

Our next meeting will be at Pleasant Ridge, Nov. 19th.

PARIS B. AKIN, Secretary.

The Teachers' Meeting at Verona was called to order by Supt. Snyder Oct. 22, at 10:30 a. m. After singing "Leaning on the Everlasting Arms" and scripture reading by Prof. Dickey we were led in prayer by Supt. Snyder. A secretary was then elected and program rendered.

"Methods in Oral Work, Story-Telling and Stories by the Children," was fully and ably discussed by Miss Mary Rouse, emphasizing the good, both mentally and morally for the child and the benefit in training his memory and imagination.

"Need and Value of Organization among Teachers."—Miss Dixie Humlong. Since "United we stand and divided we fall," she advocates uniting together; and the steps necessary for complete organization are district, county, congressional district and state meetings. Her words were well spoken. Miss Eunice Johnson treated the subject further by asking that we make teaching a profession instead of an occupation. Since doctors, lawyers dentists, etc., are not required to pass an examination every few years, but enter upon the duties of their profession, after one examination, free from any other restriction along that line; while with the teacher it is different. This was a fine talk. The topic was discussed also by Prof. Dickey, who advocates teachers organizing for the purpose of improving both teacher and pupil.

AFTERNOON.

The meeting was called to order by singing Hymn No. 215.

"The Educational Value of School Entertainment."—Miss Mae Cram. This subject was treated grandly as to the advantages of a school entertainment to the pupils and community, and the influence of the teacher in the community. Some judge a teacher by his ability to get up entertainments. Omer Waller also gave an excellent talk upon this topic. Besides agreeing with his predecessor he enthusiastically spoke of the value of committing to memory and the increased interest of the parents.

The audiece was delightad with a guitar duet by Misses Eunice and Virginia Johnson.

"How to Raise the Standard of Education in Boone County" was fully and freely discussed by our faithful Superintendent He suggests a change in our present trustee system and enthusiasm in organization; but reforms require time, patience and perseverance. He gave statistics showing the origin and increase in the school fund.

A resolution of thanks was tendered by the body for the kind hospitality and sumptuous dinner given the teachers by the citizens of Verona.

Each talk was pointed and instructive and we felt that it was good to be there.

We adjourned after singing "God be With You," to meet at Woolper October 29th.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Permit me to say through your paper in answer to the petition of quite a number of my Boone County friends, published in your last issue, that it is impossible for me to make the race in the primary so near a close, for the nomination for County Judge. I have two reasons that force me to decline to make the race: First, the time is too short for an effective canvass; second, I have a close relation, J. H. Rogers, in the race for County Clerk, which of itself would keep me from offering for another county office. While I appreciate the very flattering promise of the support of so many good men, I think they will all, at this time, agree with me, that it is better that I decline the call.

Thanking them and others for past favors shown me,

I am yours truly,

BOSES DEMOCRACY.

...R PRESIDENT CLEVELAND ...AKES HIMSELF HEARD.

...re of Nation Depends Upon Success of the Party—Principles and Nominees Warmly Indorsed.

Attracted by the presence of Grover Cleveland, thousands of people, on the night of Friday, October 21, struggled to gain entrance to Carnegie hall, New York city, where the former president of the United States made his first and only speech of the campaign. Mr. Cleveland was greeted with a great burst of enthusiasm. The occasion was a big democratic rally under the auspices of the Business Men's Parker and Davis association. In his speech Mr. Cleveland said:

Harmonious Democracy.

"There are at least two reasons why I am gratified by the opportunity to participate in this occasion. It permits me to breathe the pleasant atmosphere of resolute and harmonious democracy and, in addition, it allows me to meet face to face in such an atmosphere those who largely represent the business interests of the city of New York, and who besides are patriotic enough to recognise the obligation they owe to their country as well as to their business.

"It would be strange if I did not recall at this moment with deep sensibility the days in the past and previous political campaigns, when I knew what it was to have the generous support of the business men of New York, and if I did not remember in these surroundings the sustaining power of their approval and confidence amid the perplexing labors of high official duty. You will not, I know, accuse me of self-conceit if I assume that I am with those to-night who demand of me no explanation or apology for the manner in which I have served either my party or the business interests of my country and who will neither discredit nor distrust me when I avow my intense anxiety for the success in the pending political campaign of the principles and nominees of the reunited democracy.

Nation's Welfare.

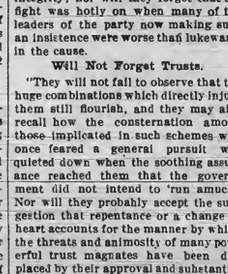
"My attachment to the party which won my early allegiance has been intensified with passing years, because I have found in the principles from which genuine democracy has derived its life and vigor safe guidance and constant inspiration when, as a public servant, I owed to my fellow countrymen patriotic effort and unsparing devotion to the people's trust. But the principles and best traits of the democratic party reach their highest importance and value at such a time as this, when our people are tempted by glittering delusions, and when they are offered the kingdoms of the world if they will but throw themselves down and worship the god of mammon. I believe we have fallen upon days when, more than ever, the enforcement of democratic doctrine and the acceptation of democratic conservatism and steadiness are needed if our national greatness and the well-being of our people are to be put beyond jeopardy.

Campaign Incidents.

"There are, however, in my mind to-night some aspects and incidents of this campaign which seem to me so startling and so humiliating that they should arrest the attention of every thoughtful citizen and arouse the anxious solicitude of every patriotic American. In a country like ours, where parties contest for the direction of the government, we must, of course, expect party advocacy and honorable personal ambitions for political honors, but who, among those indulging in the farthest retrospect of political campaigns, can recall one in which the advantages of the present party control have been so palpably and unblushingly used for its perpetuation or in which the functions belonging to the entire American people have been more insolently forced to do partisan service?

"When before has it been so distinctly claimed that all the virtues, all the patriotism and all the governing ability of our citizenship are found among the members of one political party, and when before have those of our citizens not among the chosen been so boldly considered as aliens in their own land, who should be cast into outer political darkness as unworthy to be intrusted with the power and responsibility of a government established by the people and for the people?

"When in all our history has a party so presumptuously as now claimed to be the donors of the gifts of God or when has one so persistently plumed itself upon the creation of all the prosperity that has fallen to our country's lot?



Republican Arrogance.

"Such arrogance is not new to the party which now seeks at the hands of the people a renewal of our government's control, but it has so grown by what it has fed upon as now shamelessly to assume that the time has arrived when popular heedlessness or dullness will permit boasting and reckless assertion to pass for truth and reason. If this assumption is justified there can be no doubt that the sober and responsible political thought and watchfulness, upon which the true intent and purpose of our government depends, are in grievous peril. If, on the other hand, this assumption is viciously unwarranted it is an insult to American manliness which should arouse prompt and effective resentment.

"Never before have our people been so belabored with party deliverances which in every line and every word, from platform declarations to the last appeal of party advocacy, are so saturated with conceited and tiresome claims of infallibility, and with supercilious disdain of all political efforts except such as are attempted under the banner of republicanism. Shall this pass current at a time when, at the parting of the ways in our nation's development, we are especially called to patriotic thoughtfulness and careful contemplation of party designs and to a vigilant watch against dangers that beset us? My faith in my countrymen will not permit me to believe this or to doubt that they will insist upon examining for themselves the accounts of party stewardship.

Prosperity to Favorites.

"They know that their country's prosperity, like the rains of heaven which freshen and beautify the ornamental lawn and at the same time make productive the farm and garden, should be distributed among all the people in every station of life, and they will challenge the claim of a party which boasts of a prosperity it has wrought which gives to its pampered favorites added opportunities to increase their riches, while the poor and those who toil wait like Lazarus to be fed from the crumbs which fall from the rich man's table.

"The party will be given just credit which, early or late, has endeavored to safeguard the soundness of the nation's currency, but the people will reject as savoring of presumption the insistence that only those belonging to one party organization can claim to be the protectors and defenders of our financial integrity; nor will they forget that the fight was hotly on when many of the leaders of the party now making such an insistence were worse than lukewarm in the cause.

Will Not Forget Trusts.

"They will not fail to observe that the huge combinations which directly injure them still flourish, and they may also recall how the consternation among those implicated in such schemes who once feared a general pursuit was quieted down when the soothing assurance reached them that the government did not intend to 'run amuck.' Nor will they probably accept the suggestion that repentance or a change of heart accounts for the manner by which the threats and animosity of many powerful trust magnates have been displaced by their approval and substantial support of the party which seeks to convince the people of its trust-destroying proclivities.

"This item of the account will not be passed over without a reference to the platform statement that 'protection, which guards and develops our industries, is a cardinal policy of the republican party,' nor without noting the declaration of the candidate standing on this platform, that the protective tariff policy ought now to be considered as 'definitely established.' The question will be asked: Which are the American industries that at this time are in need of the shelter of such a tariff as that now in force, and is there never to be a time when American enterprise, American ingenuity and American opportunity will free our industries from their stage of infancy and permit American inspiration and American self-reliance to cast away the leading strings of a 'definitely established' protective policy? The people know that this policy has given rise to reckless greed and to a worship of gain menacing patriotic sentiment and our love for high standards of national greatness, and they know that at best it lays burdens on the consumers of our land.

Foreign Consumers Profit.

"With these tendencies and these burdens in mind they will ask the party professing its anxiety to restrain or destroy harmful combinations why a protective tariff policy should be considered definitely established which, in addition to its other sins, contributes to a situation that permits a combination or monopoly to sell abroad articles of our manufacture at lower prices than are exacted from our own citizens at home. They will see the sheer wrongfulness of this condition so clearly and they will so firmly believe that in this way they are made to bear tariff burdens in order that they may be discriminated against in favor of foreign consumers, that they will not be satisfied with the assurance that the tariff has nothing to do with trusts. They will consign such an explanation to the limbo of negation, to take its place with the outworn deception that the foreign exporter pays our tariff taxes, and with two other sadly weak pretenses—one that the tariff should be reformed only by its friends, and the other that the party which believes that a protective tariff policy ought to be considered as definitely established, loves reciprocity in trade.

The Philippine Boast.

"When the platform boast is made that 'in the Philippines we have suppressed insurrection, established order and given to life and prosperity a security never known there before,' the confession will be extorted that the insurrection suppressed was no more than the crushing out of resistance to the army of the United States while engaged in the subjugation of a people thousands of miles from our shores, whom an incident of a war undertaken by us in aid of those struggling for liberty and independence in another quarter had put within our power, and the people will ask under what sanction was this subjugation entered upon by a nation pledged to the doctrine of the governed, and they will deny that imperialism and our forcible rule of foreign people have any place among the purposes of our national life.

"When credit is claimed for securing a route for a long-desired interoceanic waterway it will not be in a carping spirit that the people will look at the incidents accompanying this achievement. They do not undervalue the object gained, but they keenly appreciate the importance and value of our national honor, our national good name and, above all, national morality.

"Not even the great worth of the thing accomplished will close the eyes of the thoughtful Americans to the fact that in reaching the results we have exhibited such international ruthlessness and such selfish international immorality as have lastingly debilitated our reputation for good faith and established a precedent which in time to come may be invoked to justify the most startling and reprehensible abandonment of the high ideals which have made us an example of the best civilization—a people happy as we are intelligently free, strong as we are scrupulously just and everywhere trusted and honored as we undeviatingly follow in the way of uprightness and rectitude.

"I have ventured to suggest the misleading purpose of the vainglorious claims made by a party organization which seeks a continuance of political control and to intimate the humiliating estimate of our people's intelligence and patriotic vigilance which the exploitation of those claims involves. It is surely not narrow partisanship which prompts me to entreat my countrymen to hold fast and sure their independence of thought and their courage in judgment, nor do I speak in a tone of partisanship when I beg them to remember that the true greatness and glory of our nation cannot safely rest upon wealth which finds its way to the few at the expense of the many, nor upon such material success as contaminates the purity or blunts the potency of patriotism, nor upon expansion in disregard of our national mission and intent, nor upon achievements that put in question our national morality.

Congratulates Democracy.

"Above all, greater than all, guarding and protecting all and fostering every thing that American patriotism should covet are the service and devotion to country of a sincere people who believe that, if their government is preserved in its simplicity and defended against perversion, its blessings of happiness, contentment and true prosperity will in bounteous measure visit every corner of our land.

"I do speak, however, as a democrat attached to democratic principles and anxious for the ascendency of my party when I congratulate the democracy of our country upon party platform and upon the manner in which its doctrines are personified by our candidates. We pledge to our countrymen through our platform rest, genuine prosperity, safety and a return to the way marked out by the constitution, and we promise through our candidates that if it is the people's will our platform shall be carried out and that under our governmental management democratic conservatism and care shall rule the national councils to the exclusion of rash impulse and spectacular demonstration."

We're Just Plain Democrats.

There is no such a thing as a Parker democrat, a Hearst democrat, a Bryan democrat, or any other kind of a democrat, only a plain unvarnished, dyed-in-the-wool Jackson democrat. That is good enough for everyone who believes that the constitution is law and that official snubs of great democratic war generals is a shame and disgrace to any great country.—Decatur (Ind.) Democrat.

ARE HELPING REPUBLICANS.

Populists Are Evidently Working for the Success of the Roosevelt Ticket.

Where all the money comes from to pay the expenses of the populist campaign is no longer a mystery. Tom Watson has just finished a trip through New Jersey on a special train, like a millionaire, and his speeches all have the aim of defeating the democratic candidates. He makes his appeal specially to Jeffersonian democrats and does not invite republicans to vote for him. All this is pretty fair evidence that he is working for the success of the republican ticket. The populist national committee in the two previous national campaigns did not have enough cash subscribed to pay for printing literature and yet there were ten populists then to one now. Where does the thousands of dollars come from that the populist committee and candidate are now spending, if not directly, or indirectly, from the republican campaign fund which the trusts are furnishing.

In the state of New York the populists did not cast enough votes at the last election to entitle the ticket to a place on the official ballot. The law requires that petitions must be signed by 50 voters in each county in the state to entitle a ticket to be printed on the official ballot. The populists could not accomplish that, for in many counties there are not 50 populist voters. "Representatives of the republican state committee accommodatingly took the matter in hand and a contract was made with four men," says the New York World, "to take charge of the canvassing." In some counties the signatures obtained were all republican voters.

Although the nomination papers are a palpable fraud, the democrats will content themselves with publishing the hogus lists in the newspapers of the respective counties, so as to show up the fraud. In Albany the republican local politicians engaged and paid for the hall in which a populist meeting was held.

The populist ticket this year is thus shown to be a republican side show and honest voters should steer clear of it.

WHAT EDITORS ARE SAYING.

—What Parker has not said and is not doing worries republicans more than democrats, as anyone can see.—Brooklyn Eagle.

—The public is giving a great deal of attention to that part of Judge Parker's letter of acceptance which related to government expenditures. This is always a warm question if it is properly agitated. Heavy expenditures make high taxation. The more costly the government establishment the more friction is there on the tariff and other economic questions.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

—"Mr. Cortelyou," says the Washington Post, "has not added elocution to his other accomplishments." And yet when Mr. Cortelyou requests the corporations to shell out, he speaks with a clearness of enunciation, a force of emphasis and a completeness of effect that could be equalled by only one other man in the country—the man who cut out Cortelyou's work for him.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—The early jingles of the nursery tell us that one Jack Spratt could eat no fat and that his wife could eat no lean. Mrs. Spratt, it appears from the record, was partial to fat, and she left none of it on the platter. Mr. Cortelyou is evidently a lineal descendant of the Spratts, taking his tastes from the mother's side of the family. He is out for the fat, and he is frying it from the big corporations.—Memphis News.

—As the president's regal yacht is ordered out of commission in October, there is promise that the empire will cease to be in November.—St. Louis Republic.

—The administration would be justified in reprimanding Gen. Funston for advocating an advance in the pay of soldiers just before election.—Detroit Free Press.

—The outlook for large democratic gains in the congressional elections is very bright, and indications are strong that the independent vote of the country will support Judge Parker.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

THE CANDIDACY OF PARKER

Democratic Leader Is True to His Party and an Incorruptible Judge.

When a man is the candidate for the highest office in the gift of the American people, he is thrown under the X-rays of public scrutiny. All his goings and comings are investigated, his private life is sifted and his past and present utterances are weghed, to try and find out his inmost thoughts and opinions. It is a great triumph for the democracy that its candidates for president and vice-president have passed through this firey ordeal unscathed and are shown to be of the highest type of manhood and as individuals are worthy the support of all honest men who desire decent government.

Judge Parker is a true democrat. He was the political and personal friend of the great Tilden, of the superb Hancock and the other imposing figures of democratic history. His position as chief justice of the court of appeals of New York has brought before him for decision many important cases involving the relations of capital and labor, and the good judgment and absolute fairness he has displayed has endeared him to the public and the bar alike.

An able and incorruptible judge, what higher praise could be given, what greater recommendation to the voters of the United States to give him their suffrages. A great constitutional lawyer, he believes in constitutional government and would execute the law of the land without fear or favor. Conservative from nature and training, there would be no usurping the legislative or judicial functions of the government while he was the executive. He would call to his aid the ablest democrats that are available for his cabinet officers and the United States would enter upon a term of peaceful prosperity, as far as human sagacity can aid the efforts of a united and energetic people.

ROOSEVELT IS DANGEROUS

The Republican President Often Has to Recede from Positions Hastily Taken.

When the New York Sun declared that President Roosevelt was a more dangerous man than Bryan, it spoke the truth, though it is now supporting this dangerous man for president. All the abuse heaped upon Mr. Bryan was not on account of his radicalism, but because the monopolists feared the people who were back of Mr. Bryan. The fact is that Mr. Bryan is not nearly as radical as Roosevelt, and has always been more consistent. Mr. Roosevelt has one great asset that Mr. Bryan does not possess—he is a much more consummate politician. Roosevelt can change his political ideas in the twinkling of an eye, if it suits his purpose. Bryan is more set in his convictions, and is one of the most difficult men to convince that he is wrong when he has made up his mind he is right. There is no Davy Crockett about Roosevelt. He does not dally over a question first, to be sure he is right before going ahead, but just rips out a reply without time to fully form his words. He, therefore, has often to recede from positions he takes, and sometimes makes a worse mess of a matter than if he had stayed by his first determination. So the New York Sun was eminently right when it imparted the information that President Roosevelt was a dangerous man, and the Sun, being such a staunch republican paper, made the remark the more noticeable.

—In the face of its unexampled and reckless extravagance the republican party gives no promise of reform in the management of public affairs. Instead it has in contemplation several money-spending schemes, such as the ship subsidy project, which, if carried out, will cause an enormous increase in the government's annual outlay. When in power, on the other hand, the democratic party has always reduced expenditures and thereby lessened taxes. The St. Louis platform pledges reductions to the lowest point consistent with efficient service.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Jap Women Who Keep Silence.

Japan has its communities of silent female recluses. There is a convent at a place called Yunakawa about seven miles from Hakodate. A matron of some 50 years presides, and her instructions are implicitly obeyed. The women are all young, ranging from 16 to 27, and some of them are described as very beautiful. The building stands in a farm of some two acres, but the women do not engage in any agricultural work. They spend most of their time indoors, and they observe a strict rule of silence.

God's Foundation and the Superstructure

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Knox.)

Chicago, Sunday, October 30, 1904.

TEXT:—"Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are His. And let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity."—2 Tim. 2:19.

THE "nevertheless" of our text points us back to the preceding verses in which the apostasy of certain members of the church, particularly Hymenaeus and Philetus, is referred to and their false doctrines denounced and brought into sharp contrast with the enduring truth of God. In the conceit of their own human wisdom they have been striving to lay other foundations, forgetful of God's Word, that "other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." And men have not ceased in their efforts to lay foundations of their own construction. Hymenaeus and Philetus have left a numerous progeny in the world, and to-day everywhere we find false teachers seeking to "overthrow the faith of some," and driving others who have never come into the light of Gospel truth farther and farther into the fatal darkness of error. And with so much religious confusion on every hand, so many isms and cults, so many teachers, and so many conflicting ideas and theories and doctrines, it is so restful and refreshing to know that "the foundation of God standeth sure." There are false teachers, there are false doctrines, but "nevertheless" the foundation which God has laid can never be shaken by the effort of man. The Babelites could not build to Heaven, and neither can the modern Hymenaeuses or Philetuses, who concerning the truth have erred, dig up God's foundation and put in its place one of their own construction. It is reassuring to the soul which seeks in sincerity to know the truth to hear God say: "The foundation of God standeth sure."

IT IS the sure foundation which the soul of man seeks to rest upon; it is the foundation which it must have. This is the foundation which God has provided. Let us inspect this foundation and then consider the superstructure. First of all, we must recognize the Builder. Have you not noticed where building operations are going on the signs of the contractors conspicuously placed so that all who pass may know who is doing the work? When the foundation is being laid the sign is placed upon the ground at the edge of the excavation, or in some other convenient place, and as the building rises upon the foundation the signs appear upon its sides, telling who is doing the construction work and who the plumber is and the steam fitter, and so forth. And the name is often the guarantee of work of the most thorough and complete character. The foundation which God has laid bears conspicuously His seal and mark, and man may know for a certainty that it is His workmanship. The fact that God is the Builder suggests two things, reliability and permanency. God is a builder in whom mankind may put implicit faith. He has not left incomplete in any respect the foundation. It is exactly what man needs to rest securely upon. While other foundations are defective, the Foundation of foundations is perfect. And it is enduring. It "standeth sure." It hath permanency which partakes of the nature of God. The Christ who is this foundation was set apart as the Saviour of men before the foundations of the world were laid, and He is to abide throughout the ages as the permanent, enduring rock on which His people may rest. "How long will your foundation last?" was asked of a builder. "As long as it is needed to hold up the building," was the reply. And that is exactly the way God laid His foundation. It was to last just as long as it was to be needed to hold up the building, and that is for eternity.

BUT let us draw near to this foundation and examine it for its peculiar markings. It was the ancient custom to place upon the cornerstone or some visible stone which rested upon and was part of the foundation a seal or monogram, just as the custom continues to-day. It is this simile which we have in our text. The foundation of God has this seal, and the very presence of the seal is proof of the permanency of the foundation, for the seal sets forth that the Lord knoweth them that are His, and who are depending upon the foundation for sure support. Our text suggests two mottoes which may be considered part of this seal. One refers to God's attitude towards man, and the other man's attitude towards God. Elijah, the prophet of Israel, did not know that God had 7,000 faithful servants who had never bowed the knee to Baal. He thought he stood alone in his loyalty and devotion to the Lord. Ananias, the aged saint at Damascus, did not know that Saul of Tarsus was the Lord's till it had been revealed to him by the Lord in the vision of the night. But though we may not know all who are on the Lord's side, all who are resting upon the sure foundation by faith in Jesus Christ, yet the Lord knows each one by name. He "knoweth them that are His." The seal on that stone is the guarantee that not a single soul shall be missed. It is the reassuring testimony of God that each soul has an identity and individuality in His sight which is as positive as though the name and description and likeness of every one were engraved upon the stone. What a reassuring and wonderful guarantee that is! The seal of the mightiest potentate upon earth could not more surely and blessedly comfort the heart of his subject than does this seal which God has caused to be placed there.

AND the second motto is man's side. It is not enough that God knows them that are His. Man must know by his life and his deeds, by his attitude towards the goodness and truth of God and his opposition to the evil within and without, that he belongs to God. It is not sufficient that God should claim us, and last any should see but one side of God's truth and should think that it did not matter how he lived, for God would save all mankind, the other truth accompanies the first, and is as follows: "Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." License to sin is not given by the declaration of the first motto of the inscription, but rather it would imply a life of holy living. The second motto is a natural development of the first. It is the plans, the specifications, by which man is to build the superstructure. Here is the foundation laid by God, Jesus Christ, Himself, not only being that foundation, but the cornerstone as well. The first part of the inscription reminds us of the words of Jesus to His Heavenly Father when He declared: "Of them that Thou hast given Me I have lost none." It is a known and definite factor in the mind of God exactly as to who belong to Him. He knows who the builders are. His eyes are upon those who are to rear the superstructure on the foundation which He has provided, and because God is as choice and careful of the superstructure as of the foundation He tells you and me who are builders on that foundation just what stately, and solid, and permanent structure we are to rear. Nothing of evil, or error, is to be put there if God can help it. And for this reason He tells those of us who name the "name of Christ to depart from evil." God wants a building of honor, and beauty, and enduring character to grace His splendid and everlasting foundation.

IN referring to the building which the Christian is rearing upon the foundation of Christ Jesus, Peter calls us "lively stones." This allusion to the building of which all Christians are stones undoubtedly has reference to Solomon's temple. Each individual stone of that wonderful building was carefully prepared for its place in the structure before it was brought to the scene of the temple, so that there was no sound of the workmen's tools heard as the building was erected. And as stones for God's building we are being fitted and prepared to fill a place in that invisible temple of the Church of Christ which is being built. This is the thought in Paul's mind when in Ephesians he declares that "we are His workmanship." God has a part which He performs for each individual Christian, and we are builders with Him in making these living stones of just the right proportions and size to fill the place we may and ought to fill in His perfect building. We are to depart from iniquity. That is every form of sin. No longer are we to build for the natural appetites and lusts, but by a deliberate and positive choice on our part we are to turn from such things and build into our characters such things as shall abide.

THESE things may be likened unto gold, silver, precious stones, to which reference is made in the third chapter of first Corinthians, and are the things which are to be built upon the foundation, for they are the only materials which will stand the testing. If a man puts wood, hay, stubble upon the foundation, it will be destroyed, for "every man's work shall be made manifest; for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved, yet so as by fire." Our building is to be severely tested. We may be able to gild the wood, hay and stubble, so as to deceive the eyes of men, and even our own, and make it seem like the gold and silver and precious stones, but in that testing day when the fire of God shall eat through the thin veneer and lick up the combustible material we have been putting into our building we shall be stripped of everything but that bare salvation. The testing is sure to come. We cannot deceive God. What kind of material are we putting upon the foundation which God has given us? It is an enduring foundation, and is worthy of the structure of gold, silver and precious stones, which shall prove as enduring as the foundation itself. Are we content to put upon it materials which shall dishonor the foundation, and disgrace us in the day of testing? We cannot find the gold, silver and precious stones along the pathway of the old nature. We cannot obtain them if we have our eyes and affections fixed upon the world and the things of the world. We must depart from the desires of the natural man, and seek the things of God. This is man's part. This is his share in the inscription which adorns that blessed foundation stone. Blessed be God that in His wonderful Providence and mercy He has laid such a foundation for us, and glory and honor to His name that He has placed such an inscription and seal upon that stone which assures us of His intimate knowledge of us, and of our duty and privilege towards Him! God grant that we may every one diligently strive to obtain the gold, the silver, the precious stones, so as to build according to God's plans for us!

ORIGIN OF NUMERAL SYSTEM

Paper Read Before Philological Society Comments on Forerunners of Present Method.

In a paper read before the Philological society of the University of Michigan, recently, Prof. George Hempl commented upon the forerunners of our present system of numeration. Some two years ago, in seeking the origin of the Runic letters (the first letters used by the Germanic races), Prof. Hempl discovered the primitive Germanic numeral notations. This threw new light upon the early Germanic numerical system, as well as upon the primitive Indo-European numerical system, and upon the development of the Greek alphabet and the Greek numerical notation. The primitive Indo-European numerical system was a mixture of the decimal and the sexagesimal. The first large number was the "shock," that is, 60, and the next large number was the "hund," or "hundred," that is, 120. Between 60 and 120 there were no numbers like our 70, etc., 70 being "a shock and 10," and 80 being "a shock and 20." The introduction of our present numbers between 60 and 120 arose out of the introduction of the decimal hund or hundred, that is, 100, in distinction from which the old hundred (120) was called the duodecimal hundred, or the "great hundred," which is still used in Iceland and parts of England.

BOSTON GOT ITS BEANS.

Absence of Favorite Dish Once Threatened City, But Striking Bakers Took Pity.

It has never been successfully disputed, says the Boston Watchman, that Bostonians are extremely addicted to baked beans (with their orthodox and inseparable companion, brown bread) and to pie. But no one has hitherto settled which of the two held the higher place, or, in other words, which is more necessary to the maintenance of truly Boston life at the proper point of culture and coldness. The decision of this delicate and difficult yet delightfully interesting question, which has successfully defied in the past both the literary skill and intellectual powers of the city, has been left for solution to the exigencies of the modern industrial problem. In the recent strike of 1,400 bakers Boston was compelled to go pie hungry for days. But when Saturday night approached and the dreadful possibility appeared of Boston being compelled to face a Sunday morning without baked beans, the hearts and consciences of the bakers were stirred, and they made a special and extraordinary effort to supply the city with its habitual Sunday morning breakfast, while no such emotion was elicited by the sufferings incident to the lack of pie.

Radium Runs Clock.

The radium clock of Harrison Martindale, English physicist, practically gives perpetual motion through the dissipation of negatively charged rays. A small quantity of radium supported in an exhausted glass vessel by a quartz rod, is placed in a small tube, to the lower end of which is attached an electroscope of two long strips of silver. The activity of the radium causes an electric current minus beta rays to be transmitted to the silver strips, which expand until they touch the sides of the vessel, when earthed conducting wires instantly discharge them and they fall together. This is repeated every two minutes, making time in beats of that duration, and, theoretically, the action will continue until exhaustion of the radium—in this case computed to be 30,000 years in the future.

LOCAL COLOR TOO STRONG

Sunday School Girl Works Local Hotel Into the Story of Bethlehem.

Seneca, Nemeh county, Kan., is a thriving town of almost 3,000. Travelers thereto, says the Philadelphia Press, put up at the Gilford house, which is a neat brick hotel and is regarded by the permanent population as the best thing in the hostelry line in the northeastern part of the state. To the children of the town it is known as "The Hotel."

So it was that when a faithful Sunday-school teacher endeavored to fix on the minds of her small pupils the story of the birth of Christ she described how Mary and Joseph had come into Bethlehem on the eve of the first Christmas and found the inn full of guests. To make it realistic she used the simile of the town of Seneca and explained how it was just as though the weary travelers had come in from the surrounding country at evening.

Too well she drew the picture, for one young miss was so impressed with the local color that when the Christmas festival came and the superintendent of the school asked for the tale of Bethlehem this young lady started out in this fashion:

"Mary and Joseph came to Bethlehem, but the Gilford house was full—"

She got no farther, however, for the walls of the church rang with the laughter of the audience, which realized that here was local color with a vengeance.

Cured Her Rheumatism.

Deep Valley, Pa., Oct. 31 (Special).—There is deep interest in Green county over the cure of the little daughter of J. N. Whipkey of Rheumatism. She was a great sufferer for five or six years and nothing seemed to do her any good till she tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. She began to improve almost at once and now she is cured and can run and play as other children do. Mr. Whipkey says:

"I am indeed thankful for what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for my daughter; they saved her from being a cripple perhaps for life."

Dodd's Kidney Pills have proved that Rheumatism is one of the results of diseased Kidneys. Rheumatism is caused by Uric Acid in the blood. If Kidneys are right there can be no Uric Acid in the blood, and consequently no Rheumatism. Dodd's Kidney Pills make the Kidneys right.

Blot on California.

They were discussing the charms of the California climate.

"I never knew but two persons who could resist the wiles of that delightful land," one of the company said, "and they were a mother and daughter from the Hub. They came to Pasadena while we were there, and they stayed just two days. One of us chanced to express surprise at their brief sojourn, and the older woman explained:

"'It is beautiful here, of course. We realize that. But, after all, it is so far from Boston!'

"And they went that very day."—N. Y. Sun.

Tenth Season of the California Limited.

Ten years ago this fall the Santa Fe started its California Limited train on the initial run across the continent. Many improvements have been made in that busy decade. To-day's engines and coaches are much heavier than those of 1894. Millions of dollars have been spent on the track alone—some of it for oil-sprinkled (dustless) roadbed and oil-burning (smokeless) engines. The time is faster, too.

Daily service of the California Limited will be resumed Sunday, November 13, for the tenth season, superseding the present semi-weekly schedule. This is now an all-the-year-'round train, between Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco, running through Southwest land of enchantment. The time, Chicago to Los Angeles, is about 68 hours, which is fast speed for the 2,265 miles traversed, considering that several mountain ranges are crossed.

The letters of Miss Merkley, whose picture is printed above, and Miss Claussen, prove beyond question that thousands of cases of inflammation of the ovaries and womb are annually cured by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Gradual loss of strength and nerve force told me something was radically wrong with me. I had severe shooting pains throught the pelvic organs, cramps and extreme irritation compelled me to seek medical advice. The doctor said that I had ovarian trouble and ulceration, and advised an operation. I strongly objected to this and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I soon found that my judgment was correct, and that all the good things said about this medicine were true, and day by day I felt less pain and increased appetite. The ulceration soon healed, and the other complications disappeared and in eleven weeks I was once more strong and vigorous and perfectly well.

"My heartiest thanks are sent to you for the great good you have done me."—Sincerely yours, MISS MARGARET MERKLEY, 275 Third St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Miss Claussen Saved from a Surgical Operation.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It seems to me that all the endorsements that I have read of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound do not express one-half of the virtue the great medicine really possesses. I know that it saved my life and I want to give the credit where it belongs. I suffered with ovarian trouble for five years, had three operations and spent hundreds of dollars on doctors and medicines but this did not cure me after all.

"However, what doctors and medicines failed to do, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did. Twenty bottles restored me to perfect health and I feel sure that had I known of its value before, and let the doctors alone, I would have been spared all the pain and expense that fruitless operations cost me. If the women who are suffering, and the doctors do not help them, will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, they will not be disappointed with the results."—MISS CLARA M. CLAUSSEN, 1307 Penn St., Kansas City, Mo.

WALTON.

Nov. 1.—D. B. Roberts of Verona, is expected to live but a few hours.

Dr. Frank Crigler, of Lndlow, spent a few hours in Walton, Monday.

Heard a man say he saw 400 rabbits shipped from Verona, one day last week

Mrs. Ott Murphy and charming little daughter, of Covington, are visiting friends here.

Owing to the dry weather and fine roads large quanties of coal are being taken from here every day.

Walton had a disfigured appearance this morning. O. L. Griffith came in at late hour and put his horse in the stable, and before he could get back to the buggy it was gone. It is wonderful how white, delicate hands can get large wagon beds up on telegraph wires.

Crigler & Crigler were arrested in Walton, Sunday, for scorching through Erlanger with their big automobile. The phonogram reached here only a few minutes before the auto arrived. Only a few people got to see the sensational arrest. They were released on their own recognizance.

A social was given by John Florence the night the T. A. Snyder factory closed down, and the following young and happy guests were present to engage in the gay festivities of the evening:—Misses Edna, Clara, Bertha, Rena and Hallie Johnson, Mattie and Kate Benson, Junette Jenkins, and Messrs. C. Johnson, O. Jones, Will Hoard, Chas. Veet, A. Johnson, R. Benson. The young people thank Mr. and Mrs. Florence for their kindness and join in best wishes to them, and hope they may live to entertain many such crowds in the future. Mr. and Mrs. Florence say for them that their doors are ever open and the latch string hangs on the outside for just such a set of young folks. The writer, J. B. Johnson, was present and enjoyed the evening.

But since the advent of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, even the worst cases can be cured and hopeless resignation is no longer necessary. Mrs. Lois Cragg of Hanover, Miss., is one of many whose life was saved by Dr. King's New Discovery. This great remedy is guaranteed for all Throat and Lung troubles by all Druggists. Don't Misrepresent

Just to Make Competion Fair.

We make the following explanation; before this season the Lawrenceburg Mill has only made one grade of feed, which they branded Lawrenceburg Snow Flake Mixed Feed, but this season, they are making a straight Bran which they brand, Lawrenceburg Snow Flake Bran. As their MIXED FEED was always a big seller in your county, we offer the above explanation so that if a dealer offers you Lawrenceburg Feed, you can post yourself as to what grade you are getting.

We offer you Lawrenceburg Snow Flake Bran delivered at Erlanger at $19 per ton, or same price at our Covington house. We still have some Mixed Feed to offer at Erlanger for $20.50 per ton. This is first-class feed, and would like to hear from you in regard to same.

Adams in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and neighbors who met to pay their last tribute to the departed. The family has the sympathy of many friends in their sad loss. The remains were interred in New Bethel cemetery to await the final resurrection.

A very sad occurrence took place here last Saturday morning about 7 o'clock. Mrs. Charles Lewis' clothes caught fire and burned her to death before she was discovered. She and her son Charles kept house together, but he was not at the house. The building took fire from Mrs. Lewis' burning clothing, and the smoke from it attracted the attention of persons who were horrified when they arrived at the house and found Mrs. Lewis lying the floor, her clothing burned off. It required considerable effort to save the house. The supposition is that Mrs. Lewis' clothing caught fire from the cook stove while she was waaning the breakfast dishes. The deceased was 64 years of age, and a most estimable lady. The funeral took place at New Bethel Baptist church, last Sunday afternoon, Rev. L. Johnson officiating. The remains were luterred in New Bethel cemetery. The deceased leaves three daughter, two sons and many relatives to mourn her death.

FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

New Way of Using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. Arthur Chapman writing from Durban, Natal, South Africa, says: "As a proof that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a cure suitable for old and young, I pen you the following: A neighbor of mine had a child just over two months old. It had a very bad cough and the parents did not know what to give it. I suggested that if they would get a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and put some upon the dummy teat the baby was sucking it would no doubt cure the child. This they did and brought about a quick relief and cured the baby." This remedy is for sale by all Druggists.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Representing not only myself but my sister and brothers as well as all kin and relatives, I wish, through the Recorder, to express my heartfelt thanks to the large number of people, who live in the south end of Boone county, who were so much interested in my brother, Boone Roberts, during his last sickness, and to the hundreds who expressed their sympathy for his family by attendance at the funeral. The thanks of all of us are especially due and are hereby publicly extended to the Edwards Brothers, undertakers of Walton, for their kindness in furnishing a hearse and carriage without charge and solely as an expression of their esteem and regard for our brother. Boone Roberts was born and had lived all his life, 54 years in sight of the mound that now marks his grave, and such testimonials of regard as he received from those who had known his life and his worth indicate that he did not live in vain, who lives a kindly and upright life, and that there are common chords that bind together the hearts of men and in hours of trial make us all akin.

"BRITE AND FAIR."

"To-day was brite and fair."—From the Real Diary of a Real Boy.
"Brite and fair"—it tells the tale
Of the days of long ago,
Ringing boyish song and hail
In an echo faint and low.
Written in the careless scrawl
Stumping thus the days that were—
Summer, winter, spring or fall,
Every day was "brite and fair."

Who remembers any rain
That came when he was a boy?
Who remembers any pain
Or forgets a shred of joy?
In the picture of your youth
On which you so often gaze,
Is there any cloud, in truth?
"Brite and fair" were all the days.

Ho, the days that once were yours
Were the brightest days that dawned,
And the light of them endures
In your recollections fond!
How they rise, and how they call,
Wheresoever you may be
Till you hold them one and all
As fine gold of memory!

Looking back and looking far
Through the laughter and the play,
Was there anything to mar
Any single boyhood day?
'Twas the sunshine brought the shade—
Never any cloud of care—
And the heart within you made
Every day both "brite and fair."

THE GIRL FROM WELDON'S.

BY LLOYD WILLIAMS.

SHE was certainly pretty. Archie Newport had said it, and Archie Newport was an artist and knew all about such things. When she visited Portadown mansions he used to stand at his window and watch her alight from a car, trip across the pavement—holding up her dainty skirt the while saintily whereby he got just a peep at the tip of the most fascinating petticoat, to say nothing of a pair of ankles the like of which could not be seen in the neighborhood—and so on into the huge building in which he occupied a modest flat.

By the time she was in the hall, and had nodded to the janitor, Mr. Newport had generally reached the door of his flat which she had to pass, for the elevator was just opposite, and was pulling on his gloves preparatory to saliving out.

He discovered that she visited the people on the third floor, and he set himself to learn as much as he could about them. There seemed to be a kind of mystery about them. They were an Italian couple, and the janitor, whom he interviewed, remarked that he didn't know that "they were much rich."

Mr. Newport provided his informant with the kind of refreshment which art mesmerism generally demands, and returned to his studio.

Strange thing!" he reflected, as he lazily painted "Venice by Moonlight," with the confidence of a man who has never traveled farther than New York. "I can't imagine why a nice girl like that can want to have anything to do with such people. Hope it's all right." He had no particular reason for hoping that "it was all right," but took a great interest in her, and had reached that stage when a man thinks that a girl needs some one to look after her.

She generally came in the evening, never appeared earlier than seven o'clock. From this it may be gathered that he had studied her habits closely. One night his chance came, though it cannot be said that he availed himself of it to a large extent.

He had got into the narrow-minded way of thinking of her as one apparently having lost sight of the fact that there are other people in the world of the female sex—arrived at the usual at about a quarter past seven, and by the most extraordinary good luck he was, as usual, just going out for a walk. Consequently they met in the hall.

The janitor happened to be out, and the elevator boy was likewise absent, and Archie Newport stepped into the car.

"I'm afraid the boy who looks after the elevator is not here to-day," he remarked, raising his hat. "Can I do anything for you?"

"No, sir, it doesn't matter!" she said, with a smile and a blush. "I can easily manage."

"But you will allow me, I shall be glad to take you up in the elevator," he said. "I'm a tremendous dab at it, you know."

She took the place in the car as he suggested, and waited for her to join him. She looked at him in a little perplexity. It was probable that his impulsive goodness of heart was taking him a little bit too far, and it was to open him that she was really the prettiest girl he had seen.

"I really couldn't think of troubling you," she stammered.

Archie looked at her with so much humility that, so far from being visible, it would be a source of considerable impressible happiness, that look of perplexity vanished, and a smile broke over her face.

"I am very quite sure it would not be any too much of your time," he declared, and stepped into the car.

It is hard to paint the scene, suggest the gondola for the elevator, the gondolier for the janitor.

"Where do you want to go to?" he asked, diplomatically, though he knew that Mr. and Mrs. Ferrari lived on the third.

"I think it's the third," she murmured. "It's Mr. Ferrari's flat I am going to."

He closed the door and gave the cord a mighty pull. Perhaps he overdid the pulling, or perhaps elevators, like human beings, are endowed with a special talent for contrariety.

Whatever it was, the fact remains that after springing upwards with unusual celerity the elevator suddenly stopped with a jerk.

"That's funny," said the artist.

"Where are we?" she inquired, in a half-frightened voice.

"About midway between the second and third floors," he said, glancing upwards. "I shall soon have it right again."

He pulled the cord at first gently and then violently, but the elevator remained as still as if it were imbedded in rock.

"Perhaps we had better go down again," she said.

"Perhaps we had," he admitted.

He tried to make the elevator descend, but failed.

"It strikes me the silly thing has stuck fast," he muttered.

"You don't think it will fall, do you?" she asked, with a scared face.

"O, no!" he replied, with a confidence which he didn't feel. "The janitor will return soon and I shall shout to him. He will put it right again in no time."

"Is he a dab at elevators, too?" she inquired, with a kind of tremulous mischievousness.

At that moment he thought he heard the janitor's step in the hall below.

"Hello!" he called out. "Is that you, Wilkins?"

"Yes, sir," responded the ex-soldier, heartily; "it's me."

"This wretched elevator has stuck fast. See if you can release it."

Soon came the welcome news that it wouldn't take five minutes to release it.

"Will you let me give you my card?" asked Mr. Newport, while they waited to be freed. "And I hope you will forgive me for giving you such a fright. I am an artist. Do you think you would give me a few minutes one evening and let me sketch you? I have already done so from memory."

He took a rough drawing from his pocketbook, where he kept it as a means of mental refreshment when the world was more than usually awry, and showed it to her. She was evidently pleased, but said it was quite impossible for her to give him a sitting—at any rate, for some time to come—as her evenings were fully occupied.

"During the day I am in Weldon's jewelry house, as you know," she added.

"Why do you say 'as I know?'" he asked.

"Because you followed me home one evening, and since then I have seen you pass once or twice during the day," she replied, demurely.

Mr. Newport grinned. It was true that he had followed her one evening, but believed he had done so with such skill that she was not aware of it.

"I hope you will forgive me for that, too," he said.

"O, yes!" she said, lightly. The elevator had ascended at last, and they had now reached the third floor. "And now I will say good night!" she added. "Thanks so much for your kind assistance."

"Do not make such a noise," said a voice with an unmistakably foreign accent.

Archie Newport rubbed his eyes and woke himself up as suddenly as possible. It was six o'clock in the morning.

"Be careful!" said the Italian voice. "Now, steady! Ah, there you go! It is too heavy. Wait, I will find some one else to help you."

It suddenly occurred to Mr. Newport that it was an ideal morning for a swim in the natatorium, and that it would be interesting to know what Mr. Ferrari was doing at that early hour. He jumped into a suit of flannels, as quickly as possible and rushed out.

There he saw two big men struggling with an enormous box or chest, which was apparently a heavy burden, for it was as much as they could do to carry it up the stairs. Mr. Ferrari was at hand, gesticulating wildly, and half shouting, half whispering instructions to them.

"Morning!" said Archie, with a nod.

"Good morning!" said the Italian, angrily. "You are out early!"

"So are you."

"I have business."

"I haven't."

"Do not let me delay you."

"Shall I lend you a hand with the box?"

"No!" almost screamed the foreigner. "Do not touch it. I wish—I wish you would mind your own business."

"Going to bury some one, I should think," replied the artist, ironically.

"How dare you say such a thing?" snapped Mr. Ferrari. "Why do you not go away?"

By the time he had turned the corner of the street it had struck Archie that he had been somewhat shortsighted to quarrel with the man who had the privilege of entertaining every evening the beautiful creature whose face it was his chief delight to sketch.

"But what on earth is that box for?" he asked himself.

For the life of him he couldn't answer the question. It was far too big for clothes or books. Indeed, his jocular remark about burying a person in it was not so absurd, now he came to think of it, for unless it was designed to hold a human being he could see no use for it.

The sunfect was not a pleasant one, and it hastily.

That night "she" arrived, but later than usual. Again he had his hat on ready to go out. She had a cloak over her shoulders and was in evening dress.

"How do you do?" he said, pleasantly, with a decent air of surprise, as if she were the last person in the world he expected to see.

But she was in a state of great agitation. Her face was pale and she was trembling with nervousness, and—was it fear?

"O, please don't stop me!" she said, excitedly. "I must not—O, I dare not speak to you!"

She ran to the elevator—the boy was on duty that night—the door was closed, and he stood staring at it in astonishment.

What was the cause of her agitation, her distress?

He lighted a cigarette, and, after a moment's thought, strolled out of the building.

From the street he could see the lights in the Ferrari flats. He looked up, wondering what took place there, and for what purpose that queer-looking box had been brought in.

Suddenly he became aware that the lights were being lowered, until the place was almost in darkness. A sickening thought came into his mind, and he returned to the house.

As he stood there, hesitating, he distinctly heard a woman's scream, followed by a low, moaning sound.

This was too much for him.

He turned to Wilkins and bade him follow.

"Come upstairs with me!" he said. "I'm going to find out what is going on. Did you see that box taken into Mr. Ferrari's flat this morning?"

"I did, sir," said the man. "It came mighty early, as if he didn't want anybody to see it. And a stranger looking box I never see. I says to my wife, I says: 'You mark my words, there's something queer going on up there!' That's what I says, sir."

They had been running up the stairs while he spoke, and by this time had reached the Ferraris' door.

"You have a latchkey to all the doors," said Archie. "Open it!"

The man hesitated.

"Open it!" repeated the artist, sharply. "I will be responsible."

In another moment he was standing inside the Ferraris' hall. In a room in front of him he could hear voices whispering. He hurst in.

There was the box. It stood open, and his heart turned sick as he perceived that it was lined like a coffin. On a chair sat the pretty girl from Weldon's.

Her hands were tied behind her, and her face was pale and frightened.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Ferrari were there.

"You dog!" screamed the Italian, who was evidently mad with passion at his intrusion.

"Thank heaven, I am in time!" said Archie.

The Italian threw himself furiously upon him, but he had no chance against the athletic young artist. Striking out like the practiced boxer he was, Archie struck him in the chest and sent him reeling backwards.

Then he turned to the girl whom he had come to rescue. Taking a penknife from his pocket, he cut the ribbon with which her wrists were bound, and, regardless of all conventionalities, snatched her to his breast.

"You fool!" said Mr. Ferrari, struggling to his feet and rubbing his chest. "You fool!"

He relinquished his hold upon the girl and turned to Mr. Ferrari, who was literally dancing with passion.

"How dare you come into my flat?" he was screaming. "What do you think you are—a hero in a melodrama?"

Archie began to think that perhaps he had been precipitate.

"I came to save her life," he stammered.

"To save her life!" echoed the Italian in dismay. "What do you——"

Then he, too, began to laugh.

"The box!" he gasped, pointing at the big, ugly looking receptacle. "He thought I was a murderer. He came to safe her life. Did it not strike you, my gallant young friend, that I might be going to use the box for professional purposes?"

"For professional purposes?" said Archie, lamely.

"Why not?"

"I don't know what you are talking about," said Archie. "Are you an undertaker?"

"No, a conjurer!" screamed Ferrari. "I am going to do the box trick at the Pavilion to-night. I am going to make this young woman vanish."

"Heavens, what a chump I have made of myself!" said Archie, truthfully. "But why did she scream, and why did you turn down the light?"

"I only cried out because I hurt myself the first time I got into it," said the girl from Weldon's. "This is to be my first night on the stake, and I am nervous."

"And I turned down the light because one does not conjure with the gas on full," said Ferrari.

Archie, feeling that his mission was ended, turned to go.

"No, no," said the Italian, "do not go away like that. There is no harm done. We shall have to start directly. Come with us. This is my wife. This is Miss Belton, the young woman who is going to assist me."

On the whole, it cannot be said that Archie commenced his courtship under favorable conditions. But apparently he succeeded in spite of all, for now when he has visitors he shows them the portrait of an extremely pretty girl, with dark eyes and most wonderful chestnut hair. It is the best picture he has ever painted, and he likes to draw attention to it.

"My wife," he always says, with pride.—Chicago Tribune.

ODD FACTS FOR FARM FOLK.

Tokay and Syrian Grapes Grown in Northern Idaho—All Grains Are Over Weight When Properly Grown by Irrigation—White Flax Seed—Corn Wheat in Place of Corn.

It is a big surprise to World's Fair visitors to find that tokay grapes grow in the United States as far north as Duluth, Minn. The particular place where this may be done is Lewiston, Idaho, on the banks of the Snake river. Whatever is done along the Snake river in the matter of agriculture and horticulture must be done with irrigation, however.

The remarkable things done under irrigation are portrayed by a number of states. Colorado has a relief map of the Arkansas valley. Utah shows a diorama of one of her irrigated valleys. California exhibits her products from lands worth a thousand dollars an acre. Oregon displays her beautiful fruits and grains from irrigated districts, while Idaho, her next door neighbor, won twenty gold medals on her agricultural showing.

The tokay grapes from Lewiston are only one of 62 varieties now successfully grown at that far northern point where the climate is almost as mild as Italy, for the tokay cannot flourish where the winters are cold. Along with the tokay is a fine sweet grape from Syria, in which every grape and fruit grower will be interested. The name is Hunisa, or Antab late, from Antab. It is large, very dark, and a fine keeper, the last being its most important quality. After traveling over 1,500 miles to the World's Fair it opened up in as fine condition as the tokay, and made a good show. These grapes are from the first vine of this variety fruited in America.

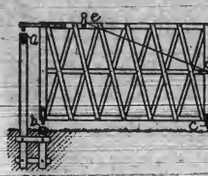
Another fact not well known is that grains grown by irrigation in the dry atmosphere of the western slope of the Rocky mountains are much heavier than those grown in the east, and the yield is far greater. In the Idaho exhibit of the Palace of Agriculture at the World's Fair are many examples of irrigation results. A sack of oats was received at the exhibit a few days ago which was graded by one of the machines in the building and tested as to weight. It was found that the third, or poorest grade, weighed 38 pounds to the bushel, while the standard of weight for oats is only 32 pounds to the bushel. The yield is 100 to 110 bushels to the acre, and Idaho oats ordinarily weigh 42 to 46 pounds to the bushel. An acre of irrigated land yields about three times as much as an acre in a humid climate. Wheat, in southern Idaho is 62 to 64 pounds to the bushel, the standard being 60 pounds, and the yield 50 to 70 bushels to the acre. A bundle of alfalfa hay, second crop of 1904, brought from southern Idaho, is as tall as a man, a six-footer. Five to seven tons to the acre are grown each season, it being cut usually three times.

All over southern Idaho, which for the most part is a vast desert, are cases that have been made fruitful by irrigation. The liberal provisions of the Cary Act of Congress have made possible the reclamation of these lands, the state taking over the lands and disposing of them to settlers at 50 cents an acre. The water right is an extra cost, in some cases as low as $25 an acre for a perpetual right, the first one or two crops often paying the entire cost of a fine property. Only a few days ago the state land board of Idaho threw open to settlement 100,000 acres of land under one canal at Twin Falls, on the south side of Snake river. It is in Cassia county, one of the counties that touch the Nevada border. In this instance the total cost per acre is $25.50, and under the liberal terms of the Cary Act entry may be made through another person. The payment is in easy installments.

Many of the exhibits in the Idaho display are from along the Snake river, which is so named because of its sinuous course, and not because of any snakes. The water for the Twin Falls tract, which embraces 270,000 acres, is from the Snake, and the cost of the 2,000 foot dam and the 100 miles of main canals is about $2,500,000. A railroad is being constructed from Minidoka southward to cross the tract, which is expected to repeat the history of the Wood River Country, the Boise and Payette Valleys, and become a populous part of the state.

Idaho has the honor of showing in her agricultural display something that very few farmers have ever seen, namely, white flax seed. This variety of flax originated in Idaho, and is said to possess great commercial possibilities, because it is richer in oil and produces a grade of very light colored oil that is far more desirable for white paint than the darker grade.

Idaho is trying to do what other mountain states are attempting, that is, to supply the home market with fruits, vegetables, meats, grains and dairy products. The mountains contain hundreds of mining camps and settlements where everything now produced finds ready market, while the demand increases with each new mining district opened.



Corn is about the only thing that does not grow well in the irrigated deserts of southern Idaho, because the summer nights are cool, but a kind of grain is raised called corn wheat that takes the place of corn, and produces over 100 bushels to the acre. It is worth any farmer's time to take a good look at the odd things in the Idaho display, where there are 47 varieties of wheat, 41 varieties of oats, 32 varieties of barley, and 34 varieties of grasses, to say nothing of vegetables, beans, peas, honey and other things worth having.

A NONSAGGING GATE.

How It May Be Constructed So as to Overcome Old-Time Difficulties.

I have had much trouble with sagging gates before I built several like the one shown in the cut. If the posts are well set, there is little danger of the gate sagging. In the tops of the short and long posts shown at a and b, holes are bored to receive the hinges. In the post may be fitted iron sockets, or a hole of that all hole with linseed oil and allow wood to soak it up thoroughly as a preventive against weather and wear.

GATE THAT WILL NOT SAG.

The hinges shown at a and b are not found upon an ordinary gate, but can be made by any blacksmith. By use of the lever, c, and the latch at d, connected by wires shown, the latch may be raised without going to the end of gate.

On some of these gates, writes D. R. Brown, in Farm and Home, I have placed a small wheel as shown at e. If not firmly set into the gate, the wheel should be mounted on a swivel. If a board is used as a truck for these wheels to ravel on, much annoyance is avoided in muddy weather.

RACK FOR CORN HUSKING.

Corn husking rack, such as shown in the picture, is easily built of a few sticks. It can be made of any size desired, but a convenient one is 18 inches high, three feet wide and six feet long, says the Orange Judd Farmer. The common method of using it is to tip it over so that the top and bottom rest against one side of the shock, which is then pulled over onto the rack. The shock is unbound and is then ready for one or two huskers.

SUGGESTIVE PARAGRAPHS.

Is your barnyard graveled, ditched and tiled?

Marketing the products in the best possible condition is where the profits are made.

A furrow passed through a wet place in the wheat field will often save an acre of wheat.

In planting out an orchard this fall do not plant out more than can be manured and cared for.

Farm life may be made a burden or a pleasure, according to the management of the home, the farm and the work.

Clean up the farm, and its value will be increased, and when it is cleaned and cleared it will cultivate more easily and cheaply.

The scrapings from the barnyard drawn out and spread on the meadow before cold weather will help to protect the grass roots and bring a better crop next season.—Farm and Home.

Remember this: Hay in a small stack will have a much larger part ruined by rain and weather than that in a large one. So if you can possibly make room in the hay mow, put in the one or more small stacks left over.—Coleman's Rural World.

A Big Plum.

Dominion Fruit Inspector Wartman, says the Montreal Star, while inspecting California fruit, discovered a Kelsey Japanese plum which measured 8¼ inches in circumference, and weighed six ounces. It was green in color, and shaped much like a pear, the stem being the larger. The fruit was sound throughout, very luscious, and destitute of coarseness in texture and flavor usually present in very large specimens of fruit. The pit was no larger than that of an ordinary Lombard or Damson plum grown in Canada. While this specimen was the largest noticed in 15 cases of this variety, there were many others of extraordinary size. Out of the 15 cases there was not a single inferior or damaged specimen, although the fruit must have been at least ten days picked before reaching Montreal, so carefully do California growers pick, pack and ship their fruit.

Saving Poultry Manure.

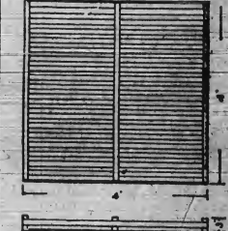
Poultry manure is very rich in all the fertilizing elements, but especially so in nitrogen, owing to the fact that the urinary secretions, which contain large amounts of nitrogen as well as potash in readily available form, are voided with the solid excrement. It quickly loses nitrogen, however, by fermentation, if not properly mixed with absorbents or preservatives. In no case should the fine substances like lime, wood ashes, etc., be mixed with poultry manure.—Farmers' Bulletin.

TALK ABOUT WHITE PINES.

Bureau of Forestry Gives Some Information on How to Start a Little Plantation.

The white pine is reproduced from seed. The cones, which average about six inches in length, bear from 50 to 75 seeds each. There are about 5,000 seeds to the pound, or 1,000 to the ounce. The percentage of germination in fresh seed is 70 to 90. If the seed is sown carefully in drills on suitable soil, and cared for in a proper manner subsequently, 50 per cent may be expected to produce seedlings which will live to the transplanting stage. If, however, seed be sown broadcast, on soil not properly cared for, a frequent result is not more than 2,000 to 5,000 seedlings from the pound. At this rate it would pay the planter better to buy two or three-year seedings from a nursery or collect them from the forest. "Seed years" occur but one in four to seven years. Since white pine seed requires two years for development, it is possible to predict a seed year 12 months previous to the time for collection. Ample opportunity is thus given to prepare for planting when seed may be obtained at the smallest cost to the planter.

The white pine cone opens and throws its seed before it falls from the tree consequently it is necessary to collect the cones before they open. Different methods of collecting have been used in various parts of the country. The quickest method is that of chopping the trees and picking the cones by hand from the fallen trees; but this should never be resorted to unless the trees are mature and can immediately be used for lumber. In such instances it is sometimes advisable to wait for a seed year before harvesting a crop of timber. Lopping off large branches should never be resorted to unless the branches are cut close to the stem, in which case the pruning benefits the future timber, providing the crown is not robbed.



Where trees have large crowns the tips of the lateral branches may be removed with pruning shears without injury to the trees, but the upper part of the crown should never be disturbed except by hand picking. A long pole with a sharp, curved, steel knife at the end, may be used to advantage in picking cones. It is usually possible to obtain seeds most easily from trees which are grown in open fields or along roadsides; and they bear more and frequently better seed.

Seed should be stored in a cool, dry place, in small bags suspended in the air. Light freezing is not injurious, but heavy freezing should be guarded against. —Bureau of Forestry.

THE STORING OF APPLES.

Shallow Trays Prove the Most Convenient and Safe for the Winter Keeping of Apples.

I use shallow trays for storing away apples for winter use. These are four feet square, as shown in the upper part of the cut. The ends and middle pieces are made of 1x3-inch stuff and the bottom covered with laths. These laths are spaced one-half-inch apart. One lath is nailed at each end, as shown at the bottom of the cut. This makes the nicest tray for packing apples in cellar I have seen. I have 14 trays and place one on top of the other. They are set on four posts two feet high which have a tin cap at top to prevent rats from climbing up. Each tray holds two bushels.

Stored in this way apples can easily be sorted from time to time, commencing with top tray, and removing and using up specked ones. Another good feature in this way of storing, that children cannot scramble on top of the pile and roll the apples around in order to find the largest and nicest, as when they are stored in bins. One bunch of laths will make three trays.—C. E. Knudson, in Farm and Home.

The Low-Wheeled Wagon.

Farmers seldom stop to think what an immense lot of useless labor they perform during the season by the use of the regulation high-wheeled wagon. Very many farm products of great weight are lifted, shoveled or pitchforked to a wagon box or rack, from four to five feet from the ground, only to be again lifted to the surface at the end of the haul. Add to this the labor of putting hay, grain or fodder to the very top of a load eight or nine feet from the ground, and we feel inclined to ask the question: "Can we lessen the labor?"

Careful experiments have shown that the draught on very low wheels is but little if any greater than on those of average height. And as these low wheels can be had to fit any size skein on any wagon the farmer may own, the cost is small when compared with the benefit derived.—Farmers' Voice.

Root rot rots out the center of the tree. Cedar rust will not kill fruit unless it kills all the leaves. It affects the leaves, not the wood.

RECEIVING AND RECEIVED

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyrighted, 1904, by J. H. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Nov. 6, 1904.

Text:—"But as many as received Him, to them He gave the right to become children of God, even to them that believe on His name."—John 1:12.

"This Man receiveth sinners."—Luke 15:2.

OUR first text pictures Christ in the passive mood and our second in the active. In one He is waiting to be received by men, and in the other we behold Him in the act of receiving men. Both conceptions are true and give the twofold view of the Christ which is essential to a correct understanding of His relations to man and man's relations to Him. One brings before us the picture of man dwelling apart from God. He is occupied with his own affairs and doings, with the world and the things of the world. The house of his own desires shelters him, and his friends Ambition, and Wealth, and Pleasure, and Princess, and Society, and hosts of other children of the world find cordial welcome there. Their knock is scarcely heard before the door swings open to admit them, and hospitality and good cheer are graciously extended to them. And in our picture we see One making a long, long journey. He leaves the Father's house above, He lays aside the glory and honor and majesty and power which have been His throughout the ages from the beginning of time, and steps down among men. He travels the dreary road of suffering. He endures all the conditions and trials and temptations of human life. The cross overshadows His pathway. The crushing weight of human sin falls upon His sinless shoulders, and thus burdened He is lifted up upon the cross that lies at the end of the pathway of His human life. He becomes the willing sacrifice for sin. He goes down into the grave of death. He drinks the bitter dregs of sin. He pays the penalty of man's transgressions. He triumphs over death and the grave. He breaks the fetters of the tomb. He lays aside the grave cloths forever, and issues forth the risen and living Lord, the Saviour of men. He has reached the abode of man. He knocks for admittance.

"The Saviour, standing at the door,
Is knocking, knocking, o'er and o'er.
He seeks thy guest to be."

OTHERS are given ready and cordial welcome. The door opens wide to admit the friends of the world, but the Friend and—Saviour from Heaven is kept standing without. Notwithstanding the long journey He has made, notwithstanding all that He has suffered and wrought for sinful man, the Son of God is kept waiting without. I remember some years ago of reading the pathetic, sad story in the newspapers of an aged father coming from his home in Europe seeking the son who years before had come to this country to seek his fortune. The son had prospered in the new land. Ambition had come with wealth. He had married an American girl, and as the family grew up about them the glamour of social distinction fascinated them, and they coveted a place in the fashionable, world. The humble origin of the father was one of the buried things of the past. Every effort was made to cover up and forget the poor home and surroundings in the old country. The old mother died, and then came a yearning in the heart of the aged father to make the long journey to America to seek his son.

WE have not time to tell of the old man's long, tedious, hard search, of the great yearning in his heart that kept him steadily pressing on from point to point, of the privations through which he passed, but at last he found him, and with heart beating with hope and joy he went with tottering, feeble steps up the walk which led to the door of the mansion where lived his son. With trembling hand he knocked upon the door. But there was no welcome there for him. In his broken English, for during the months of his wanderings he had learned enough to make himself understood, he told his story. The son was summoned. But it was with anger and wounded pride that he greeted his aged parent. It would never do to have it known that this poor, old, ignorant foreigner was his father. And so the father was refused admittance. He was bundled off to the poor house as a homeless vagrant. The long, hard journey was all in vain. How inexpressibly sad, and yet the spectacle of Jesus coming from Heaven to earth, and knocking at the heart's door and being refused recognition or admittance, is infinitely sadder. It is the tragedy of the ages.

"Arise! take down the bars of sin,
And let the loving Saviour in.
Make Him thy welcome guest.
He'll give thee of His richest grace,
He'll make thy home His dwelling place,
And with thee ever rest."

"BUT as many as received Him, to them gave He." Jesus does not come empty-handed. The Divine guest comes laden with gifts of eternal richness and worth. To as many as receive Him He gives. It is the pretty custom in the oriental countries for the guest to bring his gift, his treasure, and bestow it upon the gracious host. Constant reference is made to this custom in the Scriptures, a notable instance being the visit of the queen of Sheba to King Solomon. And it is a beautiful picture which our text brings before us. Jesus the guest having been admitted into the heart and life gives the treasure which He laid down His life to obtain for sinful, needy man. The queen of Sheba brought treasure which Solomon could not find or obtain in his own land, and the Christ brings gifts which man can never obtain except at Christ's hands. "As many as received Him, to them gave He the right to become children of God." A certificate of sonship to God, a guarantee of eternal claim upon the riches, and glory, and blessing of the Father's House. The Son of God, who is the heir of all things, raises man to an equal relationship with the Father, and he becomes a joint heir to all that God has to give in this life and the life to come. Ah! what folly to keep Jesus waiting upon the outside of the heart. Receive Him, oh, needy soul! and let Him bestow upon you His gift of sonship with God and eternal life!

AND this is the picture of the Christ in the passive mood. Waiting patiently, longingly, lovingly, to be received by man. The vision of the Christ in the active mood reveals to us the great, throbbing heart of God; shows us the persistent, faithful, mighty effort which He is putting forth to rescue man from the depths of sin and death. The most glorious tribute which was ever paid our Lord was that which the angry and jealous Scribes and Pharisees gave when they contemptuously charged that "this man receiveth sinners." It was true, and it has made glad the centuries since He trod the earth and the words were spoken. Christ receiveth sinful men. No casual glance will suffice to reveal all the charm and meaning of the painting of the artist. It takes the searching eye and the meditating heart to understand it all. But as one sits hour after hour before the masterpiece of art how it unfolds and grows upon one's vision. And so it is with this picture which Scripture gives to us of the Christ receiving sinful men. The heart will never begin to see or understand all the depth of love and the wealth of Divine grace which is here contained until it gets over on the other side and sees eye to eye and knows even as it is known, but it may know and understand more and more as it ponders on this blessed truth: "This Man receiveth sinners." And this is the picture. Jesus by right of His Divine Sonship, in fulfillment of His commission brought with Him from Heaven, and by reason of His triumph over sin and death, has established a sure and everlasting retreat to which the needy soul of man may flee for refuge.

IN obedience to the command of God, the children of Israel established six cities of refuge in the new land to which they had journeyed, in order that those who were in danger of the avenger of blood might find a safe refuge until their cases could be tried by the Levites. These cities of refuge were a type of the Christ, and in figure illustrate the service which Christ was to perform for a lost and ruined race. God sent His Son into the world to establish for man a refuge from sin and its consequences. Death presses so hard upon the heels of the guilty sinner who is in peril of everlasting destruction. What a thrilling sight it must have been in those old Jewish days to see the affrighted runner fleeing for his life towards the city of refuge, while pressing hard after him was the man who would take his life. What a desperate race it was! The Levites of the walls of the city would watch with bated breath. They note the waning strength of the foremost runner, and observe that the pursuer is slowly but surely gaining upon him. With bulging, bloodshot eyes, distended nostrils and deep-heaving chest the men plunge on. The hand is uplifted to strike. Another step, and the keen, heartless blade will find its scabbard in the quivering flesh and drink the life blood of the fleeing man.

WITH a power born of desperation the pursued man gathers up all the remaining strength he can command and makes one mighty plunge towards the haven of safety and the friends who are there to receive him. Will he make it? Pursuer and pursued leap into the air together. The plunge of the hindmost man is greater. The first falls in helpless exhaustion, and the other in his leap hovers just the barest instant above him, and then, nerving the arm and hand with all the strength that is left, he brings the dagger down. Too late, you cry! At the very portals of the city of refuge he must perish! Ah, no, thank God! The arms of the waiting Levites reach out to save. The willing hands take hold where the other's strength has failed, and while the avenging blade is cutting the air in its fierce downward plunge, the prostrate form is lifted within the gates. He is safe! He is safe! And never a soul that flees for refuge to Christ is overtaken by the avenger, Death. The race is desperate. All seems to be lost, but in that moment of helplessness, in that time of imminent peril when sin is seeking to inflict its deadly wound, at just that instant the arms of Jesus reach out and down and lift in gracious, loving, tender grasp to the place of safety at His side. He receiveth sinful men, and none who come to Him are ever cast out. If the cause of the refugee was not just; if he had killed in wilful anger, then he was delivered up into the hands of the avenger of blood. But here is where the type is defective and fails to set forth the perfect work of grace which Jesus performs for the sinner. The guiltless only were sheltered within the city of refuge. The guilty are sheltered within the refuge which Christ affords. He came not to [illegible]. He receiveth sinners. He receiveth sinners in the world's worst. He receiveth sinners and only sinners.

NEW EVOLUTION THEORY.

Scientist Who Disputes Darwin Idea Tells of Important Discoveries in Plant Life.

Professor Hugo de Vries, director of the Botanical Gardens, Amsterdam, and scientist who disputes Darwin's theory of the "origin of species," explained his views at length at the New York Botanical Garden recently.

Prof. De Vries differs with Darwin in asserting that a new species of plant may be seen to develop at once from the parent plant, while Darwin's theory demands many generations, marked by innumerable minor differences and years of time.

Prof. De Vries bases his conclusions upon actual experiment, and although his earlier investigations covered a wide field, his best and most conclusive results were obtained through careful culture and observation of the evening primrose. Twelve new species derived from the original varieties were described at length by Prof. De Vries, and their differences were further illustrated by colored plates and lantern slides.

Dr. De Vries's discoveries have led to the establishment of a laboratory at Cold Spring Harbor, where the investigation of evolution in both the plant and animal kingdoms will be conducted for at least half a century at the expense of the Carnegie institution. Experiments conducted by Dr. D. T. MacDougal at the New York Botanical Garden since Prof. De Vries presented the results of his researches to the world of science have already confirmed several important features of Dr. De Vries's discoveries.

REVIVES; THEN DIES AGAIN

After Being Pronounced Dead Man Comes to Life, Creates Terror and Expires.

Given up by a physician as dead, Frank McCormick, of Guttenburg, N. Y., returned to life just as an undertaker called to embalm his body. Then, after ordering the undertaker away, McCormick was seized with another attack of the ailment which had first prostrated him, and died within a few minutes.

Word was again sent to the undertaker, who lives in New York, but he refused to respond.

McCormick had been ill several days with a severe attack of dysentery. A doctor who was summoned worked over him for several hours, and then, turning to those about the man's bedside, said that McCormick was dead.

A death watch was set beside McCormick's bed. The men at the bedside had already begun their vigil when the supposed dead man suddenly moved and groaned. The watchers fled and summoned the physician, but while they were waiting for him the undertaker arrived. He insisted upon seeing McCormick, and when he went into the room the man who had come back to life murmured that he didn't want to be disturbed. Upon hearing this the undertaker promptly fled.

Then the doctor arrived. McCormick again lapsed into unconsciousness, and the physician, after applying every test known to his profession, declared that no trace of life remained.

Strong Breath, Too.

Fortunes in fancy farming continually stagger the imagination. Fourteen acres of onions in Indiana have this year yielded their cultivators a clear profit of $10,000. The profitableness of raising this vegetable with modern machinery fairly takes one's breath away.

Not Necessarily a Nice Girl.

Surgeons lately relieved an Ohio young woman of 51 needles that were scattered through various parts of her anatomy. The Chicago Tribune remarks she must have been a girl with many fine points about her.

HIS NAME IN GOOD BOOK.

Indiana Man Had Been Heard Of Even in the Wilds of Colorado.

"Because my name is Lord, I frequently have not a few funny experiences," said J. G. Lord, of Muncie, Ind., according to the Lonsville Herald. "One of the most amusing incidents I ever had by reason of my name happened while I was driving from town to town in Colorado. While on the road one day, driving very slowly, for I had plenty of time, I chanced to notice by the roadside a young fellow about 16 years old, dressed in as ragged a fashion as anyone you could ever conceive of. He had on a pair of his father's worn-out trousers, which were cut off at the bottom, and which extended far up on his body, almost to his shoulders. More as a matter of personal amusement than for any other reason, I asked him how far it was to the next town.

"'Bout six miles, I reckon,' he replied.

"I reined up my horse.

"'Do you have any fun out here?' I asked.

"'Yep; heap.'

"'What is your name?' I asked him.

"'Willie,' he replied; 'Willie Hawks.

"I started to drive on, but he called after me, asking me to stop.

"'Say, mister,' he asked, 'and what mout your name be?'

"'Lord,' I answered; 'Mr. Lord.'

"And then he grinned. He grinned all the way to the armholes of his father's pants.

"'Why'd you smile?' I asked. 'Have you ever heard of me?'

"'Sure: I've heard pop read of yer in that good book, but I never saw yer afore.'

"And he continued to grin as I drove on."

ASKED A PERSONAL FAVOR.

Lawyer Wanted Judge to Relieve Him of a Somewhat Dangerous Duty.

One of the most picturesque figures of the New York bar was the late Thomas Nolan, a lawyer whose witty retorts furnished subjects for merriment at many a lawyers' gathering. Now, Nolan was at one time counsel for a poor widow who was suing a construction company for the death of her husband, relates Success. The case had been placed upon the day calendar, but had been frequently postponed, and Mrs. Moriarity, by the time she had made her fifth call, was in an exceedingly disturbed frame of mind. Consequently the tones of Nolan's rich brogue were more than usually fervid as he fought against the sixth adjournment.

"I am sorry," said Justice Dugro, "but your opponent has shown me good cause for the adjournment, Mr. Nolan, and the case will therefore go over until to-morrow."

"Very well, sor," said the barrister, sweetly, "but might I ask wan personal favor of this court?"

"Certainly, sir, with pleasure."

"Will your honor kindly shtep down to my office and just tell Mrs. Moriarity that you have adjourned the case?"

Smith, of this place, is a well man again and those who have watched his return to health unhesitatingly give all the credit to Dodd's Kidney Pills. In an interview regarding his case, Mr. Smith says:

"I had been low for eighteen months with my back and kidneys and also Epilepsy. I had taken everything I knew of and nothing seemed to do me any good till a friend of mine got me to send for Dodd's Kidney Pills. I find that they are the greatest medicine in the world, for now I am able to work and am in fact as stout and strong as before I took sick."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys. Cured Kidneys cleanse the blood of all impurities. Pure blood means good health.

Santa Fe Engines at World's Fair.

All the world loves a locomotive. There is something lifelike about the iron monster that whisks us at a mile a minute pace across the country. It seems to be a person, not a thing. The crowds who have been recently watching the test of Santa Fe engine No. 997 (a Baldwin of 175 tons weight) in Machinery Hall, World's Fair grounds, St. Louis, will testify to fascination unexplainable. Not merely the size, nor the wheels going around, nor the throbbing steam—but all these and more. The engineer at the throttle and the fireman at the furnace door share the general admiration.

The test showed conclusively that the prairie type used by the Santa Fe in hauling its fastest passenger flyers represents the best achievement of modern engine building.

I am sure Piso's Cure for Consumption saved my life three years ago.—Mrs. Thos. Robbins, Norwich, N. Y., Feb. 17, 1900.

Money may command obeisance but it can never purchase love.

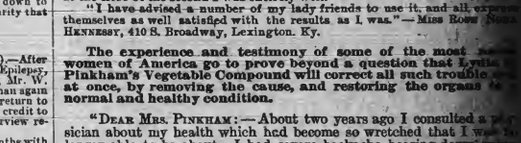
Miss Rose Hennessy, well known as a poetess and elocutionist, of Lexington, Ky., tells how she was cured of uterine inflammation and ovaritis by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been so blessedly helped through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I feel it but just to acknowledge it, hoping that it may help some other woman suffering as I did.

"For years I enjoyed the best of health and thought that I would always do so. I attended parties and receptions thinly clad, and would get chilled, but I did not think of the results. I caught a bad cold eight months ago while menstruating, and this caused inflammation of the uterus and congested ovaries. I suffered excruciating pains and kept getting worse. My attention was called to your Vegetable Compound and the wonderful cures it had performed, and I made up my mind to try it for two months to see what it would do for me. Within one month I felt much better, and at the close of the second I was entirely well.

"I have advised a number of my lady friends to use it, and all express themselves as well satisfied with the results as I was."—Miss Rose Hennessy, 410 S. Broadway, Lexington, Ky.

The experience and testimony of some of the most noted women of America go to prove beyond a question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all such troubles at once, by removing the cause, and restoring the organs to normal and healthy condition.



"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—About two years ago I consulted a physician about my health which had become so wretched that I was no longer able to be about. I had severe backache, bearing-down pains across the abdomen, was very nervous and irritable, and this trouble grew worse each month. The physician prescribed for me, but I soon discovered that he was unable to help me, and I then decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and soon found that it was doing me good. My appetite was returning, the pains disappearing, and the general benefits were well marked.

"You cannot realize how pleased I was, and after taking the medicine for only three months, I found that I was completely cured of my trouble, and have been well and hearty ever since, and no more fear the monthly period, as it now passes without pain to me. Yours very truly, Miss Pearl Ackers, 327 North Summer St., Nashville, Tenn."

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health more than a million women, you cannot well say without trying, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, do not hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Her advice is free and helpful. Write to-day. Delay may be fatal.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness. Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets are becoming a favorite for stomach troubles and constipation. For sale by all Druggists.

When a farmer starts to catch a lot of chickens to bring to town they look mighty big and fat, but when the grocer in town picks them up, and looks at them, they look mighty small.

The board of health in one of the larger South American cities recently offered a bounty of ten cents for every dead rat taken to them. A company was at once formed by one of the leading renegades of the place and rats imported by the thousand. The company got rich before the plan of campaign was discovered.

A young man once took a sack of corn to an old fashioned mill to have it ground into meal. The mill was fearful slow, only a tiny stream of meal trickling out. At last the young man became impatient and complained to the miller. "Do you know," he said. "I could eat that meal faster than your old mill can grind it." "Yes," replied the miller, "but how long could you keep on eating it?" "Until I starved," was the conclusive answer of the young man.

Old Uncle Frank McFadden, a reliable old negro, tells one of the most remarkable snake stories on record. For some time Uncle Frank's horse has been on the eve of death, with a large knot on his neck, but on Friday evening the animal vomited a snake measuring four feet long. After this remarkable occurrence the swelling disappeared from the horse's neck, and the animal is now on the road to recovery.—Fulton Leader.

There are dogs in New York that never set foot on the street. They belong to the janitors in the downtown buildings, and their runways consist of the roof of the building in which their owners live and adjoining roofs on the same level. That is a rare day when the office worker on looking out the tenth story window does not see a half dozen dogs romping about upon the roofs beneath him. There is one advantage at least it being a roof dog—the dog catcher has no terrors for him.

At the Coroner's inquest on the victims of the North sea tragedy the jury returned a verdict that the men were killed by shots fired "without warning or provocation" from the Russian war vessels. The captains and mates of the rawlers testified that they had no arms on board; that no Japanese were among their crew and that they saw no torpedo boats. The Russian vessels fired without regarding the signals of the fishing fleet. The negotiations between Russia and Great Britain, it is stated in London, are progressing satisfactorily.

We are accustomed to think of large cannon as a very recent invention. Yet as long ago as 1543 a certain Ralph Hogge of Buckstead, in Sussex, cast large guns, and a pupil of his, Thos. Johnson, in 1595, made for the Earl of Cumberland "forty-two cast pieces of great ordnance of iron." These weighed 6,000 pounds—three tons—apiece, and we are told, showed very fine, smooth workmanship. All the smelting was done with charcoal, of which it took three tons to melt each ton of iron. Also all the ore was carried from the mine on pack horses, which took a load of about 300 pounds each. The immense amount of labor and consequent expense may be imagined.

The Chinese have a method of hatching the spawn of fish, and thus protecting it from the accidents which generally destroy a large portion of it. The fishermen collect from the margin and surface of water all those gelatinous masses which contain the spawn of fish, and after they have found a sufficient quantity they fill with it the shell of a hen's egg, which they have previously emptied, stop up the hole and put it under a setting fowl. At the expiration of a certain number of days they break the shell in water warmed by the sun. The young fry are presently hatched, and are kept in pure fresh water till they are large enough to be thrown into the pond with the old fish.

Expert horsemen believe that a horse can be taught to do anything that is possible for an animal so formed, and to be utterly fearless. Thus, of horses rushing into battle with a fearlessness that is magnificent, although in the beginning of their lives they may have been foolishly timid, shying at everything unusual that happened to be seen in their travels.

In order to teach a horse fearlessness he must be accustomed to all sorts of sights and sounds. He must come to know that because something that he sees or hears is unusual it does not follow that it is harmful. For it is the unusual things that frighten him. The horse is an animal of one idea at a time, and is not able to discriminate, so say the men who have made a study of the horse.

While he will travel along quietly close by the roar of a train he may tremble at the flutter of a piece of loose paper flying in the wind. It is not the frightfulness of the object that seems to alarm him, but the unfamiliarity of it. Horse trainers say that the mistake made in "breaking" and training a colt is that it is too often done in the seclusion of some country road, instead of amid the sights and sounds that the animal must necessarily become familiar with later.

As soon as the horse becomes familiar with anything and has learned to believe that it will not hurt him, he will stand quietly or trot along peacefully, even though all sorts of noises and queer sights are about him. Thus the artillery horse will stand amid the roar of cannon, being used to the noise and not knowing that the sound predicts anguish and death. It is well to accustom a horse to unusual sounds as soon as possible after he is trained for riding or driving. It renders him safe and docile, even though he be a spirited animal.

A certain trainer of horses said that an ideal school for horses would contain threshing machines pile drivers, steam drills, electric steam and elevated cars, a band of martial music and a gang of quarrymen blasting rocks. A horse that was drilled among such a bedlam as this would, indeed, prove immune to strange noises.

It might very naturally be supposed that, after having reposed her whole love and trust in a man only to have the same ruthlessly trampled upon, a girl's faith in men in general would be utterly destroyed, making her an undesirable wife. It does not necessarily follow, however, that because a girl has been disappointed in one love affair that she is going to develop into an old maid, who never misses an opportunity of warning all girls against marriage.

There are some girls, of course, who find it almost impossible to recover from the bitter experience of being jilted. The shock and humilation are so great that they regard all men with contempt and even hatred, and view with distrust each member of the opposite sex with whom they come in contact. Such girls have very little to reccommend them for the position of wife, for, although there is some justification for their mistrust of men, it is only a narrow-minded girl who will blame the majority for the faults of the few.

The wise girl recognizes that it is better to be jilted before marriage than neglected when there is no escape. Although the experience is a bitter one, she will look upon it as a special act of Providence that she has been fortunate enough to discover the fickle nature of the man she at one time loved, before bound to him by marriage ties. And she will appreciate all the more the love of the one she knows to be good and true, and even find cause to be thankful to the one who has jilted her, seeing that otherwise she would not have discovered the man to make her life truly happy.

Some men might possibly hesitate to marry a girl who had been jilted, on the ground that it is not possible for her to love twice, and that the experience of her first lover's deceit would probably cause her at times to harbor suspicion against her husband.

This is a very much mistaken idea. It is quite possible for a young woman to love twice, more especially when the first love has been destroyed by jilting. And if the man she marries shows himself to be a true husband in every sense of the word, with a desire to make her life happy, the mere comparison of him with the one who jilted her would make nearly any woman thankful that she had after all discovered the man to make her life happy and cause her to resolve to make herself worthy of her husband's love.—New Orleans Picayune.

Relative to an inquiry concerning skim milk and pigs, will say that when two weeks old the young pig will begin to take skim milk from a separate trough. Of course, only a little will be consumed at that time, but it should be supplied two or three times daily at first, and twice daily later. At first skim milk alone may be given, but later cornmeal, barley meal or middlings should be added. Allow the young pig to eat practically all it will of the combination. Often it is best to have the trough from which the pigs feed in a special inclosure where the pigs can reach it, while the dam is kept away. If this plan is followed the pigs will gradually wean themselves when about ten weeks old, or at least there will be no trouble in finally separating them from the dam.

Carefully conducted experiments at this station have shown that to get the largest returns from both milk and meal, not over three pounds of skim milk should be given for each pound of cornmeal or other grain. Where one has large quantities of milk he may feed as much as from six to nine pounds of milk with each pound of grain, but in that case the returns are not so economical as where the milk does not run over three pounds for each pound of grain.

There is no better single feed for pigs than skim milk. Often where large numbers of pigs are handled there are runts or pigs of condition, undersized, etc. Always separate these from the main lot and feed them separately, giving special care. One will be surprised to see how the unlikely specimens will improve with a little care and extra allowance of milk and grain.—Prof. W. A. Henry, in Hoard's Dairyman.

American farmers are the most intelligent tillers of soil in the world. An example of this is shown in the improved agricultural machinery of this country as compared with that of other countries. A large part of this machinery is due to the inventions of the farmers themselves. In selling farm machinery in foreign countries, the greatest drawback to the development of the trade is the ignorance of the farmer classes. One American firm's trade has been so hindered that it has decided to start a school of training for farmers' sons at Orusk, Russia, where the principles of mechanics as applied to farm machinery will be taught.

Livestock experts are predicting that the big money of the next few years to be made in stock will be gathered in by the breeders of mules. "The hemp outlook is better now than it has been for a long time," said Mr. W. J. Loughridge, President of the American Hemp Company. "The Canadian flax crop is short. Flax cannot be profitably raised in Canada without cheap labor of that territory has crossed over the line into this country. The Russian hemp crop is 50 per cent. short. There has been a strong advance in India hemp or jute, as it is called. Another thing tobacco prices have been so high for the past two years that farmers have found it more profitable to raise tobacco than to raise hemp and consequently the hemp crop in this country is not so large as it would have been." The price of hemp now is $5.24, but Mr. Loughridge expects an early increase.—Ex.

In the death of Geo. W. Utz, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. C. Hankins, near Hebron, last Thursday evening another substantial citizen has been removed. Mr. Utz was a member of one of the oldest and best families of Boone county, the first Utz family having settled here when this part of Kentucky was but little better than a wilderness, and his family has been an unassuming people but of the most honorable and upright citizens. Mr. Utz's wife died many years ago, after their two children, Julius Utz, of Crittenden county, and Mrs. J. C. Hankins, of this county were grown. Mr. Utz was 72 years of age and as good a citizen as Boone county ever had. He had been in poor health for many years, at times a great sufferer, but his every want was looked after by his devoted daughter and her husband, and his last days were made as comfortable as it was possible.

A Godly Man Gone.

George W. Utz was born May 26, 1831, and died Nov. 4th, 1904. He united with the Pt. Pleasant Christian church in Oct., 1894. Two children, a son and daughter, Mrs. J. C. Hankins, survive him. The funeral was conducted by the writer at Hopeful church, Nov. 6, 1904. The day was an ideal one; the leaves dropping from the trees seemed symbolical of the death of this godly man. The church was full of his friends and relatives, a mark of the esteem in which he was held. While all were sorrowful, yet they sorrowed simply because of separation. Truly do we know that, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

E. C. R.

D. B. Roberts, brother of ex-county Judge C. C. Roberts, died of Bright's disease at his home in Verona at 5 o'clock a. m. last Friday, in the 55th year of his age. He leaves a widow, one son and two daughters and a large circle of friends to mourn his death. Boone Roberts was a man who made friends of all with whom he came in contact. He was a correct, upright gentleman, never swerving in his friendship. In his death the community has been deprived of a valuable member, one whose presence will long be missed.

Riley-England.

The wedding of Garnett C. Riley and Miss Fannie S. England was solemnized at the home of the bride in Zanesville, O., on Wednesday Nov. 2. Mr. Riley is a native of Boone County Ky., son of ex-assessor G. M. Riley, and his many friends will be glad to learn of his marriage to Miss England, the charming and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James G. England, a wealthy railroad magnate and prominent business man of Zanesville, O. After a wedding breakfast at the bride's home, the happy couple went to Dayton, O., where a reception in their honor was given by Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Waynan. Many friends of both the bride and groom were present. Mr. Riley and wife remained in Dayton until Saturday and during their sojourn in that city several social events were arranged for them. On Saturday they left for Ironton, O., where they will make their home, as Mr. Riley holds the position of Manager of the Bell Telephone Co. in that city. We cannot but see a brilliant future in store for them for with Mr. Riley's popularity with all he comes in contact with and his wife's beauty and admirable disposition, congeniality and happiness is the certain result. ***

TEN MINERS KILLED.

A Cage Containing Them Fell 1,800 Feet Down a Shaft.

Nine of the Bodies Were Recovered, the Heads and Trunks of Some Being Horribly Crushed—Remains Brought Up in Buckets.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 3.—An accident occurred at the new Auchincloss shafe of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Coal Co. at Nanticoke resulting in ten miners being dashed to their death down 1,800 feet from the surface to a sump filled with water. Several other mine workers at the head of the shaft were waiting to descend, were injured.

The direct responsibility for the accident can not be learned, but it was caused by the engineer losing control of his engine. The car with its human load was dashed beyond the Ross vein landing, 1,000 feet below the surface and into the sump, 800 feet below, where no human aid could reach them.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 4.—The bodies of nine of the ten miners who were killed at the Auchincloss colliery in Nanticoke Wednesday were removed from the sump at the foot of the shaft Thursday. All were horribly crushed and mangled by the fall, some 1,800 feet, and the identification is difficult.

Arms and legs were torn from the trunks of some of the victims while the heads and trunks of others were crushed to a jelly. The work of recovery was exceedingly difficult and the rescuers braved extreme danger in recovering the bodies.

Pitiful scenes were witnessed at the mouth of the shaft when the severed remains were brought to the surface in buckets which had been rigged up.

The widows, orphans and other relatives surrounded the shaft during all of Wednesday night and Thursday night. When the first body reached the surface its condition was such that the officials refused to allow any one to see the remains. The bodies of all the victims were carefully wrapped up before they were brought to the surface and were taken to an undertaker's morgue to be prepared for burial when the relatives will be allowed to identify and claim their dead.

RESERVOIR BROKE.

Caused the Loss of Nine Lives and Injury to Four or Five Others.

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 3.—A reservoir of the municipal water works, located near the center of Winston Salem, N. C., broke at 5 o'clock Wednesday morning, causing the loss of nine lives and the injury of four or five persons.

The dead are: Mrs. Martin Peeples, Mrs. Volger, Mrs. John Poe and 12-year-old daughter, Mrs. Southern, John Southern, Miss Octavia Bailey, aged 20, Lucille Malone and Carolina Martin. The last two named are colored.

The injured: Martin V. Peeples, both legs broken; Walter Peeples, injury to back; Gilley Jordan, slightly bruised. These are at the hospital.

D. L. Payne, a traveling man of Greensboro, was badly hurt but may recover, though his condition prevents his removal to the hospital now.

The north side of the reservoir, which is 30 feet high, tumbled over, falling upon the home and barn of Martin Peeples. There were about 800,000 gallons of water in the reservoir and the mad rush of the stream northeast to the Southern railway cut and thence to Belos Pond, a distance of half a mile. Four tenement houses were washed several hundred yards.

D. L. Payne, injured, says he was awakened by the crash and thought he was being swallowed by an earthquake. "I can not describe my experience while I was floating on the mad rushing stream of water," said Mr. Payne after his removal to a house near the place where he was found.

The mayor and aldermen of this city have directed that coffins and graves be prepared for those who lost their lives beneath the rush of water.

The work of rescue was completed Wednesday afternoon. The following additional bodies were recovered:

Mrs. Vegler, John Southern, Miss Octavia Bailey and Lucille Malone, colored.

SUPPLEMENTAL TREATY.

The Rate on International Money Orders Decreased.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Postmaster General Wynne Thursday signed a supplemental treaty with the Hungarian government relating to money orders passing between the two countries. Under its terms the rate of commission paid by the country of origin to the country of payment is reduced from one-half of one per cent. to one-fourth of one per cent. This applies to all classes of international money orders. At the same time it affects a corresponding reduction in the fees charged for the use of money orders in the United States, as well as the use of the money orders in Hungary. So far as this country is concerned the fees are reduced to from eight cents to 50 cents, whereas formerly they were from ten cents to one dollar. The money order business with Austro-Hungary is said to amount to between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 and it is believed here that under the new treaty this amount will be increased.

THE HUMANITARIANS.

Favor Government Board to Study Protection of Children.

Present System of the Education of Children Is Far From Satisfactory—They Are Trained in the Art of Crusity.

St. Louis, Nov. 5.—The board of directors of the American Humane association has been instructed by a resolution adopted at the final session of the association convention, held Friday on the World's fair grounds, to draft and secure the passage by congress of a bill providing for the creation of a government board to study the protection of children and animals and urge and suggest means for its accomplishment.

A resolution was adopted thanking Gov. Dockery for his efforts to suppress bull fighting in the neighborhood of the World's fair grounds.

In a paper, read by Mrs. Anna Harris Smith, of Boston, prepared by Mrs. Theodore Thomas, of Chicago, president of the Anti-Cruelty society, it was stated:

"The present system of the education of children is far from satisfactory. Children are trained in the art of cruelty. Their earliest toys generate in them that spirit. One of the first things given to a boy is a whip, then he is presented with a set of tin soldiers, and when the lad goes out of doors he receives a toy gun with which he amuses himself in killing innocent creatures. There is nothing to be fitted for the wholesome development of the other trades of character of a child than care for the protection of animals and the study of nature. Another objection to the education of children is that they are given more liberties than at their youthful age they know how to employ."

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Dr. Alfred Leffingwell, of Aurora, N. Y.; secretary, Mrs. Mary P. Lovell, of Wyandotte, Pa.; treasurer, Alfred Millard, of Omaha.

CHINESE WOMEN ARRESTED.

Charged With Being In This Country For An Unlawful Purpose.

St. Louis, Nov. 5.—Six Chinese women who have been connected with a concession on the Pike at the World's fair were arrested by Immigration Inspector A. C. Ridgeway on warrants charging them with being in this country for unlawful purposes. Ho Hung, who attempted to end her life Thursday night because she preferred death to returning to China after the World's fair, was among those arrested.

The arrests are understood to have been caused by the alleged confession of a Chinese woman who was detained at San Francisco several months. On the strength of this alleged confession Lee Toy, concessionaire of the World's fair village, and Hyppolite De Silva, his agent, who went to China after the girls, were arrested.

YOUNG GIRL MURDERED.

She Was On Her Way Home From Her Work.

Cincinnati, Nov. 4.—Almost an exact counterpart of the Lulu Mueller murder in Lover's lane, Cumminsville, was reported to the police early Thursday. Terribly cut and crushed about the head, the dead body of Alma Steinigeweg, 18, of McMakin avenue, Winton Place, was found Thursday morning at the foot of Winton road, between Spring Grove avenue and Mill creek.

Positive evidence that a brutal murder, possibly more shocking than that of Lulu Mueller, had been committed, was adduced as soon as Coroner Weaver arrived and the body was turned over.

Down the back of the young victim were unmistakable evidences that she had been dragged, thus disposing of the possibility that she had been struck by a street car. From the middle of the track a trail of blood, which had dripped from frightful wounds in the head, led to the spot where the body lay.

There were two significant things discovered. The first was that her raiment was disarranged, as though in a desperate struggle for life or honor. The second, discovered by painstaking and almost microscopic search of every inch of the ground where the body was found, was a safety pin of the sort usually worn by women. This was crushed into the ground by a boot heel, of which the imprint was very easily discernible.

THE STOLEN COPE.

It Was Presented to the Italian Govment By J. Pierpont Morgan.

The presentation was made through Baron Edmondo Des Planches, the Italian ambassador, who called by appointment on Mr. Morgan in this city Thursday.

The cope was presented by Pope Nicholas IV. to Ascoli, his native place. It is a French work of the 13th century and is one of the finest specimens of fetial art of that period that have been preserved.

It was in 1902 that the cope was stolen by an Italian from the cathedral of Ascoli while repairs were being made on the building.

Mrs. Mary E. Meserve, of Salisbury, Mass., was cured of Anæmia, a disease in which there is an actual deficiency of the blood, by the use of

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People

She says: "The first symptom was an unusual paleness. Later the blood seemed to have all left my body. I had shortness of breath and fluttering of the heart; was depressed, morose and peevish. I suffered for two years. Physicians did me little good but I am now a well woman because I took twelve boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

These pills really make new blood and have cured obstinate cases of rheumatism, scrofula and erysipelas. They are especially useful to growing girls.

W. J. Hill, of Concord, N. C., Justice of the Peace, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills proved a very efficient remedy in my case. I used them for disordered kidneys and backache, from which I had experienced a great deal of trouble and pain. The kidney secretions were very irregular, dark colored and full of sediment. The Pills cleared it all up and I have not had an ache in my back since taking the last dose. My health generally is improved a great deal."

THE EARTH TREMBLED

Terrific Bombardment of Por Arthur by Japs.

Their Losses Were Very Heavy—The Indications Are That the Final and Successful Engagement is About to Take Place.

London, Nov. 4.—The Daily Telegraph's Che Foo correspondent, telegraphing Thursday, says that the Japanese losses during the last assault on Port Arthur were heavier than on any of the previous attacks. The bombardment, he says, was so fierce that the streets of Dalny were said to tremble as though from an earthquake. The same paper's correspondent with Gen. Oku, under date of November 2, says that the indications are that a terrific engagement is about to commence.

London, Nov. 5.—The Daily Mail's Che Foo correspondent has obtained a letter from a Russian in Port Arthur dated October 27 in which the writer declares that it would need the pen of a Zola or the brush of Haerestchagin to picture the awfulness of the siege. The letter continues:

"The uncanny part of it all is that men meet death in utter silence. One sees the fiercest of fights but hears no sound. One moonlight night at Etse mountain I watched an assault of a ghostly mass of moving figures, through which continual lanes were made by our guns, admitting glimpses of scenes behind. These gaps were closed up as if by magic, and the masses surged onward while our men, forsaking the trenches, sought the shelter of the forts. On they came until, when they were close up to us, the mines exploded and the earth opened. Bodies were hurled high in the air, and then sank again to earth. Hands clutched rifles, and in the moonlight the bayonets looked like fire works shooting upwards and ascending point downwards into the bodies of men. I dream of the sight even now.

"All the inventions of military genius are not able to daunt the Japanese, who fight with Titanic energy. Our soldiers are gladiators and great hearted heroes.

"The last sortie of the fleet failed because of inability to repair vessels previously damaged. We have not a single bottle of anaesthetics left. Just think what agony the wounded must endure. The food is of the coarsest and even that is becoming scarce, while disease is rife and sanitary conditions are deplorable. It is impossible to repair the ships with out scant resources; but we are all determined to hold out, come what will, in the hope of relief. For every man we lose our foes hemoan the loss of a hundred."

Che Foo, Nov. 7.—As the result of months of preparation Vladivostok is now strongly protected, according to Capt. Halversen, of the Norwegian steamer Tungues, which arrived here five days out from that port with 700 Chinese refugees who were unable to live at Vladivostok any longer owing to the high prices of food and other necessaries due to the war.

Capt. Halversen says the Vladivostok system of fortifications begins many miles outside the city proper and grows stronger as the city is approached.

Ships laden with food, cannon, ammunition and all sorts of military supplies frequently arrive at Vladivostok. The European residents of Vladivostok show their confidence in the security of the city by evidencing an unwillingness to leave it.

If the Japanese make an attempt to capture Vladivostok it is the belief of Capt. Halversen that they will find it to be a second Port Arthur.

The harbor of Vladivostok, he says, has been mined for a distance of some seven miles. In four miles of this area, contact mines have been laid while in the remaining three miles electric mines have been planted.

THE AIRSHIP RACES.

The Greatest Demonstration in That Line Will Take Place in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Nov. 7.—Unless the weather conditions interfere the greatest demonstration of airships in the history of the world will take place at the World's fair aeronautic concourse beginning Tuesday.

Housed in the aerodrome are five flying machines, embodying as many different principles and varying in size from the monster airship invented and built by Hippolyte Francois, of Paris, France, with its immense gas bag containing 65,000 cubic feet of hydrogen gas, to the comparatively small balloon belonging to A. L. Reynolds, of Los Angeles, Cal., which, when fully inflated, has a capacity of only 5,000 cubic feet.

In principle of population, the airships vary as widely as they do in size. Two of them come to the World's fair with records of successful flights, one of which, the Baldwin "California Arrow," has demonstrated here on two occasions that it is dirigible and not dependent upon currents of air for its momentum.

Tuesday the first flight is scheduled in the contest for the grand prize of $100,000 offered by the Louisiana purchase exposition under the following conditions:

Course to be "L" shaped, start to be made at the angle of the "L" and the length of the full course not less than ten miles nor more than 15.

Number of trials allowed unlimited, but each competitor must make the full course at least three times.

"The winning time shall be the average of the three best trips, provided that this average time he at least 20 miles an hour.

The last qualification has so far proved the stumbling block to the various aeronauts [illegible] the World's fair. They claim [illegible] the rate of speed prescribed is excessive and impossible to attain for so great a distance.

ARCHBISHOP'S REMAINS.

Removed From the Seton Hospital to St. Peter's Cathedral.

Cincinnati, Nov. 7.—The removal of the remains of Archbishop Elder from Seton hospital to St. Peter's cathedral Sunday was one of the most numerously attended occasions in the history of Cincinnati. Along the line of march of the solemn procession of clergy, parish school children, Catholic societies and others, even the house tops were crowded. The police had hard work to clear an exit at the hospital and later an entrance to the cathedral. At the hospital Archbishop Moeller, Chancellor Dutton and Father Nau chanted the De Profundis. When the archbishop and the clergy received the remains at the cathedral, the Franciscan Fathers chanted the office of the dead, the Vespers. Then the waiting multitude passed through to view the remains.

WOULD-BE ROBBERS.

Two Attempts to Hold Up the Same Train in Maryland.

One Bandit Tried to Break Down the Express Car Door and Was Fired Upon by the Messenger—The Desperadoes Escaped.

Philadelphia, Nov. 7.—According to the crew of the Philadelphia and New York express train on the Pennsylvania railroad, which left Washington at 6:50 Sunday night, two unsuccessful attempts were made to hold up the train at Havre de Grace and Perryville, in Maryland, by two men, one of whom was a Negro. The men escaped.

It is believed the men boarded the train at Baltimore. Just as the train approached the long bridge at Havre de Grace, the express messenger, T. Herbert Carter, saw a white man prying at the front door of the express car with an iron bar. A moment after he discovered this the man thrust a revolver through a crevice which the bar had made. He ordered the messenger to let him in, but the messenger replied by firing his revolver and pulling the signal cord for the engineer to stop.

When the train came to a stop Conductor Sibley ran forward to the engine and there found a colored man standing on the coal in the tender with a revolver in hand. He ordered the man down. At first he refused, but after a short argument he left the tender. Going back to the express car he was told by the messenger what had happened, but the white man had disappeared.

The train resumed its journey and when it reached Perryville, on the farther side of the bridge, the two men again appeared, one on the tender and the other on the front platform of the express car which was immediately behind the tender. The train was again promptly stopped, but before the two men could be captured they disappeared in the darkness.

At Wilmington, Del., the conductor reported the matter and telegrams were sent to Baltimore, Perryville, Havre de Grace and other points along the line to intercept the men, if possible. The express car was carrying a large quantity of produce in crates and boxes, but under some burlap bags were three small iron safes in which there was valuables.

The conductor says the engineer and fireman of the locomotive saw the Negro on the tender, but as they were not armed they could do nothing.

Negotiations Instituted Between the United States and Germany.

Washington, Nov. 5.—Negotiations have been initiated for a treaty of arbitration between Germany and the United States. Several days ago President Roosevelt suggested to Baron Sternburg, the German ambassador, that a treaty of arbitration between the United States and Germany would, in his judgment, be very desirable. Ambassador Sternburg coincided with this view and told the president that he would inquire of his government what steps, if any, it desired to take in the matter. Late Friday afternoon Ambassador Sternburg called up President Roosevelt and informed him that the German government expressed itself as entirely agreeable to the president's proposition and that he had been directed to open formal negotiations for such a treaty. These negotiations will be conducted by Ambassador Sternburg on the part of Germany and Secretary Hay on the part of the United States.

RUSSIAN EXHIBITS.

They Were Closed By Order of the Exposition Management.

St. Louis, Nov. 5.—Russia's exhibits in two of the exhibit palaces at the World's fair were closed Friday by order of the exposition management. The cause of the closing was a reopening of the dispute between the fair management and foreign exhibitors relative to the payment of a percentage on cash sales at their exhibit booths.

President Francis said Friday night that under the rules of the division of exhibits governing the sale of exhibits at the fair, if exhibitors wish to sell from their spaces during the exposition period arrangement to that effect must be made, approved by the chief of the department, with the director of exhibits and with the director of concessions. STATE NEWS HAPPENINGS.

A NOVEL RECORD.

Kentuckians Drank Most of the Water at World's Fair.

St. Louis, Nov. 5.—Kentucky, famous for its whisky, has made a record on the water wagon, as will be evidenced by the statement that at the close of the Louisiana purchase exposition nearly 800,000 gallons of water will have been consumed in the Kentucky building at the World's fair.

No whisky has been bought by the Kentucky commission, and all that has been used was the gift of distillers of that state.

"Hundreds for water; not one cent for whisky," was the declaration made by the Kentucky commission at the opening of the exposition, and it has been carried out to the letter. The water bill of the commission at the end of the exposition will have amounted to $236.40, at the rate of three cents per gallon for 788,325 gallons.

For the use of Kentuckians and other visitors to the state pavilion a modern water fountain was installed, and that ice water was the more popular beverage among the men, who are sometimes alleged to have an especial fondness for something stronger, is attested by the enormous quantity consumed. It is understood that there is some whisky to be found in the building, but it has been used only for "medicinal" purposes.

SWEENEY WINS HIS BUST.

The Only Proclamation Issued By Gov. Goebel Was Void.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 3.—Former State Auditor John S. Sweeney, of Paris, won a $22,000 suit in the court of appeals Wednesday and incidentally the court decided that Gov. Goebel's only proclamation in which he commanded the soldiers to disband was not, in fact, an order that the soldiers should have obeyed, because it was not made known to them through the adjutant general.

Auditor Sweeney issued the warrants for about $28,000 to pay the Taylor soldiers and for their subsistence while on duty. After the democrats gained possession of the offices, suit was filed against Sweeney and the Fidelity Deposit Co. that gave his bond, to recover the money on the ground that it was paid without authority of law. The lower court gave judgment to the state for $22,000 and in reversing this judgment the court decided as above.

The girls are to take part in "The Daughter of the Regiment," to be given at Macauley's theater next Thursday evening for the benefit of the Confederate home. There has been much discussion as to the length of the skirts to be worn. Some wanted ankle "dips," while others insisted that shorter ones would present a better stage effect, and they would not appear in the longer ones. Rural Delivery in Kentucky.

Washington, Nov. 5.—Rural free delivery service will be established in Kentucky on December 1 as follows: Swango, Harrison county, route 20½ miles, population 841.

...ty or three years ago bitter complaints were heard throughout the country from men who were over 45 years of age. They said it was impossible for them to get jobs when out of work. The employers said they would have none but young men. The strongest complaints were heard from bookkeepers and clerks. To-day a more restricted employment line is being drawn, and workingmen are the sufferers. The Carnegie Steel Company have notice recently on reopening some of its plants that in certain departments no men over thirty-five would be employed. The Pennsylvania railroad has gone farther than that by discharging a number of road and shop men and station employes because they were hired after they had reached that age. Labor leaders see in this action a blow at the unions. They are apprehensive lest other great employers of labor will proclaim the same policy. Then what will become of the middle-aged men who usually have families dependent on them? They are the conservative men whom an employer should wish to keep. If a large employer were to announce when he began business that he would hire none but young men, because he wished to train them up to do his work as he wanted it done, and desired them to remain in his employ, if they pleased to do so, until they were quite worn out, there would be no ground for fault-finding. That is the policy of banks and mercantile houses. They select young people who grow up in the establishment. The Carnegie Steel Company and the Pennsylvania road to not say that that is their policy. For all that is known to the contrary it may be that they believe more work can be got of the average man of 25 or 35 than can be got for the same wages out of the average man of 40 or 45. Generally speaking, that is not the case. The older men, if they have taken any care of themselves are not deficient in physical vigor, and have had more experience than their juniors. Experience counts for a great deal in all trades. The proscription of workers for no other reason then that they are over 35 would be as heartless as it would be short-sighted. It would provoke a spirit or fierce resentment among all who have crossed that "dead line," as well as among those who are nearing it and see near at hand the day when they will be thrown contemptuously aside like squeezed lemons. Almost the whole community would rebel against such an infamous edict.

Why shouldn't American education be "feminized?" It is the women who seem to be interested in education.

It is the women who organize state and national associations for the discussion of the training of boys and girls. Where is the congress of fathers? It is dispersed through golf clubs and billiard clubs. It has gone out to sit on the bleachers at base ball games. It has sneaked through back alleys to prize fights. It has taken the afternoon train for the races. It is devoting most of the time it can spare from business to the development of the social, sportive and bibulous aspirations of the race.

It is the women who are willing to do the teaching while the men seek more remunerative occupations. Are they to be jeered at for it?

It is the women who organize clubs for co-operating with the teachers and for bringing the home and the school together in the preparation of future citizens. If the men wont give their leisure time to this they leave an opening, and if the women avail themselves of the opening, where does the blame lie?

It is the women who go to the legislature to present petitions for child labor bills. It is the women who take up the kindergarten movement and we push it. If the men allow the kindergarten movement to go by default who is responsible for its feminized sentimentality?

The women seem to be doing their best they can. It's not entirely their fault that they are feminine. If they could get a little masculine corroboration they would probably welcome it.

And as for the flubdub and bloodle and rot in mother's publications, have you ever read the political platforms promulgated by parties which are run by men?—Chicago Tribune.

The corn crop of this year, if massed together, would cover 60 acres of ground to the depth of nearly 1,600 feet—a veritable mountain of corn over a third of a mile high. If divided equally among the population of the earth it would give each person nearly two bushels. One practical result of the enormous corn crop ought to be a material reduction in the price of beef for home consumption, since it is the crop on which beef cattle are chie fly fed. In many parts of the West the harvest has been abundant, but in Oklahoma, especially farmers this year are boastful of their corn crop. Favorable climatic conditions produced a record-breaking yield. In many instances the ears and stalks are of such unusual size as to be veritable curiosities. In a field owned by Walter Mathews, a farmer near the town of Mulhall, in Logan County, an eleven year-old boy weighing 80 pounds climbed a stalk to a height of 4 feet without its bending with him. The stalk was strongly rooted, and about 16 feet high. While the growth in Oklahoma was exceptional, no traveler through the West this fall could fail to be impressed with the vastness of the corn area and the immensity of the crop.

Russia's weekly expenditure on the war with Japan is $5,486,250. Britain's war in South Africa, which cost all told the quite respectable sum of $1,059,740,000, worked out at $7,500,000 a week. France footed the heaviest war bill on record, the cost of the terrible conflict with Germany being $1,580,000,000, or over $35,000,000 a week. The total cost of the Crimean war was $1,565,000,000, of which Russia paid $700,000,000, France $465,000,000 and England $390,000,000. The weekly expenses of the three countries were: Russia, $7,000,000; France, $4,500,000; England, $3,500,000.

America's successful struggle for independence cost England $605,000,000, or just under $8,000,000 a week. We do not know what it cost us. Nobody ever will know. Congress was unable at its close to pay either officers or men of the army. In 1780 it promised half pay for life to all officers, but changed this in 1783 to full pay for five years. The total cost of our Civil War is estimated at $8,000,000,000, which makes other wars look small. The Napoleonic wars which ended at Waterloo were cheap affairs, costing France only $1,275,000,000. Great Britain's bill in that conflict amounted to $4,155,000,000.

We suppose every healthy minded American farmer is sympathizing with the brave little Japs in their contest with Gog and Magog the one-eyed monster of the eastern world. He naturally wants to see right, honor, skill, courage and patriotism win over greed, brutality and reactionary despotism, such as are represented by the Russians. Nor can the American farmer be said to be actuated by selfish motives in this, as the Japanese are not now or likely to become large consumers of American farm products. Their diet is simple in the extreme, and they are not consumers of meat of any kind or of flour. Their staple article of food is fish, and they eat this raw. At the date of the revolution of 1868-69 the best authorities say there was not a pound of meat or flesh food of any kind in Japan, no milk, butter or cheese. Even potatoes, cabbage and tomatoes were unknown. There were only a few flavorless and acrid fruits and a few common vegetables. One reason of this is that Buddhism, the prevailing religion, forbids killing of all kinds of animals. The missionaries of this same humane religion, while stopping the killing of game for food, taught their people to grow rice, wheat and other cereals and certain vegetables, such as radishes, turnips, onions and cucumbers. Those fine armies and navies that are winning their dashing victories over the beefy Russians, live almost exclusively on rice and raw fish. Considering their diet, the people of this meat and bread-eating country will be more than ever astonished at their achievements and pronouce them what they surely have proven themselves to be, the wonder of the modern world.

FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

New Way of Using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. Arthur Chapman writing from Durban, Natal, South Africa, says: "As a proof that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is unfailing and indispensable for old and young I send you the following: A neighbor of mine had a child just over two years old. It had a very bad cough and the parents did not know what to do for it. I suggested that if they would get a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and put some of it in the baby's mouth it would no doubt cure the child. They did and brought the child and cured the baby. Remedy for sale by all Druggists.

WALTON.

In the football game Saturday, Williamstown won by a score of 21 to 0. The visitors outclassed the local boys in weight and made all their gains by straight line bucks where weight was an advantage. The Walton boys made good gains on end and quarter-back runs, but were unable to break through the heavy line of their opponents. Blaine, Williamstown's heavy half back, was the star of their team and made every touchdown. Jones at quarter and Watson at full-back made good gains for the home team, but were unable to cross the goal line. This was the first game for the Williamstown boys and as was to be expected, they showed their ignorance of the game in many instances, furnishing laughter for the enthusiastic Walton rooters. The victory for the visitors was dearly bought, for Clarke at right half went out of the game in the first half with a broken arm. This accident, however, can not be charged to rough playing on the part of Walton, for, as acknowledged by Williamstown, it was due to Clark's own awkwardness in failing when tackled in an open field. An experienced player would never have been the victim of such an accident. The home boys have taken great interest in the game, and considering everything, they have played good ball, breaking even in their games for two years. Much improvement in the playing of the boys can be seen already and those who oppose football can not gainsay its value for physical and mental development. The football boys are to be congratulated. Indeed their work in school averages well. They are putting football energy into everything they undertake, and are sticking to their work. Unquestionably for physical and mental training combined, football is the best game ever devised. This is proven somewhat by the fact that it is a game confined almost wholly to educational institutions, and is heartily indorsed by the leading educators as a wholesome and proper game. The lineup in Saturday's game was as follows:

Williamstown.		Walton.
Grubbs,	l. e.	Holder
Violett,	l. t.	Florence
McClure,	l. g.	Palmer
Dunlap,	c.	Jones
Conly,	r. g.	Byland

Mann,	r. e.	Percival
Stroude,	q. b.	Jones (Capt)
Clarke,	r. h.	Brown
Carter,	f. b.	Watson
Blaine,	l. h.	Craig

Substitutes—Williamstown, Redd, D., Carter. Walton—Hume, Huey. Umpire and referee—Jones, L., McClure, first half; McClure and Dickey, second half. Timekeepers—Dr. Cleek, Simpson. Linemen—Richy and Houston.—Length of halves—20 minutes.

A FEW DAYS OF GRACE.

Brief Extension of Time Given the Growers Company. Act and Act Quickly.

Not enough tobacco has been signed to the Burley Tobacco Growers Company to make the movement for better prices a success, and, as it has been from the beginning, the matter rests entirely with the growers. Sign, and you free yourself from the clutches of a merciless trust that will continue to rob you, as it has done in the past. Keep out, in the hope that you will thereby get them to pay you a fair price, and you will soon learn you are the worst fooled man in the country. The statement in the last paragraph is no more deniable than the one in the preceding. But one impressed are the financiers with the feasibility of the plan of the Growers Company, and so certain are they of its ultimate success that the time to join has been extended ten days. They recognize the fact that the movement was started late, that you Kentucky farmers, as good sound business men, would not enter into a contract until fully understood, and, too, that the officers and agents of the company have had to combat the Trust, with its unlimited capital, its smooth, oily-tongued solicitors. However, these capitalists do not propose to hang on until the Trust can get enough of the present crop to tide them over. The statement that they have enough tobacco to do them two years is about as true as their estimate early in the season that there was a short crop. You remember that three months ago they said there was a short crop, and that it should bring the top price—more than the Growers Company was offering—but not one pound have they bought. Now when they see that the Company is almost certain to succeed, and its officers have been assured of a further extension of time by the capitalists, they have changed their story to an increased crop, and add that they have enough tobacco to do them for two years.—Observer.

Tobacco growers, you are certainly not going to lose this golden opportunity by failing to sign your tobacco to the Burley Growers' Company, when you are assured of at least 4 to 5 cents more for your tobacco than it has averaged for the last eight or ten years? We so often hear it said farmers can't do anything. Now I would urge that every farmer who has as much as 50 pounds of tobacco sign it to the Association and show to the world that we as farmers have learned a lesson by past experience, and are willing to do our best to make this movement a success. Remember this is an organization effected by the farmers for the benefit of the farmers, one of the most liberal offers ever offered to a hard working and poorly paid people, when we consider the magnitude of this great movement, we certainly can see that there is business men connected with it, and best of all, they are farmers. Less than two years ago when this movement was first talked of by less than a dozen Carroll county farmers, but little was thought that in this short time $10,000,000 would be offered to help them out of their dreadful condition existing at that time—five to six cent tobacco, ragged and half shod children and unpaid grocer bills. Today we are offered 8 to 12 cents for our tobacco by only selling to the Burley Growers Company. I would earnestly urge that the landlord and tenant sell their tobacco to this company and by Saturday night we may not have only 75 per cent of the tobacco but will have at least ninety per cent of it.

JAPAN'S GREAT LOSS.

Gen. Kuroki Was Killed in Battle at Liao Yang.

A Splinter of a Shell Struck the Commander, Tearing Out a Portion of His Breast and Abdomen—His Successor Appointed.

Moscow, Nov. 14.—Nemirovich Dantchenke, a Russian war correspondent, telegraphing from Mukden under Sunday's date, says the reports of the death of Gen. Kuroki are confirmed. According to his version a splinter of a shell struck Gen. Kuroki, tearing out a portion of his breast and abdomen. He died on October 4 at Liao Yang and his body was sent to Japan. A rumor is persistently circulated that a kinsman of the mikado, Siaosandi, literally "Little Third Prince," has been appointed to succeed Gen. Washington, Nov. 11.—Emphatically, but with all courtesy, Russia, through her ambassadors abroad, has several times informed the neutral powers that she will brook no mediation at this time in her war with Japan. It can be announced that Russia expects her wishes will be respected by all the powers to which she has communicated her views.

Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, said Thursday night to a press correspondent,

"I can announce that I have very good reason to believe that my government's emphatic opposition to any mediation at this time will be respected and observed by all neutral powers."

Of the suggestion made in Great Britain that the United States take the lead in a move for intervention the ambassador hesitated to repeat what he has announced so many times, that he has positive assurance that this government, while at all times ready to offer its services, has not the slightest intention to take a step toward mediation unless invited by both belligerents. The Russian government is fully aware of the views of this government on the subject and it is deemed unnecessary at the Russian embassy here again to announce that it is confident this attitude will be strictly adhered to."

STRUCK ON A ROCK.

Schooner Wrecked and It Is Feared the Crew Was Lost.

Woods Hole, Mass., Nov. 14.—The two-masted schooner Earcularius, Capt. Nason, of Rockland, Me., went ashore in the severe northwest gale shortly before dark Sunday night about three-quarters of a mile west of Tarpaulin Cove on the island of Naushen.

At sunset the seas were breaking over the craft masthead high. No trace of the crew has been found and fears are entertained for their safety. The vessel is in a particularly exposed condition and the chances of her being saved are slight.

Keeper Carson, of the Tarpaulin Cove Lighthouse, and a man named Robinson saw the schooner when she struck. It was just before dark and a terrific gale was blowing. The schooner was coming through Vineyard sound from the eastward and was proceeding under her foresail, the gale being too fierce to permit more canvass being carried. The schooner backed and tried to work into the cove for anchorage, but the wind bore her off, and as she was swung away she struck with a crash upon a ledge of rock no more than 100 yards from the lighthouse. Carson and Robinson were unable to render any assistance to the men on board of the schooner. The crew numbered four men and all were plainly seen when the vessel struck, but darkness set in almost immediately and nothing more was seen of the men or the vessel.

Keeper Carson had no boat that could be launched, and besides, the seas were so high that nothing but a surfboat could possibly escape almost instant destruction. No lights were shown from the schooner after she struck and no answer was given to the frequent hailings of Carson and Robinson. According to Keeper Carson it would mean certain death for the ill-fated [illegible] to attempt to reach the shore in a small boat.

At 9 o'clock Sunday night it was feared that all on board had perished. The seas were breaking over the craft and it was not believed that she would hold together until daylight. She struck in a particularly exposed position and no vessel could be expected to stand the terrible pounding on the jagged rocks to which she was subjected.

Another Rockland schooner, the Nautilus, flying before the gale, anchored in a perilous position near the new Dog Bar breakwater, Gloucester harbor, and will be a wreck, it is believed, before morning. Her crew was saved through the efforts of the life saving crews from the Dollivers light station. The schooner Bessie Parker, anchored at Vineyard Haven, parted her anchor chains and drifted ashore, but she can be floated, it is thought, when the storm has subsided.

HEAVY, WET SNOW.

For Hours Washington Was Cut Off From Outside Communication.

Washington, Nov. 14.—As the result of a snow storm which set in here shortly before 11 o'clock Sunday morning, Washington Sunday night for several hours was completely cut off from telegraphic and telephonic communication with the outside world. Later a wire was obtained west, but none north, south or east. Both the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph Cos. report severe damage to their wires and their inability to get any messages through. Inquiry at the railway stations developed the fact that trains were departing on schedule time, but that incoming trains were three or more hours late.

The snowfall of Sunday was the first of the season, several inches covering the ground. It started with a drizzling rain which later turned into a heavy, wet snow. The local telephone service was seriously hampered in its service.

TWO STORMS MEET.

One From Florida and the Other From the Great Lakes.

Baltimore, Nov. 14.—It is apparent from the meager and fragmentary reports obtainable by the local weather bureau that the two storms—one from Florida, the other from the great lakes and Canada—met a few miles south of Washington at about 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Rain, wind, snow and sleet continued until a late hour Sunday night, causing an almost complete prostration of the telegraph and telephone wires south of Baltimore. The Western Union Co. officials managed to pick out a few wires to Philadelphia and New York, but to the north ward and southward there has been no communication since 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Two Duck Hunters Drowned.

THE SIGNAL SERVICE.

Annual Report of Gen. Greely, the Chief Officer.

Gives An Interesting Account of the All-American Telegraphic System in Alaska—Number of Miles of Lines Erected.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Gen. A. W. Greely, chief signal officer of the United States army, in his annual report gives an interesting account of the work performed by his corps in establishing an all-American telegraphic system in Alaska, saying the undertaking is unique in the annals of telegraphic engineering. The cables used in the Alaskan system would reach from New Foundland to Ireland and the land lines from Washington to Texas, there being 2,079 miles of cable, and 1,439 miles of land lines and 107 miles of wireless lines. Gen. Greely says the United States has brought Southeastern Alaska, the Yukon valley and the Behring straits region into telegraphic communication with the rest of the civilized world.

Gen. Greely says that after thorough consideration he decided to install material of American manufacture to be operated by American soldiers and to be laid by American ships except some cable instruments and machines. A selected force of men has been so trained that to-day the signal corps of the army is competent to operate in war emergency a submarine cable of any length.

"Repairs in Alaska are maintained," the report says, "by parties stationed at log cabins about 40 miles apart, one signal corps repair man with two assistants from the line of the army and a dog team being at each cabin. [illegible] men meet the terrible condition of hardship and privation uncomplainingly and with a fortitude of the American soldier."

The report says the Nome wireless station has daily and uninterruptedly transmitted the entire telegraphic business of the seaward peninsula, 5,000 words being exchanged in one afternoon between Safety Harbor and St. Michael. The signal corps of the army, he says, is now regularly operating the longest wireless section of any commercial telegraph system in the world. The annual business of the Seattle-Sitka cable is estimated at $25,000 and during the year there has been spent $56,935 for Alaskan telegrams handled by the signal corps.

Speaking of the Philippines, he says the 16 most important islands of the archipelago are now connected by cable, which lines, he adds, are recognized as indispensible, both by the military and civil authorities.

During the year there has been collected and deposited in the insular treasury of the Philippines telegraph line receipts to the amount of $58,675, there having been sent, including government business, all told more than two million messages, the net expense being $325,901. The report says it is a matter of the utmost importance that signalling apparatus of suitable character be installed at the more important military defenses along the Atlantic and Pacific coast to permit of intercommunication between the army and the navy.

It is strongly urged in the report that steps be taken by the United States to adhere to the International Telegraph union and that international regulations to govern wireless telegraphy in time of war be adopted.

STORM IN PHILADELPHIA.

It Seriously Interfered With Telegraph and Telephone Communication.

Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—The southern storm which began here about 5 a. m. Sunday seriously interfered with telegraph and telephone communication in this vicinity. The telegraph companies report that wires are down in nearly all directions, excepting in New York and Baltimore, communication with the interior of the state is entirely cut off.

Beyond the interruption of telegraph and telephone service the storm did little damage here. Rain, sleet and snow fell all day, with a maximum wind velocity of 41 miles. Late Sunday night the storm continued, although the wind had fallen to 36 miles an hour. The total precipitation up to 8 p. m. when the last observation was made by the United States weather bureau here, was 1.83. The weather bureau figures show that if the snow had not immediately melted it would have reached a depth of eight inches.

WANTS KEHOE'S PLACE.

To the Courts Bennett Will Go If Not Given to Him.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 14.—Judge J. B. Bennett, of Greenup, Ky., the republican candidate for congress in the Ninth district, and who claims to have defeated Congressman Kehoe for re-election on the face of the returns made, arrived in this city Sunday night. The purpose of his visit here is to confer with the local republican leaders relative to the course he should pursue in regard to the presentation of his claims of election. From here he will go to Frankfort to meet with the state board of election commissioners, and he emphatically declared Sunday night that should the commissioners award the certificate of election to Kehoe he would carry the matter to the courts. He says: "Granting all that Kehoe claims, and allowing the deduction of the doubtful ballots, I am elected by a plurality of 53 votes, and I shall assert my rights upon them."

A meeting has been arranged with the local republican campaign committee and its legal advisers for Monday, and Judge Bennett's course will be largely determined by the result of that conference, although his present intention is to contest every inch of ground.

ECHO OF A FEUD.

Elder Jas. Smith Assassinated While at the Supper Table.

FIREMEN RELEASED THEM.

Imprisoned Were Three Pastors By the Locking of a Door.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 12.—Three prominent Baptist ministers, Dr. John N. Prestridge, editor of the Baptist Argus; Dr. J. H. Eager, of Baltimore, and Dr. George B. Eager, of the Southern Baptist theological seminary, were made prisoners in the Baptist Argus office Friday evening by the locking of a door, and the fire department had to send a hook and ladder company to take them from a second-story window in order that Dr. J. H. Eager might catch a train for Baltimore.

There was no time to lose, so the gallant firemen pulled the preachers aboard the truck as they came down the ladder, and with the bell clanging drove them to the Seventh street depot, where Dr. Eager managed to catch the last car of the Baltimore & Ohio train, which had just started.

ANOTHER LIFE SAVED.

Mrs. G. W. Fooks, of Salisbury, Md., wife of G. W. Fooks, Sheriff of Wicomico County, says: "I suffered with kidney complaint for eight years. It came on me gradually. I felt tired and weak, was short of breath and was troubled with bloating after eating, and my limbs were badly swollen. One doctor told me it would finally turn to Bright's disease. I was laid up at one time for three weeks. I had not taken Doan's Kidney Pills more than three days when the distressing aching across my back disappeared, and I was soon entirely cured."

THOUGHT HE HAD NO MONEY

But Had Five Dollars in His Pocket After Going Broke Playing Poker.

"I was brought up to use a good line of talk," says a young man who lives out near the Catholic university, relates a New York exchange. "I've been married now six months, and the only time my wife has ever heard a curse word from my lips was last Sunday morning. I went to a poker party over by the navy yard Saturday night. My wife knew I was going, and just to show her what a harmless little game it was going to be, I gave her most of my money before I left home. It was a very mild game we played, but the grain of the table was against me and by midnight I was broke. I didn't want to make a touch right there, so, as I was young and strong, I concluded I'd stroll downtown and borrow car fare from a newspaper man I knew. It was a nice night for a walk. Well, I frisked into the newspaper man's office and found that he'd gone to Baltimore. I've lived in Washington all my life, but I am not known at any hotel. There was no place where I'd be allowed to stay without baggage except on the C. O. D. basis, so off I set for home, alone in the starry night, with a brand new pair of patent leathers on. I romped under the wire two lengths ahead of the milkman, and went to bed. Along about nine o'clock my wife came in and woke me.

"'What's the matter?' I said. 'Are they ready to amputate my feet?'

"'I just wanted some money for the Sunday papers,' said she, picking up my vest.

"'You'll have to pawn something,' I said. 'I'm broke.'

"She was poking in my watch pocket.

"'Don't take my watch,' I said.

"'I don't want it,' she answered. 'I want that five-dollar bill I put here before you went away.'

"It was there, too. I bet you any man would have said exactly what I said."

TILL NOON

The Simple Dish That Keeps One Vigorous and Well Fed.

When the Doctor takes his own medicine, and the grocer eats the food he recommends, some confidence comes to the observer.

A Grocer of Ossian, Ind., had a practical experience with food worth anyone's attention.

He says: "Six years ago I became so weak from stomach and bowel trouble that I was finally compelled to give up all work in my store, and, in fact, all sorts of work, for about four years. The last year I was confined to the bed nearly all of the time, and much of the time unable to retain food or any sort on my stomach. My bowels were badly constipated continually, and I lost in weight from 165 pounds down to 88 pounds.

"When at the bottom of the ladder I changed treatment entirely, and started in on Grape-Nuts and cream for nourishment. I used absolutely nothing but this for about three months. I slowly improved until I got out of bed and began to move about.

"I have been improving regularly, and now in the past two years have been working about fifteen hours a day in the store, and never felt better in my life.

"During these two years I have never missed a breakfast of Grape-Nuts and cream, and often have it two meals a day, but the entire breakfast is always made of Grape-Nuts and cream alone.

"Since commencing the use of Grape-Nuts I have never used anything to stimulate the action of the bowels, a thing I had to do for years, but this food keeps me regular and in fine shape, and I am growing stronger and heavier every day.

"My customers, naturally, have been interested, and I am compelled to answer a great many questions about Grape-Nuts.

"Some people would think that a staple dish of Grape-Nuts and cream would not carry one through to the noonday meal, but it will carry the most vigorous [illegible]

THE ELECTION.

Roosevelt and Fairbanks the Choice of the People.

New York State Gives a Big Majority for the Republican Ticket.

Ohio's Plurality For the Ticket Estimated as Highest Ever Known.

Indiana Goes Republican by a Plurality Ranging Between 50,000 and 75,000.

The Returns Show That 343 Republican and 183 Democratic Electors Were Elected—Republicans Have a Large Majority in Congress.

Washington, Nov. 10.—Chairman Cowherd, of the democratic congressional campaign committee, at 11 o'clock, said: "In consequence of the republican Roosevelt landslide has carried the house of representatives for the republicans by a majority at least as large as that by which they now hold control."

New York, Nov. 10.—With the election returns still incomplete, the plurality of President Roosevelt in the nation, according to all indications, will exceed 1,500,000, the greatest plurality ever given an American candidate. The nearest approach to this vote was in 1868, when McKinley received a plurality of approximately 350,000, and in 1872, when Grant received 762,991 plurality.

The "solid south" was broken by the probable defection of Missouri—the first step of the country sought by naming 13 states in the democratic column. The figures show Roosevelt has swept 12 states with 133 votes for Judge Parker.

President Roosevelt carried all the northern states except them, in fact—and Wednesday night he had 343 electoral votes.

New York, Nov. 10.—From the returns received late Wednesday night the electoral vote stands as follows:

FOR ROOSEVELT.
Rhode Island	4	South Dakota	4
California	7	Vermont	4
Connecticut	7	Utah	3
Delaware	3	Washington	5
Colorado	4	Wisconsin	13
Idaho	3	Wyoming	3
Illinois	27	West Virginia	7
Indiana	15
Iowa	13
Kansas	10	Total	343
Maine	6
Massachusetts	16	FOR PARKER.
Maryland	8	Alabama	11
Missouri	18	Arkansas	9
Montana	3	Florida	5
Michigan	14	Georgia	13
Minnesota	11	Kentucky	13
Nevada	3	Louisiana	9
Nebraska	8	Mississippi	10
New Hampshire	4	North Carolina	12
New York	39	South Carolina	9
New Jersey	12	Tennessee	12
North Dakota	4	Texas	18
Ohio	23	Virginia	12
Oregon	4
Pennsylvania	34	Total	183

Washington, Nov. 9.—President Roosevelt is assured of the co-operation of a republican congress. The present republican majority in that body is 34, and there need be no surprise if this figure is almost doubled, and it is reasonably certain to reach a majority of at least 60. In practically all districts the republicans have held their own, while in some significant instances the democrats have lost. Probably the most marked of these cases are the Fourth and Fifth districts of California (San Francisco) now represented in congress by Livernash and Wynne, democrats, which reports indicate have been gained by the republicans in the Twelfth district Taylor, rep., is reported to have defeated Badger, the sitting democratic member, who was a candidate for re-election.

OHIO.

Columbus, O., Nov. 10.—Almost complete unofficial returns Wednesday night indicate that the republican plurality in Ohio is between 250,000 and 251,000, or over three times the plurality this state gave any national ticket. About a dozen counties have been carried by the republicans for the first time, which means radical changes in county and other local offices. The aggregate plurality of the 18 counties carried by the democrats is only 10,729, or less than the republican plurality in either of a half dozen counties, one-half that in Cuyahoga and much less than one-third that of Hamilton county. The republicans also elect 20 congressmen by carrying all of the congressional districts except the Fourth, in which Harvey D. Garber was re-elected by 1,385, less than one-third the usual democratic plurality of that district. The only close election is in the Seventh, where Dawes, rep., over Schneider, dem., in the 18th congressional district, which gave Bonebrake, rep., a plurality and Dawes only 200. The official count is awaited with interest in the 15th district, which is conceded now was never lost by the republicans. Dawes secured the nomination after a bitter contest, and the fight is opposed to the nomination carried the fight to the polls. It is noted that the largest republican gains are made from the mining and laboring districts, although all of the 88 counties shows an increase, except Pike county, which had a democratic gain of 26.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 9.—Cleveland city and Cuyahoga county complete give Roosevelt 87,873, Parker 29,298, Roosevelt's plurality 58,575, largest ever given a candidate for an electoral office in this county. R. C. Wright, for county auditor, was the only democrat elected on the county ticket.

INDIANA.

Indianapolis, Nov. 10.—The latest returns from over the state have not changed materially the earlier estimates of the plurality for the republican ticket. Republican State Chairman James F. Goodrich is persistent in his prediction that 75,000 plurality for Roosevelt is conservative. Returns from the legislative districts indicate that the republicans will have a majority of 100 in the legislature, which will not only insure the election of two United States senators to succeed Charles W. Fairbanks, vice president-elect, and Albert J. Beveridge.

KENTUCKY.

Louisville, Nov. 10.—Returns from the precincts in the state coming in with unprecedented slowness in Warren county by five precincts are missing and it is estimated that these will swell Richardson's majority to 400. In this (Fifth) district Richardson's majority over Owens for congress is 1,333 and Parker's plurality in the district 1,333. Latest returns from the Ninth district indicate that Kehoe has been elected to congress by between 900 and 1,000 majority. The latest figures in the congressional districts are as follows:

First District—Ollie M. James, dem., plurality of 3,342 in 126 precincts out of 130.
Second District—A. O. Stanley, dem., plurality of 4,128 in 121 precincts out of 123.
Fourth District—David H. Smith, rep., plurality of 2,665 in 125 precincts out of 130.
Fifth District—Joseph L. Rhinock, dem., plurality of 1,418 in 141 precincts out of 144, with missing precincts are in Republican counties.
Sixth District—Thomas H. Paynter, dem., plurality of 1,333 in 125 precincts out of 130.
Seventh District—Caleb Powers, republican, plurality of 1,000 in 125 precincts out of 130.
Eighth District—Vincent Boreing, dem., plurality of 1,000 in 125 precincts out of 130.
Ninth District—Kehoe, dem., plurality between 900 and 1,000 in 125 precincts out of 130.
Tenth District—Ben Johnson, dem., plurality of 1,000 in 125 precincts out of 130.
Eleventh District—Samuel J. Pugh, dem., plurality of 1,000 in 125 precincts out of 130.

Fred M. Warner and the republican state ticket are elected, at least 11 of the 12 congressmen from Michigan are republican and the legislature is overwhelmingly republican, insuring the re-election of United States Senator J. C. Burrows. Fred M. Warner, republican candidate for governor, was generally conceded a majority of about 35,000, while Roosevelt's majority in Michigan's majority was simply described generally as over 100,000. Detroit has given the republican national ticket a majority of 10,000 or over.

WASHINGTON.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 10.—Complete returns from one-fourth of all the precincts in the state of Washington and incomplete returns from most of the others show that the Roosevelt electors have carried the state by over 30,000 votes. Albert E. Mead, rep., is elected governor over Henry Gruner, dem., by between 5,000 and 7,000 votes. Charles E. Coon, rep., is elected lieutenant governor by fully 14,000 votes. Every other candidate on the republican state ticket is elected by from 15,000 to 20,000 except Humphrey Jones and Cushman for congress, whose majorities will be higher. The next legislature will be very strongly republican.

VIRGINIA.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 9.—The election in Virginia was absolutely without disturbance so far as has been heard. The democratic majority on the presidential ticket will be about 25,000. Nine congressmen out of a total of ten have been chosen: Slemp, the republican incumbent in the Ninth district, apparently re-elected by a majority of about 1,300.

Richmond, Nov. 10.—Actual and estimated returns give Parker about 27,000 majority in the state. The Ninth district is the only one carried by the republicans.

CALIFORNIA.

San Francisco, Nov. 10.—Roosevelt's plurality in this state will exceed 100,000. In this city alone it is 21,533 and in the 1,627 interior precincts so far as heard from it amounts to 80,302, making a total of 105,141. The full delegation of eight congressmen will be republican and an overwhelming republican majority in the legislature insures the election of a republican successor to Senator Bard. In this city Debs received 7,231 votes and Swallow 330.

GEORGIA.

Atlanta, Nov. 10.—Returns from 108 out of 137 counties in Georgia give the democratic electors a total of 68,690; republican electors, 15,066, and populist electors, 16,839.

With 29 counties still to be heard from, the Constitution estimates Parker's plurality at about 65,000, which is much larger than was expected. All 11 democratic congressmen were elected.

KANSAS.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 9.—At 2:30 o'clock

Wednesday morning returns at hand show that Roosevelt has carried Kansas by a majority greatly approaching 100,000. E. N. Hoch is elected governor by the republicans by a plurality of 6,000 or more. T. T. Kelly, republican candidate for state treasurer, will receive a plurality of 12,000. The legislature, which may have to elect a United States senator, will be overwhelmingly republican. The eight members of congress from this state are all republicans.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Concord, Nov. 10.—Election returns for New Hampshire are now complete, with the exception of 23 towns and wards. These give Roosevelt a plurality of 21,642, Estimating the missing towns and wards at 1,000, the basis of the vote of 1900, Roosevelt's plurality would be 22,615. McLane, rep., for governor, has a plurality of about 16,700. The republicans have elected 20 of the 24 state senators and 285 representatives out of the total of 295.

NEVADA.

Reno, Nov. 10.—Returns from this state are still incomplete. Out of 176 precincts only 78 have been heard from. The last estimate gives Roosevelt a plurality in about 2,000. The congressional fight is still in doubt, with Yearington, rep., leading Van Duzer, dem., by 146 in the precincts heard from. Both parties claim the legislature, but the most conservative democrats concede it to the republicans by about two votes.

CONNECTICUT.

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 10.—Revised returns from every city and town give Roosevelt a plurality of 29,000. Lieut. Gov. Roberts, the republican candidate for governor, and Judge Robbins, his opponent, by 25,971. The four re-elected republican congressmen each had pluralities which the most conservative democrats concede to be 10,000. The legislature is overwhelmingly republican.

ARKANSAS.

Little Rock, Nov. 9.—The Gazette's advices from all parts of the state bear out the estimates of a plurality of 40,000 for Parker and Davis electors. Each of the seven congressional districts is democratic by majorities ranging from 4,000 to 6,000. The total vote will fall short that cast at the state election in September, on account of apathy in some of the counties.

MAINE.

Portland, Me., Nov. 10.—Practically complete returns gave the republican presidential electors in Maine a plurality of 37,600. The plurality of 1900 was 28,606, or 46% of the 511 cities, towns and plantations President Roosevelt received 64,334 votes and Parker 27,268. This was a net republican gain of 8,348 over four years ago.

MISSISSIPPI.

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 9.—Returns thus far received show that between 60,000 and 75,000 votes were cast and the opposition to the democratic party will poll between 12,000 and 15,000. The democratic majority for Parker and Davis will be in the neighborhood of 50,000. Mississippi returns eight democratic congressmen.

VERMONT.

White River Junction, Nov. 8.—The result of the national election in this state was fully anticipated by the republicans, Roosevelt carrying the state by nearly 21,000 plurality. The only contest before the voters was the selection of presidential electors.

WYOMING.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 9.—Partial returns indicate that Roosevelt has carried Wyoming by 7,000 majority, and the election of Mondell, rep., to congress, and Brooks, rep., for governor, and the remainder of the state ticket is certain.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 8.—There is hardly any doubt but that all ten democratic congressmen have been elected. Only the two mountain districts are in doubt, the Eighth and the Tenth. These, the republicans do not concede, and it will take a day to know absolutely. The democratic majority in the state appears to be about 50,000.

ALABAMA.

Montgomery, Nov. 10.—Telegrams to the Advertiser from the Seventh district confirm the re-election of Congressman Burnett, dem., by 2,000 majority. One county in the district (Winston) went for Powell, fusion, by 100 majority. The plurality of Parker and Davis is about 75,000.

LOUISIANA.

New Orleans, Nov. 10.—Louisiana's plurality for the national democratic ticket is about 35,000. The plurality in this city will only be about 14,000, owing to the independent ticket being large and complicated, and many did not vote the national ticket at all.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 9.—Parker has carried South Carolina by not less than 40,000 plurality. The democratic state ticket has been elected without opposition. The state legislature is unanimously democratic.

TEXAS.

Austin, Tex., Nov. 9.—Early returns show that the vote cast Tuesday will hardly exceed 275,000, of which 250,000 were cast for Parker, 60,000 for Roosevelt and the balance scattering.

IDAHO.

Boise, Idaho, Nov. 9.—Roosevelt is conceded to have carried the state by a heavy majority. Gooding, rep., for governor, runs slightly behind Roosevelt.

NORTH DAKOTA.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 9.—Senator Kittredge claims that Roosevelt has carried South Dakota by 40,000 and Chairman Crane, of the republican state central committee, puts the figures at 50,000.

ARIZONA.

Phoenix, Nov. 10.—The election of Smith, dem., for congress, is conceded by at least 1,500. The legislature will be democratic by probably two-thirds.

FLORIDA.

Jacksonville, Nov. 9.—The few scattered returns so far received indicate the usual democratic majorities. The democratic candidates for congress are all elected.

TENNESSEE.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 9.—The vote in Tennessee has been light. Early returns indicate an estimated democratic plurality of 15,000.

ELECTION IN PORTO RICO.

All Leading Cities Except One Were Carried By the Unionists.

San Juan, P. R., Nov. 11.—Complete returns of the elections of last Tuesday show that the unionists polled majorities in five of the seven districts. The house of delegates will consist of 25 unionists and ten republicans. All the leading cities of the island except San Juan were carried by the unionists. Gov. Winthrop is receiving congratulations on the peaceable and fair manner in which the elections passed off.

AMERICAN COLONY IN MEXICO.

A Straw Vote Taken on the Presidential Election.

Mexico, Nov. 11.—The straw vote in the colony of Mexico City which was participated in by many of the colony demonstrated conclusively the choice of Roosevelt for president. All had supposed that the colony would go overwhelmingly 'democratic. The result was as follows: Roosevelt, 355; Parker, 215; Swallow, 13; Debs, 10, and Watson, 4.

The President's Statement.

Washington, Nov. 10.—The president said Wednesday he felt that his announcement that he would not accept another nomination would prevent, during the next four years, any misinterpretation of his actions, personal or official.

The Socialist Party Vote.

New York, Nov. 10.—William Mailly, national secretary of the socialist party, wires to a local newspaper that incomplete returns justify an estimate of 600,000 votes cast for Debs and Hanford on Tuesday. He says Illinois leads with 75,000 votes.

New York, Nov. 11.—Judge Parker came to this city from Esopus Thursday. He is quoted as saying to friends on the train: "Of course I am going to return to the law business. I have several engagements under consideration."

Roosevelt's Plurality in Washington.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 12.—President Roosevelt's plurality in the state of Washington is 66,749, with a few precincts not reported. The plurality of Mead, republican, for governor, is 15,277.

The Result in Nebraska.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 12.—Practically complete election returns from every county in the state on presidential electors show that Roosevelt's plurality in Nebraska will not be less than 30,000, and may reach 40,000.

ORDNANCE BUREAU.

The Annual Report of Rr. Adm. Newton E. Mason.

Smokeless Powder Received Considerable Attention By the Bureau in the Last Year—Output of Factories Are Inadequate.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Lack of officers for ordnance duty and the overtaxing of the naval gun factory at Washington continue to be the two most serious problems facing the bureau of ordnance, according to the annual report of Rr. Adm. Newton E. Mason, chief of ordnance, just approved by Secretary Morton. The report says a plan for reorganization of the work of the bureau will be submitted later with a view to increasing the supply of ordnance experts. Of the rush of work at the naval gun factory Adm. Mason says:

"The naval gun factory has been running night and day at full capacity and although good progress has been made, the congested condition of all work there gives assurance that its capacity is being overtaxed and must, unless this capacity is materially increased, eventually result in failure to supply the ordnance outfits of ships in time to meet the demands of the contractors."

Of the 52 12-inch guns required, the 20 for the Virginia class have been completed, six of the 45 caliber guns are being machined and the forgings for 22 of the remaining have been ordered and are being delivered. Nine 10-inch guns are under construction.

Of the 128 8-inch guns required, 24 40-caliber guns for the Pennsylvania class of armored cruisers are nearly completed. The naval gun factory will make 16 of the 88 7-inch guns required, the others having been contracted for by private companies. Of the 256 6-inch 50-caliber guns required, those for the Pennsylvania class of armored cruisers have been completed and 144 guns required for the battleships of the Virginia class and the armored cruisers of the Tennessee and St. Louis classes are being manufactured.

For the armament of all vessels building, 488 3-inch 50-caliber guns are required. One hundred and twenty-five of these have been provided for and further orders have been suspended pending the development of an efficient semi-automatic gun of this caliber. A vast amount of work has also been done by the gun factory in alterations and repairs to ordnance material. Estimates for the improvement of the gun factory and increase of the plant are renewed.

Smokeless powder has received considerable attention by the bureau in the last year. The report says the normal output of private powder factories and of the government factories at Indian Head and Newport is not greater than is required to meet the demands of the service target practice and fill the outfits of the newly commissioned ships.

A FIERCE HURRICANE.

New York City Entirely Cut Off From the South and West.

New York, Nov. 14.—New York was entirely cut off from the south and west Sunday night by a fierce hurricane accompanied by rain and snow which is sweeping the Atlantic coast.

Starting from Florida Sunday night the storm of wind and rain has come up the coast at almost cyclonic speed. Early Sunday morning it was central off Cape Hatteras, although its evergathering force was felt far to the northward.

Rain began falling in New York at 5 a. m. and early in the morning changed to a wet snow. The wind, which had been blowing moderately, veered to the southeast and shortly assumed hurricane proportions. At 6 o'clock Sunday night the local weather bureau noted a velocity of 42 miles an hour which increased to 48 mues at 8:30 o'clock. That speed kept up for several hours. At 10 o'clock the storm center was at Block Island, where the barometer showed a pressure of 26.62 inches, with the wind blowing 76 miles an hour. At Nantucket the barometer was a trifle higher and the wind 60 miles.

Wire service out of New York was tied up more effectually Sunday night than at any other time since the blizzard of '88. The Western Union and Postal Telegraph Cos. have no direct communication with cities further south than Baltimore and all western points are cut off.

The Postal has been cabling some of its most urgent messages to Canso, N. S., from which point they are wired to Montreal and thence forwarded to Chicago over Canadian Pacific wires.

Hurt in An Explosion.

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 14.—A fire, accompanied by a terrific dynamite or powder explosion, occurred on the east side of Gay street causing a loss of about $250,000. Nine firemen were more or less injured.

Big Price For Furniture.

Passenger Train Wrecked.

St. Louis, Nov. 14.—A north-bound passenger train on the Wabash road was wrecked Sunday north of St. Louis by spreading rails, injuring a number of persons, some seriously. None was LATER RETURNS.

Missouri Goes Republican and a Close Vote in Maryland.

Baltimore, Nov. 11.—The official returns here up to a late hour Thursday night indicate that the vote for the presidential candidates in last Tuesday was very close, possibly 100 on either side. It is probable that Secretary of State Oswald Tilghman will be called upon to decide which of the electors will be entitled to cast their votes in Washington.

The board of canvassers in Baltimore city and in the 23 counties of the state met at noon Thursday. In Baltimore city the votes cast in the Third congressional district were counted but the totals were not made public. While Congressman Frank Wachter was admitedly re-elected, the vote on the presidential ticket is left in doubt.

From the official returns thus far received the indications are that the republican have elected seven and the democrats one of the electors of the state.

Returns received from 11 counties of the state give the republican electors a plurality of 174. Until the canvassing boards of the several counties and of the city of Baltimore shall have examined and counted the ballots, it will be impossible to say which of the presidential candidates will receive Maryland's electoral vote.

There is no change in the congressional situation, the democrats and republicans each have elected three members of the next house of representatives.

St. Louis, Nov. 11.—With complete returns from 96 counties out of 114 at hand the entire republican ticket with the exception of governor has been elected by pluralities of 350 to 15,000. With all but a few scattered precincts accounted for, the 16th congressional district has gone republican by a plurality of 102. This result will, in all probability, be only slightly changed either one way or the other by the returns from the additional precincts.

The plurality of President Roosevelt is variously estimated from 10,000 to 18,000 and his victory in the state has been conceded by Chairman Evans, of the democratic state committee, who also concedes the election of the republican ticket with the exception of governor, lieutenant governor and railroad commissioner. The only question remaining to be definitely settled in connection with the election of governor is the extent of the plurality of Joseph W. Folk, dem., whose plurality in 96 counties is 37,865.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Nov. 11.—The official returns for West Virginia are not yet in, but from the returns received Roosevelt's plurality in the state is placed at from 25,000 to 30,000. The republican state committee claims the election of W. M. O. Dawson, rep., for governor, by a plurality of over 9,000. The democratic state committee concedes his election by about 5,000. The legislature will be overwhelmingly republican in both branches, the democrats only having six out of 30 senators. The democratic state headquarters were closed Thursday night.

Philadelphia, Nov. 11.—Complete but unofficial figures received from every county in the state with the exception of Allegheny, in which Pittsburg is situated, but from where a close estimate has been obtained, show that President Roosevelt's plurality in Pennsylvania has reached 414,525, probably the largest plurality ever given a presidential candidate by any state in the political history of the country.

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 11.—Late Thursday the fusion leaders conceded the re-election of Gov. Mickey by a plurality which will probably reach from 7,000 to 10,000. The late returns increase the gains in a material way and left no doubt of his receiving a substantial plurality.

Roosevelt and Fairbanks electors carry the state by over 50,000 plurality.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 11.—The latest estimate of republican pluralities in Wisconsin give Roosevelt and Fairbanks between 125,000 and 140,000 and LaFollette between 50,000 and 60,000. It will be several days before the full returns are in.

New York, Nov. 12.—A revised table of the figures for president and governor in this state shows that Roosevelt received a plurality of 176,628 over Parker and Higgins a plurality of 80,490 over Herrick.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 14.—The official vote on the state ticket shows that J. Frank Hanly, republican candidate for governor, received a plurality of 83,979, which was 8,892 behind President Roosevelt.

Gov. Peabody, of Colorado, Defeated.

Denver, Col., Nov. 11.—Gov. James H. Peabody, republican, concedes his defeat. Alva Adams' majority over Peabody in the city and county of Denver is 5,071, and in the entire state about 10,500. The reported republican majority for Peabody in the state outside of Denver is borne out by the returns which are still incomplete. Peabody was beaten by 750 plurality in his home (Fremont) county, though it was carried by Roosevelt by 200.

Socialist Vote in Chicago.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—Next to President Roosevelt's record-breaking vote the socialist poll for Eugene V. Debs was a feature of the election in Chicago. Mr. Debs polled a total of 42,595 votes in the city, against 5,126 cast for him in 1900.

Parker Is Third.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 10.—Complete returns from the city give Roosevelt 37,979, Parker 17,093 and Debs 16,278.

It might as well have been made unanimous.

The landslide did not carry W. C. Owens, of Louisville, into Congress. Good.

Democratic Congressmen will be curiosities in Washington after the 4th of March, 1905.

There is no telling what is going to happen politically—for instance, Missouri voted for Roosevelt.

Everything points to William Jennings Bryan as the next Democratic nominee for the presidency.

No use for the Democrats trying to figure out how it was done. They have nothing left on which to figure.

Who, how or what did it is a question that probably can never be answered, but it was done, all the same.

It looks like Parker's name was omitted from the ballots in some of the States. An investigation is in order.

Teddy will rule according to his own notion from now on, there being no McKinley restraints in the way.

Parker's defeat is the worst ever administered to a candidate for the presidency since Horace Greely was beaten by Grant.

Neither of the Boone county boys who were candidates in Cincinnati at the election on the 8th inst., Campbell and Clore, lit.

If the Democrats conduct another get-together national campaign the Republican's majority will be so large it cannot be counted.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets are becoming a favorite for stomach troubles and constipation. For sale by all Druggists.

Returns to the Agricultural Department show increases both in the yield and quality of corn, buckwheat, flaxseed, potatoes and tobacco.

The campaign is over and the vote has been counted, and nothing of an exciting nature is in store for this part of the country so far as there is any information.

The Kansas Female Suffrage Society will ask the next legislature of that State to submit an amendment to the constitution providing that the women may vote.

The Confederate Veterans of this State held their annual reunion at the Confederate Home at Peewee, last Friday. A large number of the old warriors were present.

Had Senator Mark Hanna lived he would have been the Republican nominee for the presidency, and in the light of recent events his election would have been unanimous.

The Democrats have been defeated so often in the national election that the Waterloo of the 8th inst., was not so hard to bear. They have been educated to expect disasters, although the last was tremendous.

Kentucky was touched up considerably by the political land slide on the 8th inst. The loss of one Congressman and the cutting off of a big slice of her Democratic majority shows the effect of its visit.

That big political landslide the Democrats predicted was in the air, was there sure enough, but it slid the wrong way and "kivered" the Democratic party so deep it will take a long time for it to get on its feet again.

The election of last week was another instance in which the country had to elect the Congressman from this district. Covington and Newport can always be depended upon to present the candidate while the country has to elect him.

Five members of the Goebel Monument Commission inspected [illegible] for the bronze statue [illegible] Goebel at Lexington [illegible] day and declined to accept. The contractors were [illegible] a new board [illegible] months further [illegible] complete [illegible]

Some say that while Bryan was making speeches for Parker and Davis he was winking the other eye at his old supporters. As Bryan was not in winking distance of New York, West Virginia and several other States that went pell-mell for Roosevelt, it would be interesting to know who winked the other eye in them.

While the Republican cyclone was sweeping other Indiana counties on the 8th inst., the Democrats of Ohio county were getting in their work in a magnificent manner, and succeeded in capturing every county office except that of treasurer. It is true the majorities were small but they were large enough, especially in a land-slide year. Good boys.

Bro. Woodson, of Owensboro, and Kentucky's member of the Democratic National Committee, belongs to a school of false prophets. Only a few weeks ago he was telling how Parker would carry New York, West Virginia, Indiana, and other States that voted almost unanimously for the other fellows. Wonder where he obtained so much false information?

It is said that it is the firm intention of Gov. Beckham and the State administration to return to the viva voca system of voting in Kentucky. While the Recorder has no objection to a return to the viva voce system of voting, it fails to see how Gov. Beckham and other State officials can compel a return, and does not believe they made the statement accredited to them.

The Brooklyn Eagle, which it was claimed had heretofore forecast, with great accuracy, the result of presidential elections, lost its rep. in the national election just past. The Recorder could have beaten forecasts made by the Eagle about ten days before the election and not invested as much as one cropper in postal cards for the purpose of obtaining information upon which to base an estimate.

Hon. Joseph L. Rhinock, Congressman-elect in this district, ran right up with the head of the ticket in the district, and in some counties he lead it by several hundred votes, a fact that is highly pleasing to him and his friends. Mr. Rhinock having been elected by the rural voters he feels that he is under special obligations to them, and when he goes to Washington his greatest pleasure will be the giving of their requests his personal attention, in every instance where it is possible.

Judge Alton B. Parker gave to the press an open letter addressed to the "Democracy of the Nation," in which he thanked all those who aided in the campaign work. In the letter he says he will never again seek a nomination nor a public office. He says he will still work for Democratic success and strongly urges party harmony. He repeats his previous statement that the greatest moral question that confronts the party is "Shall the trusts and corporations be prevented from contributing money to control or to aid in controlling elections?"

Roosevelt's clean sweep has broken all records for large plurralities. His popular vote is the largest ever given a presidential candidate. His plurality is estimated to be 2,900,000. which is more than double that received by McKinley in 1900, and more than three times the McKinley plurality of 1896. In 1896 McKinley's popular plurality was 601,834, and in 1900 was 849,790. Pennsylvania's plurality of 485,000 is almost sufficient in itself to wipe out the combined pluralities which the South gave Parker and Davis.

In the next Congress the following prominent Democrats will be missing: Cowherd, Benton, of Missouri; Wade, of Iowa; Lucking, of Michigan; Meirs and Robinson, of Indiana. Only one Democrat remains from Ohio, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Wisconsin, while solid Republican delegations have been returned from California, Connecticut, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Oregon, South Dakota, Vermont, Washington and West Virginia. Solid Democratic delegations have been returned from Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas and possibly North Carolina.

That New Capitol Building.

[Kentucky State Journal]

The State Capitol Commission held a meeting yesterday with all of its members and Architect Andrews present.

At the close of the meeting a member of the Commission made the positive statement to a Journal representative that the plans are for a Capitol building on the present site and that the buildings will be constructed on those grounds.

The Capitol plans submitted by Architect Andrews provide for a building the extreme length of which will be 384 feet. The width of the building is to be 170 feet, leaving an approach of about 200 feet from the Broadway street or front entrance. The height of the building is to be 205 feet to the top of the dome, which is to be 50 feet the interior diameter. The building is to be three stories above the basement.

According to the plans of Mr. Andrews the second floor of the building, to be reached by elevator, and two wide stairways to the right and left of the grand entrance, is to be the main floor of the building. On it are to be the offices of the five chief officers of State, the State library, the Appellate Courtroom and the clerk's offices. On the first floor are to be located the offices of all of the minor officials and the file and record rooms of the larger departments, the Superintendent of Public Instruction, and the rooms of the Historical Society. The third floor is to be given up altogether to the Chambers of Senate and House and clerks' and committee rooms.

It has never been determined who hit Billie Patterson, neither will it ever be known what caused the political upheaval on the 8th inst. Every person will have his notion about it, and there you are, and it is no use for the Democrats to grieve over the spilt milk, as every bit in the dairy has been lost.

If a newspaper man desires to know how generally his effusions are read, print something that is regarded as objectionable to persons who never take his paper or pays him a cent. He will wonder how they know these things were in the paper, but will wonder in vain. It might be added that he may say nice things about a man for ten years without a word from him but make an uncomplimentary notice of one of his wife's aunt's second cousins and he will come in with a club to have the slander corrected.—Exchange.

A horse belonging to Jake Sloan on the Georgetown and Lexington pike, reared in his stall and broke or more accurately dislocated his neck, and it was thought that the animal would have to be killed. A physician who does not profess to be a horse doctor, was at the house attending to Jake Sloan, who was hurt in a collision with a street car on Jefferson street in Lexington. The physician hitched a mule to the animal's neck with the aid of a rope, and by tying the horse's feet, pulled the neck back in place. Two boards were sawed off the fence, and the neck put in splints, and the horse is getting well. It is a remarkable case.—Scott County Democrat.

Small grain looks better since the rain.

Several will butcher their hogs this week.

Thursday of next week is Thanksgiving day.

The frost Saturday morning looked like a small snow.

It will do you good to read Good's advertisement this week.

Take down your screen doors, and put away the swings.

Sunday was somewhat winterish, and the snow flew for a while.

The light rain of last week was of great benefit to the small grain.

The first genuine freeze of the season was that of last Thursday night.

With the coming of a moist period the work of stripping tobacco would begin.

Last Friday and Saturday were splendid days for hunting but the law said nixy.

There was a small insurance on John Finnell's barn that was burnt a few days since.

A great many report their corn much better than they expected to find it before they commenced husking it.

Those who have telephones in their residences in this county realized last Tuesday night that they are a great benefit.

You can shoot quail and rabbits, now, but before you go hunting you would better ascertain on whose land you can hunt.

The base ball season has closed and the elections are over. What will the country do for excitement for the next several months?

The husking of shock corn was pushed last week, it being the first time this fall that the weather was favorable for that class of work.

Election Echo.

Dr. A. A. Mnrat was nominated for coroner.

The present justices of the peace were all renominated.

Thomas Johnson, Jake Cook and N. Carpenter were nominated for constables.

The largest vote cast at the primary election was for county attorney—2169.

Two of the candidates for Justice of the peace in District No. 1 tied, each receiving one vote.

For county attorney 2169 votes were cast; for clerk, 2154; for assessor, 2106; for superintendent of schools, 2033.

If election wagers have not all been paid it is time that they were, and the voters returned to the even tenor of their way.

In the Burlington vote for county clerk last week 50 votes were omitted from the vote cast for B. W. Adams. His vote was 162 instead of 112.

Leonard Gibbs who brought the primary ballot box over from Union last Thursday, said the old hat he wore was the only one left in the Union precinct, all the others having been coal oiled and burnt on the night of the 8th.

In making up their returns the officers of the election made many mistakes, showing how many different ways different persons will find to do the same thing when they have the printed instructions before them for doing it.

One voter at the Burlington polls did not take any chance of losing his vote for Parker and Davis by stamping in the circle beneath the rooster. He searched his ballot for the names of Parker and Davis and finding them among the names of the electors on the prohibition ticket he placed the cross in the square opposite the name of each. Now, who dares to say he did not vote for Parker and Davis?

The following members of the Boone County Democratic Executive Committee met at the county clerk's office, last Thursday, to count the vote cast at the primary election on the 8th inst. and declare the nominees: J. L. Frazier, chairman, Union; J. D. Cloud, Constance; C. W. Riley, Bullittsville; C. H. Acra, Bellevue; J. M. Eddins, Burlington; W. W. Grimsley, Big Bone; G. E. Carroll, Beaver. The committee adjusted all the claims made for services, rent and material for holding the primary in the several precincts.

Thanking the Democrats of Boone for the nomination for reelection, and recognizing the responsibilities of the position, I shall in the future, as in the past, devote my best energies to the promotion of the public school interest, soliciting the cooperation of school officials and patrons. After eleven years faithful attention to the wants of his patrons in Burlington and along the Florence 'pike, Edward Corbin, the Florence butcher, acting under the advice of physicians, has given up his route, making his last trip last Saturday, much to the regret of those with whom his business relations have been so pleasant and satisfactory for the last decade. All who know Mr. Corbin wish him a speedy return to perfect health.

Dallas, the Locust correspondent for the Carrollton Democrat in the last issue of that paper wrote:

"About this time o' year in the olden days, I sneaked out the back door o' nights an' went 'possum huntin' with the darkies, who would joyfully sing somewhat as follows:

"'Possum fat an' 'taters fine,
Swing yo'sef, ma' honey—
Punkin ripe upon de vine,
Come along, ma' honey;
The stars am shinin' in de sky,
Mr. Coon am mighty sly—
Bress yo' soul, ma' honey!
Fiddle tuned an' lasses shy,
Good time comin' bymne bye—
Shake dem feet, ma' honey."

A Boone County Man Goes Hunting In Indiana, and gets Hunted.

Game Warden Johnson arrested D. B. Landres, of Boone County, Ky., in Sparta township on the charge of hunting without a state license. He was taken before Justice Canfield and upon a plea of guilty was fined $25 and costs, amounting to $57, and being unable to pay was sentenced to jail. While Marshal Dan Jennings and Game Warden Johnson were arguing who would have to pay the expense of conveying Landres to the county jail at Lawrenceburgh, he slipped out a rear door and escaped by running through a cornfield.—Moores Hill Item in Aurora (Ind.) "The tobacco growers of this county today succeeded in securing 1,100 acres out of 1,400 for the Blue Grass Growers' Association. In Bath county they secured 2,200 acres. The card of W. B. Hawkins caused a revolution among the promoters in the various counties, and they have accomplished much in the past few days.

"Mr. Hawkins stated that with the renewed activity shown the association was now a certainty. From reliable sources it was learned tonight that the growers' association had obtained about 75 per cent of all the tobacco in the State, and financial backers are now ready to carry out their agreement."—News-Herald, Owenton.

BRYAN'S NEW CODE.

SLOGAN FOR NEXT CAMPAIGN MUST BE "DEATH TO TRUSTS."

Democrats Must Rely Upon Radicalism to Build Up Party—Defeat Due to Control of Conservatives.

Abandonment of radicalism at the St. Louis convention is, in the opinion of William J. Bryan, the cause of the democratic party's defeat at the polls in the presidential election. In the following lengthy statement given out by him at Lincoln, Neb., November 9, he says:

Mr. Bryan wants to go to work at once to reclaim the democratic party to radicalism and says he will do all he can in the fight.

"The democratic party has met with an overwhelming defeat in the national election. As yet the returns are not sufficiently complete to permit analysis, as it is impossible to say whether the result is due to an actual increase in the number of republican voters or to a falling off in the democratic vote. This phase of the subject will be dealt with when the returns are all in.

"The questions for consideration at this time are: What lesson does the election teach? And what of the future?

Parker Not to Blame.

"The defeat of Judge Parker should not be considered a personal one. He did as well as he could under the circumstances; he was the victim of unfavorable conditions and of a mistaken party policy. He grew in popularity as the campaign progressed and expressed himself more and more strongly upon the trust question, but could not overcome the heavy odds against him.

"The so-called conservative democrats charged the defeats of 1896 and 1900 to the party's position on the money question and insisted that a victory could be won by dropping the coinage question entirely. The convention accepted this theory and the platform made no reference to the money question, but Judge Parker felt that it was his duty to announce his personal adherence to the gold standard. His gold telegram, as it was called, while embarrassing to the democrats of the west and south, was applauded by the eastern press. He had the cordial indorsement of Mr. Cleveland, who certified that the party had returned to 'safety and sanity;' he had the support of the democratic papers which bolted in 1896, and he also had the aid of nearly all of those who were prominent in the campaigns of 1896 and 1900, and yet his defeat is apparently greater than the party suffered in either of those years.

"It is unquestionable also that Judge Parker's defeat was not local, but general, the returns from the eastern states being as disappointing as the returns from the west. The reorganizers are in complete control of the party, they planned the campaign and carried it on according to their own views and the verdict against their plan is a unanimous one.

"Surely silver cannot be blamed for this defeat, for the campaign was run on a gold basis. Neither can the defeat be charged to emphatic condemnation of the trusts, for the trusts were not assailed as vigorously this year as they were four years ago.

"It is evident that the campaign did not turn upon the question of imperialism and it is not fair to consider the result as a personal victory for the president, although his administration was the subject of criticism.

Conservatives Cause Defeat.

"The result was due to the fact that the democratic party attempted to be conservative in the presence of conditions which demand radical remedies. It sounded a partial retreat when it should have ordered a charge all along the line.

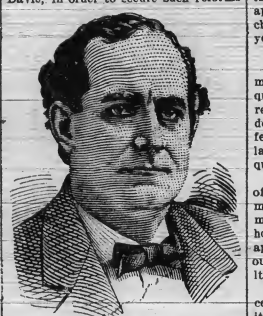
"In 1896 the line was drawn for the first time during the present generation between plutocracy and democracy, and the party's stand on the side of democracy alienated a large number of plutocratic democrats who in the nature of things cannot be expected to return, and it drew to itself a large number of earnest advocates of reform whose attachment to these reforms is much stronger than attachment to any party name.

"The republican party occupies the conservative position. That is, it defends those who, having secured unfair advantage through class legislation, insist that they shall not be disturbed, no matter how oppressive their exactions may become.

"The democratic party cannot hope to compete successfully with the republican party for this support. To win the support of the plutocratic element of the country the party would have to become more plutocratic than the republican party, and it could not do this without losing several times as many votes as that course would win.

"The democratic party has nothing to gain by catering to organized and predatory wealth. It must not only do without such support, but it can strengthen itself by inviting the open and emphatic opposition of these elements.

"The campaign just closed shows that it was inexpedient from the standpoint of party success as it is wrong from the standpoint of principle to attempt any conciliation of the industrial and financial despots who are gradually getting control of all the avenues of wealth. The democratic party, if it hopes to win success, must take the side of the common people."



Reorganizers Deceived All.

Mr. Bryan then says that for two years he has pointed out the futility of any attempt to compromise with wrong or to patch up a peace with the great corporations which are now exploiting the public, but the southern democrats were so alarmed by the race issue that they listened, "rather reluctantly, be it said, to their credit," to the promises of success held out by those who had contributed to the defeat of the party in the two preceding campaigns.

He continues: "The experiment has been a costly one and it is not likely to be repeated during the present generation. The eastern democrats were also deceived. They were led to believe that the magnates and monopolists who coerced the voters in 1896 and supplied an enormous campaign fund in both 1896 and 1900 would help the democratic party if our party would only be less radical. The corporation press aided in this deception and even the republican papers professed an unselfish desire to help build up the democratic party.

"The election has opened the eyes of the hundreds of thousands of honest and well-meaning democrats who a few months ago favored the reorganization of the party. These men now see that they must either go into the republican party or join with the democrats of the west and south in making the democratic party a positive, aggressive and progressive reform organization. There is no middle ground."

Mr. Bryan says he did what he could to prevent the reorganization of the democratic party; when he failed in this he did what he could to aid Parker and Davis, in order to secure such reforms —and there were some vital ones—promised by their election. Now that the campaign is over, he says, he will assist those who desire to put the democratic army once more upon a fighting basis; he will assist in organizing for the campaign of 1908.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN.

Mr. Bryan continues: "It does not matter so much who the nominee may be. During the next three years circumstances may bring into the arena some man especially fitted to carry the standard. It will be time enough to nominate a candidate when we are near enough to the campaign to measure the relative availability of those worthy to be considered, but we ought to begin to lay our plans for the next national campaign and to form the line of battle.

Militarism and Tariff.

"The party must continue to protest against a large army, against a large navy and to stand for the independence of the Filipinos, for imperialism adds the menace of militarism to the corrupting influence of commercialism, and yet experience has shown that however righteous the party's position on this subject, the issue does not arouse the people as they can be warned by a question which touches them immediately and individually.

"The injustice done to the Filipinos is not reached as it should be or as we resent a wrong to ourselves, and the costliness of imperialism is hidden by the statistics and by our indirect system of taxation. While the party must maintain its position on this subject, it cannot present this as the only issue.

"The party must also maintain its position on the tariff question. No answer has been made to the indictment against the high tariff and yet, here, too, the burden of the tariff system is concealed by the method in which the taxes are collected. It cannot be made the sole issue in a campaign.

"The party must renew its demand for an income tax, to be secured through a constitutional amendment, in order that wealth may be made to pay its share of the expense of the government. To-day we are collecting practically all of our federal revenue from taxes upon consumption, and these bear heaviest upon the poor and light upon the rich.

"The party must maintain its position in favor of bimetallism. It cannot surrender its demand for the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country, but the question must remain in abeyance until conditions so change as to bring the public again face to face with failing prices and a rising dollar. This, therefore, cannot be made the controlling issue of the contest upon which we are entering.

Trusts the Vital Issue.

"The trust question presents the most acute phase of the contest between democracy and plutocracy so far as economic issues are concerned. The president virtually admits that the trusts contributed to his campaign fund, but he denies that they received any promises of aid or immunity. No well-informed person doubts that the large corporations have furnished the republican campaign fund during the campaigns of 1896 and 1900 and 1904, and no one can answer the logic of Judge Parker's arraignment of the trusts' contribution.

"The trusts are run on a business principle. They do not subscribe millions of dollars to a campaign unless they are paying for favors already granted or purchasing favors for future delivery. The weakness of Judge Parker's position was that the charge was made at the close of the campaign, when it was neutralized by a counter charge.

"The trusts cannot be fought successfully by any party that depends upon trust funds to win the election.

"The democratic party must make its attack upon the trusts so vehement that no one will suspect of secret aid from them. It will be to its advantage if it will begin the next campaign with an announcement that no trust contributions will be accepted and then prove its sincerity by giving the public access to its contribution list. In public enterprises the names of contributors are generally made public in order to denote the character and purpose of the work.

"President Roosevelt has four years in which to make good his declaration that no obligations were incurred by the acceptance of trust funds. He will disappoint either the contributors or the voters. If he disappoints the contributors, the trust question may be put in the process of settlement. If he disappoints the people, they will have a chance to settle with his party four years hence.

"Death to Private Monopoly."

"'Death to every private monopoly' must be the slogan of the party in this question; any other position is a surrender. The platforms of 1900 and 1904 declare that a private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable, and this declaration presents the issue upon the trust question.

"The party must continue its defense of the interests of the wage earners; it must protect them from the encroachments of capital. The fact that the laboring men have not always shown their appreciation of the party's position ought not to deter the party from doing its duty in regard to them.

"The labor question is not one that concerns employers and employes alone; it concerns the entire community and the people at large have an interest in the just settlement of labor controversies; for that reason they must insist upon remedial legislation in regard to hours and arbitration, and they must so limit the authority of the courts in contempt cases as to overthrow what is known as government by injunction.

"The party must continue its opposition to national banks of issue and must insist upon divorcing the treasury department from Wall street.

"The party must continue its fight for the popular election of senators and for direct legislation wherever the principle can be applied. It must not only maintain its position on old issues, but it must advance to the consideration of new questions as they arise.

"It takes time to direct attention to an evil and still more time to consolidate sentiment in favor of a remedy, and Mr. Bryan is not sanguine enough to believe that all the reforms that he favors will at once be indorsed by any party platform, but he will proceed to point out the reforms which he believes to be needed.

"Among these may be mentioned the postal telegraph system, state ownership of railroads, the election of federal judges for fixed terms and the election of postmasters by the people for their respective communities.

"Instead of having the government controlled by corporations through officers chosen by the corporations, we must have a government of the people, by the people and for the people—a government administered according to the Jeffersonian maxim of 'equal rights to all and special privileges to none.' Hope and duty point the way. To doubt the success of our cause is to doubt the triumph of the right, for ours is and must be the cause of the masses.

"'With malice toward none and charity for all,' let us begin the campaign of 1908; let us appeal to the moral sentiment of the country and arraign the policies of the republican party before the bar of the public conscience."

Arraigned in Advance.

"Now, dear," said Mr. Polkley, who had just been accepted, "when shall I speak to your father?"

"You needn't bother," replied the dear girl. "Pa said he'd speak to you tomorrow if you didn't speak to me tonight."—Philadelphia Ledger.

JEWELED BUTTONS IN USE.

Some No Larger Than Studs Found in the Up-to-Date Trimmings.

Gandy is the one word which will describe adequately the buttons of the present season. They flash and gleam and flaunt myriad colors into the shopper's eyes, and bewilder her even more than do the color combinations in millinery, says the Washington Star.

Above all things the button of 1904-'05 is ornamental rather than useful. It is employed to give a finishing touch to an outdoor garment, or to relieve the suggestion of soberness in a house gown, or to trim, like sequins or embroidery, the girdles and stocks of the hour.

Extravagances in the button line show jeweled effects. Buttons composed entirely of rhinestones vary in diameter from a quarter of an inch to an inch and a half. The center is generally a good-sized rhinestones, with slender spokes of small, fine rhinestones radiating from it to an outer circle of small stones.

Again, the stones are set so close together that there is neither mounting nor dress fabric to be seen between them. The rhinestones used for these solid looking buttons are generally very fine and cut with many faces, so that the button sparkles, no matter how the light strikes it. Colored jewels are combined with rhinestones exactly as they are used with diamonds in brooches.

A striking button or marquis lines shows a large jewel, either turquoise, amythyst, emerald, garnet, sapphire, topaz or opal, overlaid with a filigree effect in silver, set with rhinestones. The marquis is in turn encircled by tiny rhinestones, and the button measures nearly two inches in length. These jewels will be matched with the color of the gown; emerald on a green dress, sapphire on blue, topaz on brown, etc., and they will be used in all colors on black velvet.

Sometimes the arrangements of the jewels is reversed. For instance, the center will be a large, many-faced rhinestone, from which radiate slender rays or spirals of jewels. These rays are built of wash gold, set with jewels to match the color of the gown, and topaz seems to be enjoying a particular vogue in combination with the new brown cloths. Opal centers, with petal effects in rhinestones, are used for velvet dresses and for evening cloaks in broadcloth.

A LESSON IN LANGUAGE.

Lawyer Asked for "Bones" and Got Them in the Literal Sense.

"A self-respecting lawyer should not indulge in slang," said Attorney Simeon Armstrong, according to the Chicago Daily News. "It is unprofessional and sometimes it is likely to lead to mistakes.

"Benjamin Morgan and his landlord were at outs. They had been friendly for a long time, as may be inferred from the fact that the landlord had allowed Ben to run in arrears six months rent for his flat. The trouble arose when Ben got a dog. The dog proved a nuisance. He began by uprooting the landlord's flower beds and destroying some neat little patches of garden in the back yard. Then he howled at night until the landlord threw a paper weight at him, breaking a mirror in a house across the alley. The dog killed the landlord's Maltese cat and other incidents arose. Then came the inevitable.

"Ben Morgan was excited when he entered my office. 'I want to know,' he remarked, 'if a landlord has the right to poison his tenant's dog in cold blood? And I also want to know if a landlord, after poisoning his tenant's dog, has a right to burn the poor animal's body in the alley?'

"Now, a man who hasn't paid his landlord for six months isn't likely to be in a hurry paying his lawyer. 'Bring [illegible]s,' Mr. Morgan,' I said, 'and I'll see what I can do in the case.'

"'I'll do that gladly, and I'll bring you more than five,' he replied, and departed.

"Now, I thought everybody knew that a 'bone' was a dollar. However, next day Ben returned carrying a sack whose contents he dumped on the floor of my office.

"'There's the bones,' he said, triumphantly, 'and good strong proof they are of the way that villain of a landlord of mine treated my poor dog.'

"They were bones, indeed; the black, calcined bones of his departed dog.

"'Ben,' I said, 'these are bones, sure enough, but not the kind that are necessary in a lawsuit. You'll have to try again.'"

GROCERY MAN AND COOK.

Exchange Left-Handed Compliments and Come Out About Even.

"Better let me bring you a nice eggplant this mornin'," said the grocery man to the pretty cook, according to the Chicago Daily News. "Then you can make your own eggs, Evelina. What do you do with 'em all?"

"Batter cakes, sweet cakes, custards an' omelettes mostly," replied the cook.

"Don't you ever make eggnog?"

"I don't know what it is," declared the cook. "I've heard tell of it, but I couldn't say whether it was baked or fried."

"It ain't neither," said the grocery man. "It's biled. If you go to fry a eggnog you spoil it. I'd sooner eat it raw. Where was you Thursday night?"

"Stayed in an' sewed buttonholes on my dishcloths," said the pretty cook.

"What was that for?"

"To make 'em look pretty—same reason you've got your mustach curled. I think a man looks well curlin' up his mustach with curlin' tongs—like a girl."

"I never seen a girl curl her mustach myself," said the grocery man. "I wasn't to blame for this, though. It was the barber. He got me tied in the chair so's I couldn't move an' gagged me so's I couldn't holler an' then got ont his hot irons an' done the job. I didn't want him to do it."

"I s'pose not," said the pretty cook.

"Sure thing I didn't. I knowed I was beautiful the way I was. My natural looks make me enough trouble with the girls."

"I don't think they ought to blame you for 'em," said the cook. "You can't help your face. I had an uncle once that looked something like you—not quite as bad, maybe—but he was sensitive about it all the same, which you ain't."

"He ought to have had his face amputated if it was as bad as that," observed the grocery man. "Or he might have gone to one of these face foundries an' had it recast. I knew a feller once they called Nosey, an' he saved his money an' went to a professor an' got his beak trimmed down so he didn't hardly have enough left to smell fried onions. Then they got to callin' him Pug, an' he went back to the professor an' wanted to know if he had any of the old material left to put back agin. The professor done the best he could an' the job looked all right, but Nosey died of heart failure less'n a month after that. He was scared to death for fear somethin' would make him sneeze."

"You'd better see one o' them professors," observed the pretty cook.

"Why would I?" asked the grocery man. "My nose is all right as far as it goes an' it goes as far as I want to foller it."

"Your nose may be all right."

"I guess it is," said the grocery man, indignantly. "How about my hair?"

"I don't like red myself," said the cook, "but the color's good enough for them as likes it. It's yonr lip I object to."

Disenchanted Don.

A novel illustration of the saying: "Listeners never hear any good of themselves," comes from the London Tatler. An Oxford don, more highly esteemed for intellectual activity than modesty, was asked to speak into a phonograph. A little later the machine was turned on again, and he was requested to listen to his own voice. He listened in silence, then turned to the company. "It is very strange!" he said, in a tone of mingled surprise and resentment. "I can't understand it, but through this machine I am made to speak in a peculiarly bumptious and affected manner!"

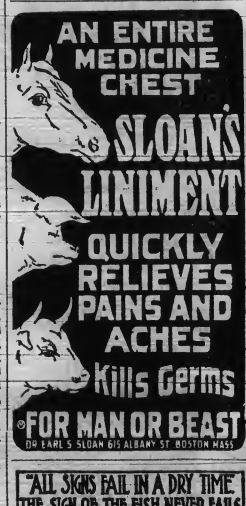
GIRL AND WOMAN

CARE NEEDED AT THE CHANGE FROM ONE TO THE OTHER.



Many a Life Spent in Suffering Because Troubles Were Allowed to Develop At This Time.

Every mother of a growing girl should remember that there will come a time when her daughter will be a girl no longer but will share with her the blessings of womanhood. Unless nourishment keeps pace with growth the foundations of a life of suffering are laid at that time. Mrs. John MacKinney, of No. 478 Thirteenth street, Detroit, Mich., writes a timely word. She says:

"I did not get proper care at the first critical time in my life and for seventeen years I suffered as a result. I had dizzy spells, felt a constant fear that something dreadful was about to happen and was afraid to go out alone. My breathing was very short and I had palpitation of the heart so badly that I could not go up stairs nor walk even moderately fast. I was so nervous that I could not sit still. At different times for years I was under the care of the best physicians in Detroit and I tried a number of advertised medicines. Nothing helped me until, on the advice of a neighbor, I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I felt relieved before the first box was finished and I kept on taking them until I was cured.

"Last winter my little girl had rheumatism and I gave her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and she got well right away. My niece was thought to be going into consumption and, upon my advice, she tried the pills. They cured her cough and she is now well and strong. My entire family are enthusiastic over Dr Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and we cannot say enough in their praise."

These pills effect such cures because they go to the root of the disease. Other remedies act on the symptoms—these marvelous vegetable pills remove the cause of the trouble They have proved themselves to be an unfailing specific for all diseases arising from impure blood and weakened nerves—two fruitful causes of nearly all the ills to which humankind is heir. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold in boxes at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct from Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y.

Meet for the Master's Use

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyrighted, 1904, by F. M. Rossa.)

Chicago, Sunday, Nov. 13, 1904.

Read: "If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified, meet for the Master's use, prepared unto every good work."—2 Tim. 2:21.

HIS Master never uses an unclean vessel as a receptacle in which to place His grace and power for the saving of men. The careful housewife would not think of taking the uncleansed vessel and using it to cook or serve the meal. It must be prepared for the service which it is to render. The dirty spots must be scoured and the whole dish washed with hot water and soap and then rinsed in clean, hot water before it can be accepted for further use. And this illustrates a most important and vital truth in connection with the Christian. He must be purged and clean before the Master will consent to use him. And right here we must emphasize the vast difference which may exist between the Christian who is being used by the Master and the Christian who is using himself in the Master's name. Christian service does not always mean Christ service. The Christian in action does not always mean Christ acting through the Christian. The Christian must be purged, a vessel unto honor, sanctified, meet for the Master's use, before he can be filled with the presence and power of Christ, and thus prepared unto every good work. How the Master is hindered by the unclean vessels which are offered for His use! The spiritual life and power of the church is proportionate to the spiritual life and power of the individual members of the church. The spring cannot rise above its source, and the church cannot realize a higher spiritual strength and power than that of its membership.

So that the question of the condition of the church resolves itself into the question of the condition of the individual Christian. If the church is not "meet for the Master's use" it is because its members are not. If the church lacks power it is because the power of Christ is not flowing through the individual Christian. If the church is not being used as a clean vessel, sanctified, and meet for the Master's use, the fault lies at the heart's door of the individual Christians, and the remedy is to be found not in change of principles, or policy, or methods, but in the adoption of new-fangled devices, but in a purifying and cleansing of the hearts and lives of the individual Christians in order that there may be placed in the hands of the Master vessels meet for His use. How much this coming of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ is hindered and delayed by the unclean vessels which the Master is unable to use we will never know until He at last comes in glory and we know as we are known, but certain it is that the world would have been brought to Christ centuries ago if the vessels which Christ needed in the accomplishment of His world-wide mission had been kept clean and sanctified for His use. Every great revival, every great and glorious work accomplished for Him, have been preceded by a cleansing of the vessels that they might be used for Him. Heart-searching prayer has discovered the unclean places, the foul stains of sin, and the yielded will and the reconsecrated purpose of heart have united with the quickening Spirit to cleanse and purify until the Master could smilingly say: "This is a vessel which is fit for use. I will fill it with My grace and power. I will send it forth blessed and to be a blessing." And where there is a lack of spiritual blessing and power it is always because there are unclean vessels, unfit for the Master's use.

In the verse preceding our text Paul introduces the figure of a great house in which there are various kinds of vessels, some of gold and some of silver, others of wood and still others of earth. In the opinion of some commentators the great house typifies the church, and the vessels the members of that church. The vessels of honor are those of gold and silver, and those of dishonor the wooden and earthen dishes. The first are taken to represent the true disciples of Jesus, the latter those who are identified with Christ's church, but who are unregenerate. It is the figure of the wheat and the tares, the wheat and chaff, the drag net filled with fishes good and bad. The vessels of gold and silver are precious and able to endure the trying fire of God, and hence fit for His use, while those of wood and earth are worthless, fragile and unable to withstand the searchings of the Divine flame, and therefore are vessels of dishonor, filling a place in the great house, but never being used in goodly service. This exegesis would seem to be sustained by the opening words of our text, which declare that, "If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be," and so forth, evidently suggesting a separation from the worldly-minded, unholy brother, and a living before God that will be an example and rebuke to him. Instead of being vessels of wood and earth we are to have the preciousness of the gold and silver, and the transmuting power of Jesus Christ can change the commonest clay and the poorest wood into the purest gold and silver.

And yet a favorite figure used to typify the humble disciple whom Jesus loves to honor by filling with His presence and using in power and with glory to His name, is that of the clay, the common clay from which is made the vessel fit for the Master's use. Such thought brings cheer and encouragement to the poorest and weakest of Jesus' disciples. One may not possess the gold and silver of splendid training and abilities; one may not be the gold or the silver that graces and beautifies the conspicuous places, and that fills the most prominent and important positions. One may be only the despised and unnoticed vessel of wood or of earth, and still be so clean and sanctified that the Master as He searches the shelves for vessels fit for His use will gladly take him and use him. As the Master passes to and fro through His house, think of what may meet His gaze. Shelves full of vessels; enough for all the world-wide purposes of God. The church is not weak because of lack of numbers. With the forces now marching under the banner of the cross, Jesus could speedily win the world to Himself if those forces were obedient to His will and responsive to His mighty power. As the Master passes through His house he sees plenty of vessels. He finds there the gold and the silver ones. How He longs to use them. How much more could be accomplished with them than with the commoner vessels. How much the world needs them. With eager hand He reaches out and takes the gold and silver vessel. He covets it for His service. He has work for it to do. He looks within. Ah! what is it that meets His gaze? It is unclean. It is unfit for use. Sadly He replaces this splendid vessel and takes another to examine. So over the shelves He goes. The shadows on His face deepen, the pain and disappointment in His heart grow more intense, until at last with a glad cry way up on the top shelf out of sight and unnoticed and unknown He discovers the common vessel of clay which is purged and clean and fit for use. He takes it down. He says: "This will do." And into that common vessel He pours His grace and power until men, beholding, exclaim: "Surely, this man has been with Jesus."

Plenty of vessels, but what is the condition of those vessels? This is the first question which must arise between the one who would be used and the Christ who longs to use. What is the condition? Not the outward appearance, but the inward state. Not what man beholds and knows, but what God sees and knows. What is the condition of the vessel? Is it clean or unclean? The condition of that vessel is the point which determines whether it will be used or cast aside. What is the condition of your heart and mine? What is there that renders it unfit for the Master's use? Let God direct and conduct the search, and He will reveal the smut and the dirt and uncleanness which now renders you unfit for His service. What is it that can render the vessel unclean? Sin, you say, in its manifold forms and degrees. Yes, such uncleanness is readily recognized and understood. You do not need to be told that it is that secret sin, that self-indulgence, that violation of the laws of God and man. But there is something else besides the filth gathered by walking in forbidden paths and receiving unholy things. The dish upon the shelf may be unfit for use, not because it has come in contact with the foul or unclean thing, not because it has been used for impure purposes, but just simply because it has been allowed to stand unused upon the shelf until the dust has covered it. It was put away clean and wholesome, but now it is unusable because of the coating of black dust. And so it may be with the Christian. He may be unclean from disuse. He may have lain upon the shelf of indifference and neglect so long that the dust has collected—the dust of prayerlessness, the dust of no Bible reading, the dust of neglected duty, the dust of Sabbath ease and neglect of church. And if the dust is there it must be cleaned away.

We long to be "Meet for the Master's use." Shall we not say we will? "Make of me what Thou canst and by what process Thou wilt," cries that saintly and devout man, F. B. Meyer, "only let me be what Thou canst be."

"'Art thou able to drink the cup that I drink of, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?' By Thy grace I am able. Let me die with Thee; lie in the grave of obscurity and neglect; be counted as the off-scouring of all things; be broken on the edge of Thy wheel; pass through the fire of Thy hottest kiln—only let me be one whom Thou chooseest and usest, constantly in Thy hand; dipped down often into the brimming well, and back to Thy dear lips, or to the lips of whom Thou lovest.

"'The spirit is willing, My child, but the flesh is weak.' I know it, I know it, Lord. But I desire to die to the weakness of the flesh, its ache, its tears, its faintness, that I may live in the Spirit. Is not Thy grace sufficient? Is not Thy strength perfected in weakness? Is not the residue of the Spirit with Thee, to give without measure? Heed not my weak cryings, but perfect that which concerneth me. Only make me a vessel that Thou canst use.

"'He that would be great, let him be as he that doth serve.' I understand Thee, Master. Thou wouldst winnow my heart, and rid me of all that is proud and selfish. It is true that in the time past I have sought great things for myself; but that is gone now; I am but a weaned babe; my only desire is for Thee, for Thy glory, for the magnifying of Thy name; my one cry to be often, always, in Thy hand."

Such are the splendid stirrings and yearnings of the heart. May they not be ours? May we not be "meet for the Master's use," because we yield ourselves to Christ and become that vessel cleansed and prepared for every good work?

SAILS OVER THE JUNGFRAU

Swiss Aeronaut Spelterini Rises 20,000 Feet in the Air and Then Glides Past Summit.

Capt. Spelterini, the Swiss aeronaut, is so intensely gratified at the success of his balloon trip over the Alps that he is already planning a second flight. The captain has made more than 500 ascensions, but none, he declares, has so delighted him as that made on September 20, when he looked down on the white peak of the Jungfrau.

The balloon used was the Stella, and the place selected for its inflation was the station of the Eiger glacier, on the Jungfrau railway, which is situated at an elevation of over 6,000 meters. There a specially constructed departure platform was built, under which the gas was generated, the question of the amount of gas and ballast having to be very carefully decided owing to the elevation from which the start was made.

The inflation began at seven in the morning, the weather being clear and cold. At one o'clock in the afternoon the 1,600 cubic meters of gas had been introduced, the ballast bags to the netting were unhooked and the Stella soared upward.

Soon the balloon disappeared in a cloud, emerging from this, the airship was seen passing successfully over the Jungfrau, the Bluemlis peaks and the Wildestruhel, when it was once more enveloped in a thick cloud. A strong contrary wind springing up, the balloon was driven back in the direction of the canton of Berne, and made a safe but rapid descent, alighting near Adelboden, 30 kilometers east of the point of departure.

Capt. Spelterini took with him a large camera by which he took a magnificent collection of aerial photographs of the Alpine summits. The maximum height reached was 20,000 feet, the height of the Jungfrau being 13,671 feet above sea level.

CARS WILL BE FIREPROOF.

Noncombustible Coaches to Be Used in New York's New Steel Subway.

New York's subway will boast the first steel fireproof passenger cars ever built. They are no heavier than wooden cars and consist of a light superstructure similar to that of a gondola car with plate side girders carrying the load. From the floor the load is carried to the side by means of cross bearers and diagonal trusses, and incidentally these braces support the side girders laterally, in which direction they are weakest. It was necessary to use linings which would deaden the sound and resist heat transmission, and it was expedient to have metallic interior finish for its moral effect on the passengers. Hence, aluminum was chosen for lightness and permanence of finish. The flooring, which was a particularly difficult problem, begins with a galvanized corrugated sheet-iron in which dips are provided to hold the monolith fireproof floor. This flooring is covered with ash strips for a wearing surface. The platforms are steel plate covered with a rubber matting, cemented. The outside roof is of composite board covered with canvas, painted and fitted with copper flushing at the eaves. Pressed steel and angles are used for the transverse seats, and the supports of the longitudinal seats are brackets from the sides of the car and heater panels. The seats themselves are rattan on frames of pressed steel. Each car has 26 ten-candlepower incandescent lamps on each side and six in the center, with the reflection of the frosted surface of the aluminum headlining the lighting is exceedingly effective.

WHAT HE GOT THEM WITH

No Ailments in the Crowd, But the Fakir Had Something That Sold Quickly.

"Gentlemen," began the fakir as he arranged numerous bottles on a little table at a downtown street corner and prepared for business, "has anyone in this crowd got a headache?"

No one answered, relates the Chicago Inter Ocean.

"Has anyone an earache or a headache?"

Not a man had anything to say.

"Very well, then; but are you troubled with insomnia? Are you low spirited, and do you find yourself thinking of suicide?"

The appeal was like the other—in vain. The crowd elbowed each other, but no one advanced.

"Very well, gentlemen; very well. Now, is there anyone here who indulges in intoxicants and wishes to conceal the fact from the women folks? If so, I guarantee that one drop of this marvelous preparation placed on the tongue will instantly remove the odor of any—"

There was a mad rush from all directions, and for the next five minutes he gave change and passed out the bottles with both hands.

RIGHT ON HER DIGNITY.

American Heiress Had Inherited Just as Easy Money as Anybody.

"I understand," said the dignified English matron, "that your father made his money in—in trade."

"What do you mean?" asked the American heiress.

"That he amassed his wealth by buying and selling commodities that the common people needed."

"He did nothing of the sort!" retorted the angry heiress, relates Judge. "I want you to understand that papa did not work a lick for a cent of his. He made it every bit by skinning people with watered stocks. I guess that's just as easy money as the kind that you inherit, isn't it?"

An Honest Opinion.

Mineral, Idaho, Nov. 14th (Special)—That a sure cure has been discovered for those sciatic pains that make so many lives miserable, is the firm opinion of Mr. D. S. Colson, a well-known resident of this place, and he does not hesitate to say that cure is Dodd's Kidney Pills. The reason Mr. Colson is so firm in his opinion is that he had those terrible pains and is cured. Speaking of the matter he says:

"I am only too happy to say Dodd's Kidney Pills have done me lots of good. I had awful pains in my hip so I could hardly walk. Dodd's Kidney Pills stopped it entirely. I think they are a grand medicine."

All Sciatic and Rheumatic pains are caused by Uric Acid in the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make healthy kidneys and healthy kidneys strain all the Uric Acid out of the blood. With the cause removed there can be no Rheumatism or Sciatica.

"Hope," said Uncle Eben, "is a great thing. But it don't justify a man in doin' nuffin' an' settin' around all his life waitin' foh Santy Claus."—Washington Star.

Piso's Cure for Consumption is an infallible medicine for coughs and colds.—N. W. Samuel, Ocean Grove, N. J., Feb. 17, 1900.

Some people shed advice like a cotton-wood tree sheds lint—and with about the same results.

Mrs. L. C. Glover, Vice Pres. Milwaukee, Wis., Business Woman's Association, is another one of the million women who have been restored to health by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham: I was married for several years and no children blessed my home. The doctor said I had a complication of female troubles and I could not have any children unless I could be cured. He tried to cure me, but after experimenting for several months, my husband became disgusted, and one night when we noticed a testimonial of a woman who had been cured of similar trouble through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, he went out and bought a bottle for me. I used your medicine for three and one half months, improving steadily in health, and in twenty-two months a child came. I cannot fully express the joy and thankfulness that is in my heart. Our home is a different place now, as we have something to live for, and all the credit is due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Yours very sincerely, Mrs. L. C. Glover, 614 Grove St., Milwaukee, Wis." Vice President, Milwaukee Business Woman's Ass'n.

Women should not fail to profit by the experience of these two women; just as surely as they were cured of the troubles enumerated in their letters, just so certainly will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure others who suffer from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, and nervous prostration; remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

An Indiana Lady Tells of a Wonderful Cure:—

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham: It is a pleasure for me to write and tell what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I was sick for three years with change of life, and my physician thought a cancerous condition of the womb. During these three years I suffered untold agony.

"I cannot find words in which to express my bad feelings. I did not expect to ever see another well day. I read some of the testimonials recomending your medicine and decided to write to you and give your treatment a trial.

"Before I had taken half a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to sleep. I have taken now six bottles and am so well I can do all kinds of work."—Miss. Lizzie Hinkle, Salem, Ind.

If there is anything in your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She can surely help you, for no person in America can speak from a wider experience in treating female ills. Address is Lynn, Mass.; her advice is free and always helpful.

Don't Misrepresent
Just to Make Competion Fair.

We make the following explanation; before this season the Lawrenceburg Mill has only made one grade of feed, which they branded Lawrenceburg Snow Flake Mixed Feed, but this season, they are making a straight Bran which they brand, Lawrenceburg Snow Flake Bran. As their MIXED FEED was always a big seller in your county, we offer the above explanation so that if a dealer offers you Lawrenceburg Feed, you can post yourself as to what grade you are getting.

We offer you Lawrenceburg Snow Flake Bran delivered at Erlanger at $19 per ton, or same price at our Covington house. We still have some Mixed Feed to offer at Erlanger for $20.50 per ton. This is first-class feed, and would like to hear from you in regard to same.

The market on hay is dull at present, and looks like a good time to buy. If you are in need of any, would thank you to give us a call, can make up a car at most any point on Railroad.

MIDWAY.

[Uncle Blufe. A song by the Mid way correspondent, Tune—Sweet Bye and Bye.]

There's no use to worry and fret,
Or exert yourself at campaign work;
For There's no man on earth you can get,
That can beat uncle Blufe for clerk.

CHORUS:

Uncle Blufe!.....Uncle Blufe!
How long are you going to remain?
Uncle Blufe!.....Uncle Blufe!
All schemes to defeat you are in vain.

There were some who thought Blufe was a hog,
And said they would put him out o' biz;
The machine by some means jumped a cog,
And Blufe went in again with a whiz.

Uncle Blufe, &c.

There will not be a man have the nerve,
To try it on again very soon;
Just as long as he wishes to serve,
He will still be the clerk of old Boone.

Uncle Blufe, &c.

When Blufe shall have passed on beyond,
To that bright and beautiful shore;
The clerk's office will then be found
Vacated, but never before.

In the sweet..... bye and bye,
When he's gone to that beautiful shore,
You may then get the pie,
But never, no never before.

FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

New Way of Using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. Arthur Chapman writing from Durban, Natal, South Africa, says: "As a proof that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a cure suitable for old and young, I pen you the following: A neighbor of mine had a child just over two months old. It had a very bad cough and the parents did not know what to give it. I suggested that if they would get a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and put some upon the dummy teat the baby was sucking it would no doubt cure the child. This they did and brought about a quick relief and cured the baby." This remedy is for sale by all Druggists.

The One Out of the Ten

Thanksgiving Day Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Nov. 20, 1904.

Text:—"And Jesus answering said: Were not the ten cleansed? But where are the nine? Were there none found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger?"—Luke 17:17, 18.

NLY one out of ten to return and give thanks. All had received like blessing; all had felt the influence of the Divine life upon them; all rejoiced because of restored health and the bright future; all were conscious of a new sense of God and His overruling power, but nine went their several ways to home and friends and the old avocations and activities, and forgot to be thankful. Only one turned back to acknowledge the blessing which had come into his life and to recognize the One from Whom had come this gracious gift. Only one out of ten! What a proportion! Does it fairly represent the amount of gratitude in the world, to-day, among the peoples who recognize God as the supreme ruler and creator and giver of all things? May we accept it as a true index to conditions to-day? These are questions which we may well ponder at this season of the year when the harvests have been gathered and prosperity is crowning the land as the golden harvest moon crowns the star-gemmed heavens. The nation is called to give thanks; to render unto God gratitude and praise for His manifold gifts and blessings. Will you and I be among the thankful minority, or shall we forget to be grateful?

THE legend or story is told that two angels were once sent to earth to gather up the prayers of men. One was to fill his basket with the petitions of mankind and the other was to gather their thanksgiving. Ere many days they wended their way back to the Father's house, one with his basket heaped and running over and heavy with the innumerable petitions of men, the other with sad and heavy heart, but light and well-nigh empty basket, for the thanksgiving of men was but seldom heard and then so briefly that there was little to be found by the angel, diligent though his search had been. This legend, though it be but a story, forcibly emphasizes the sad lack there is in the human heart of true gratitude to God for His manifold gifts and mercies. It reminds us that while the few are thankful, the vast majority are either carelessly or willfully ungrateful. The sweet notes of the lark never came from the hoarse, slimy throat of the bull frog in the bog, and the sweet strains of thanksgiving never came from the heart immersed in the cares and self-interests and self-desires of this life. There must be a soaring above self into the blue Heavens of God's love and presence before the heart will swell with a new song and the voice will vibrate with the grateful chords of praise.

WE MAY not reach Paul's ideal, and "in everything give thanks." We may not realize that state of perpetual thanksgiving which it is the privilege of God's children to enjoy, but we may have our seasons of thanksgiving, nay we must have them if the heart is to be kept sweet and the life free from sordidness. For the 366 days of blessing of the past year, there should have been 366 days in which grateful recognition was given unto God for all His benefits and mercies, for not a day has come and gone but has been laden with its gifts for you. Perhaps you have not realized it, because your eyes have been holden by your own desires. You were looking for sunshine when you needed the darkness to mellow your life and prepare you to find new beauties in the sunbeams when they should again fall athwart your pathway. You had set your sail for the placid sea and the favoring breeze, and when your bark was caught in the storm, and contrary winds drove it away from the desired haven into strange and unpromising harbor, you rebelliously refused to accommodate yourself to the new and unexpected conditions. The cargo with which your craft was laden was just what was needed in that place, and it was there you could have found just what you required ere you set sail for the harbor you had before wished to reach. Yes, each day has had its treasure for you, and the spade of gratitude would have dug down and uncovered it for you if you would but have used it.

BUT if you have not reached the ideal and studded each day with the jewel of thanksgiving, surely there is room for one day of thanksgiving, one day in which you may search for the blessings and kindle the fires on gratitude's hearthstone. Don't say that the blessings are not there; do not declare that the year has been the darkest of all your life; do not marshal before you all the black days; do not bid rise to bring fresh grief the ghosts of all the disappointments, and sorrows and trials of the year! You can shut out all the sunshine and warmth that surrounds you in lavish plentitude by just plunging into the dark, damp cave. You can shut yourself in the chamber of ingratitude and feel only the blackness and gloom which fills the place, but you cannot shut out of real life the manifold blessings and tokens of your Heavenly Father which have been round about you all the year. They are there. Search for them. It takes the thankful heart, or the heart that is willing to be thankful, to find them. Oliver Wendell Holmes puts it beautifully thus: "If one should give me a dish of sand and tell me there were particles of iron in it, I might look for them with my eyes and search for them with my clumsy fingers and be unable to detect them, but let me take a magnet and sweep through it and how it would draw to itself the most invisible particles by the mere power of attraction! The unthankful heart, like my finger in the sand, discovers no mercies; but let the thankful heart sweep through the day, as the magnet finds the iron, so it will find in every hour some heavenly blessings; only, the iron in God's sand is all pure gold."

I HAVE wondered whether those nine lepers who were healed, and whom Scripture dismisses as ungrateful, never did take time to realize what Jesus had done for them, and to be thankful. Surely they did not on the day that the blessing came to them. Ah, how prone we are to receive the gifts of our Heavenly Father day by day and never take time to turn back and say: "Thank you." But perhaps some day that ungrateful nine met Jesus again and acknowledged His goodness to them. Surely, a delayed message of thanksgiving is better than none at all. Now comes opportunity of doing that which you have failed to do wholly or in part during the year. Shall the angel of the legend as he comes to earth on that day meet disappointment and failure, and go back sad, God with a basket as empty of thanksgiving as on other days? Will he pause before the door of your heart, and, instead of hearing the prayer of thanksgiving and the song of praise, hear the chatter and commotion that concerns only the things of self? Will he receive from you just the merest bit of a hasty word of thanksgiving, and then see you rush off to the joys and activities of the day, with not another thought of God or of being thankful to Him? Will he go to the meeting house, where the president and the governors have urged the people to assemble to give thanks to God, and find the doors closed, or, if open for union services, will he find the pews half filled, while the hurrying multitudes, the nine out of the ten, pass the door on their way to the football match, or the social function, or the day's sport of one nature or another? Say, will he? Will he go back laden with your offering of praise and thanksgiving, or will the day come and go without one thought, one word of thanksgiving? Will its moments flee away without one single precious one being filled with God and what God has done for you? God forbid!

JESUS is asking to-day: "Where are the nine?" Recipients of God's favor, they are rushing off to their own devices, forgetful and indifferent. They lost the blessing that always comes to the grateful heart. They failed to hear Jesus' words of cheer: "Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole." Jesus misses the nine, but He does not forget to give added blessing to the one out of the ten who turns back to Him. I want you to note the deep spiritual meaning implied in Jesus' words. The pathway of thanksgiving led that healed leper back to Jesus for a new experience, for a greater blessing than mere physical cleansing. And thus gratitude, real and sincere, will open up the way to new experiences, it will begin a new relationship with God. Down at Jesus' feet in the dust of repentance and submission is the real starting point for every soul. Down at Jesus' feet is the place where we may hear the encouraging: "Arise." Jesus alone can set the needy soul upon its feet. The consciousness of dependence upon God, of His goodness and mercy, brings the heart low before Him, but it is always that He may lift it up to a higher and better plane of living than ever before. And when on his feet, he receives his commission: "Go thy way." But what a different way than ever before. Back to home and friends as of yore! Yes. Back into the old scenes of activity as before the scourge had fastened itself upon him! Yes. And yet it was a different way, for he was a different man. He had met Jesus. Jesus had become a vital factor and motive in his life, and whither he went the influence of the Divine life went too, so that it was a different way.

AND as he went he heard the reassuring words: "Thy faith hath made thee whole." And did he have more than the other nine? All were cleansed. All had perfect physical manhood restored, but only to one did Jesus say: "Thy faith hath made thee whole." Whole! Whole in body and soul, just as God has made man and intended him to be. Ah, is a man whole, though he be a perfect Apollo in physical vigor and strength and beauty, if the eternal soul within is diseased and dwarfed and dying? Ah, no! Ere many years after this incident of healing those ten men were lying cold and dead within the tomb. The bodies which Jesus restored to health that day were laid aside and the souls that had sheltered within them had sped on into the presence of God. The one out of the ten trod the way of blessing because with a grateful heart he took time to turn back and give thanks to the One from Whom he had received. The ungrateful heart can never know such experience. For this reason Scripture urges us over and over again to be thankful, to mingle thanksgiving with every experience of life. Shall we not be among those who turn back to give thanks to God? As we bow before Him we will hear Him calling us to a higher and newer life; we will find our way in life glad with His presence; we will begin to know what the blessed words, "thy faith hath made thee whole," mean! Let us be the one out of the ten!

CASWATTER'S TURKEY

A Story of Art and a Thanksgiving Dinner

On November 23 things looked pretty gloomy for Sebastian Caswatter. He had intended to celebrate Thanksgiving day as it should be celebrated, with all the proper accompaniments. But the trouble was that Caswatter did not know just exactly where the money was to come from. With rare providence he had set apart a five-dollar bill from the sale of his "Prometheus," but the coal had run out and more had to be bought.

"Never mind," said Caswatter, "I'll take that 'Autumn Sunset' down to Perdigan to-morrow. I'd made up my mind that I'd keep it if I couldn't get $100 for it, but if Perdigan wants it for $50 he can have it."

Mrs. Caswatter almost wept, for she knew how much her artist husband thought of that "Autumn Sunset." He would almost rather have parted with his "Solitude" or his "Gloaming" or his "Achilles in His Tent." It was a masterpiece. "Solitude," "Gloaming" and "Achilles" were also masterpieces. There were few things that Caswatter painted that were not masterpieces. The great difficulty was that they would not sell.

On the 24th Caswatter took the "Autumn Sunset" under his arm and offered it to Perdigan. But Perdigan declined to give him the $50 for it. In fact, he wouldn't have it at any price. Caswatter bore his disappointment with an air of indifference, but he felt it nevertheless.

He went upstairs to his attic studio and began to pace the floor in great agitation. He was an artist, but he was also a father, and the thought of little Leonard's disappointment when invited to sit down to pork chops was maddening, and the pork chops seemed inevitable. As he walked and gnawed his beard his eye fell upon "Solitude," and he made a sudden resolve. He would have that Thanksgiving dinner at all costs. He wrapped the picture carefully in the paper that he had just taken off "An Autumn Sunset" and started out.

Perdigan looked at it with his under lip pushed out and said:

"Well, I'd like to make you an offer for it, but—you see, it isn't the sort of thing that sells. I'll tell you, though, if you would like to leave it here I'll do the best I can with it on a commission."

"I suppose you wouldn't care to advance me a little on it," said Caswatter.

"Why, I'd like to, but you know that's altogether against our rules."

"I'll leave it," said Caswatter.

Caswatter went back to his studio and did some more walking. Usually he dismissed household cares easily from his mind, but this dinner he had counted on so surely. He could see it—actually see it. He laughed savagely and, sitting down before his easel, began to sketch the outlines of a mammoth turkey. Then the idea took him and he forgot his woes. Gradually the turkey took shape and form and a celery glass topped with a fringing bouquet of stalks and leaves, appeared beside it; then a bowl and a background of pies. He drew up his stool closer and began to spread on the color and worked more and more feverishly until the waning light forced him to desist.

Early on the morning of the 25th he arose and attacked his "Bareemide's Feast" with undiminished fury. By 11 o'clock it was finished. He took it down into the little dining room, set it on the mantelpiece and then called Mrs. Caswatter to look at it. "There's your Thanksgiving dinner," he said. "We'll look at that and imagine it's real."

Mrs. Caswatter was visibly impressed. "What a genius you are!" she said, admiringly. "That turkey looks as if it had just been taken from the oven. I can smell it. And the cranberry sauce!"

At 12 o'clock Mrs. Caswatter tapped at her husband's door. "My dear," she said, "I hate to disturb you, but Mr. Tublin, the grocer, is down below. He said he's called for the balance of his account. I told him you were busy, but he said he'd like to see you, and he'd wait."

Caswatter groaned. "Well, I'll be right down, dear," he said.

When he went downstairs he found Tublin in the dining-room standing before the turkey picture, open-mouthed with admiration.

"A fine picture, that, sir," he said, with feeling.

"About that balance. How much is it?" asked the artist.

"It's only $5.35," replied the grocer. "I was just passing and—I never seen a prettier piece of work than that. It'll make a dandy thing for my window."

"You look in next week some time and I'll pay you," said Caswatter.

"Much obliged," said the grocer, absently. "Now, that picture—I wonder where I could buy one like it?"

"You can have that for a $10 bill," said Caswatter.

The grocer instantly produced a fat pocketbook and, taking out a bill, laid it on the table and advanced to the picture.

"Here, it's wet yet," said Caswatter.

"So it is," said the grocer. "Well, I must handle it carefully. That's going to help trade this afternoon and this evening. "Good evening, Mr. Caswatter."

Caswatter looked at the $10 bill on the table. Then he smote his forehead.

"Oh, art!" he cried, in anguish.

But an exact replication of the pictured turkey smoked on his table the next day. And if when his last piece of pumpkin pie was consumed Caswatter was not thankful he certainly looked it.—Chicago Daily News.

THE COMING DEMOCRACY.

Party Organized on True Democratic Basis Will Fight for 1908.

Real democracy eventually will control this country for the benefit of a majority of its citizens.

The democrats will one day manage the country for the benefit of its 80,000,000 of citizens, and not in the interests of its 2,000 contributing millionaires.

But, to win, the democratic party must be democratic. Men that the democrats know and want must be nominated.

Men that democrats wisely mistrust and despise, men of the Belmont-McCarren stripe, must be put out of the party, confined in their activities to their Wall street or their race track gambling, prevented from gambling with the prospects and usefulness of a great party.

Democrats will now proceed to organize on a truly democratic basis—beginning to-day their preparation for the fight of 1908.

They have the consolation of knowing at least that the day of the democratic traitors is past. They know that no democratic national candidate will ever again have to carry the parasitic load of Belmonts, McCarrens, etc., that proved too heavy for Judge Parker and his hopes.

The people of the United States want a democratic party, they are going to have it, and it is going to be victorious. —Chicago American.

IT WAS THE INEVITABLE.

All Chances of Democratic Success Were Thrown Away at St. Louis.

The expected has happened as to the result of the election—the unexpected as to the magnitude of the victory. The republican party, called to power in the political and business chaos of 1896, is still riding on the flowing tide of success.

The World has never expected nor predicted a different outcome of the campaign. It has never deceived itself nor attempted to mislead its readers as to the extreme probability of Mr. Roosevelt's election. It has made its fight on principle, regardless of results. There is no connection between success and moral convictions.

Whatever chance there may have been for the democrats was thrown away at St. Louis. A party that has been eight-tenths wrong for eight years cannot regain public confidence at once by being even eight-tenths right—particularly when on the vital question of honest money it was set right only under compulsion by its nominee.

The extreme and unnecessary statement in the platform—"protection is robbery"—branding as criminal a policy as old as our government, hurt the democratic candidate in the chief doubtful states, all of which are heavily interested in manufactures.—N. Y. World.

Defeated But Undismayed.

The democratic party has no reason to be discouraged or disheartened. Always the evils that affect the state, unless they be gross and unbearable, must be left to come to their fruition before the people can be stirred. We believe that the tendencies which rule republicanism, that the influences to which the party must bow, that the policies to which it is committed, will work out their own ruin. Defeated but undismayed the democratic party faces the future, as sure of its mission, as confident of its place in the republic, as convinced of its future triumph as at any time in its history. Calmly it accepts this great defeat, facing the future that surely belongs to it when the people shall determine to assume their own once more.—St. Paul Globe.

The Use of Money.

The election of Theodore Roosevelt comes as a great disappointment to the people of the southern states, but not as a surprise. The odds were against the democratic party from the first, and the fight was conducted uphill from beginning to the end. The democracy deserved to win because of the soundness of its policies, the high character of its candidate and the grave dangers which democratic success would have averted, but the unprecedented use of money contributed by specially favored corporations was sufficient in close states to control the election.—Houston (Tex.) Post.

Democracy Still Lives.

Well, the agony is over and, whatever else may be said about it, we are no worse off than we were before it began! We did the best we could under all the circumstances, and there is nothing to say further than that, with united front, we will meet the ancient enemy on the battle field four years hence, confident the time will yet come when right will triumph. The democratic candidates have been beaten, but democracy lives, and will continue to live, in the hearts of millions throughout the length and breadth of the land.—Atlanta Constitution.

—The democratic party was safe and sane, all right, but uncomfortably small.—N. Y. Post.

WISPS OF WISDOM.

The man who has nothing but money is worse than a pauper.

The man with a message never has any difficulty in securing a hearing.

The best way to forget old age is to have a joyous childhood to remember.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Remarkable Coincidence Which Would Have Made a Bad Case for Innocent Man.

"Several years ago I took a late train from Boston to New York," said a man in business in Kansas City, according to the Star. "In the morning I was awakened earlier than usual by the porter, who said that a robbery had been committed on the sleeper during the night and that all the passengers would have to get up. Some one had taken six $100 bills from the clothing of a gentleman who occupied a berth in the middle of the car. Every section had been taken before he left Boston, and as the train had been almost constantly in motion it seemed certain that the person who had committed the theft was still on the car. The porter said no one had been aboard but the passengers and that none of them had left. It was proposed to search everybody. A man who had a berth directly opposite from the one who had been robbed objected. He told his name and said anyone might easily find that he was a man of good reputation. In the meantime some officers boarded the car and after a little sweating got the money from the colored porter, who was the guilty one. Then the passenger who had refused to be searched asked the officers to examine his pockets. This seemed strange, but he insisted. In an inside pocket they found six $100 bills. It was merely a coincidence that he should have the same amount of money as the other passenger had lost, and in exactly the same denominations, but he knew that under the circumstances he could hardly establish his innocence. How was that for a case of circumstantial evidence?"

WITH DUKES AND THINGS.

Newcomer in Society Who Got Mixed Up with Persons of Title.

Mrs. Porkdollars has not as yet got over the novelty of riches. At the same time she is not inclined to admit this, and it is her great desire, relates London Answers, that the society with which she is now entitled to mix by virtue of her husband's wealth shall think she was born in the purple.

Recently she was at a big dinner party, and as she was being piloted from drawing-room to dining-room, she noticed a marble bust on one of the pillars in the hall.

"Do you know who that is?" she inquired of her cavalier.

"That is Marcus Aurelius," was the answer.

"Oh, is it, now?" ejaculated the lady. "But can you tell me," she added promptly, "whether it is the present markis or the late markis? I do get so mixed up with your dukes and things!"

Hats for gentlemen are now worn larger. They must be a size larger than formerly, so as to come down farther on the back of the head of the wearer. That is the latest authorized dispensation. On the whole, it is better than the old style of wearing a head too big for one's hat, as the saying goes. It dispenses with the implied swelling.—Boston Herald.

An English writer tells of a poor woman of London who wondered why the Lord permitted her worthless husband to live. "I suppose," she said, "the Lord has an idea that he'll repent, but I know better."

As Grandpa wields the carving knife
Upon Thanksgiving day.
The heaping plates with goodly cheer
Around the board are sped.
And first of all, so Grandpa says,
The children must be fed.

"God bless the children!" Grandpa cries,
Upon Thanksgiving days;
A wishbone there, a drumstick here,
Their stomachs needs to stay.
And when all helped in bounteous wise,
He turns his own plate o'er,
He's greeted with the pleading of "More, Grandpa, please some more!"

Jim Moore's Thanksgiving Dinner

By Will J. Lampton

No. 47 was due at Bridgeport at 12 o'clock noon. It was Thanksgiving day and Jim Moore, the engineer, was booked to dine at home on turkey with cranberry sauce on the side, not to mention a few oysters, with a wind-up of mince pie that was warranted to make a man throw in a whole carload of thanks, extra. Bridgeport was the end of his division, and as it happened his off day occurred on Thursday, his wife and all the kin on both sides were to have dinner that day at Jim's. It was to be the dinner of their lives, too, for Jim had not been at home on Thanksgiving day since his marriage five years before the date of this chronicle.

The weather had been very bad for several days before Thanksgiving, and every day of that week it had rained as if there had been an encore for Noah's flood, and the elements were doing their best to respond to it. The road ran through 20 miles of river bottom lands so low that in places long trestles supported the tracks, and it was at times a section that engineers were glad to get through without some kind of an accident. On this trip Moore had an eight hour run and he had accomplished but half of it when he reached the low grounds. As the engine swung round the last curve out of the hills, and the first view of the valley presented itself, through the pouring rain, Dick Long, the fireman, burst forth.

"Look at that sea, Jim," he shouted above the roar of the engine. "We ain't made of floatin' stuff, and do you reckon we can swim?"

Moore swept the watery waste with his trained eyes. There was indeed a wilderness of water spread before them, but the railway tracks were plainly visible, winding through it like a great sea serpent with the ribs sticking out of its sides, and with innumerable feet extending into the water at intervals and long reaches of dark body that had no feet. It was thus the trestles and the solid portions of the road presented themselves to him.

At the last station before passing out into the low lands and over the bridge which spanned the river proper, the train was flagged and the engineer was informed that he must wait for orders before proceeding further. For four long and soaking hours the engine stood on the track throbbing restlessly and taking the pelting rain as if it realized that it was being imposed upon.

"I don't care a cuss about the wet," said Moore to his fireman, "for this cab keeps us dry enough and warm, but what hurts my feelings is that I am going to miss the finest Thanksgiving dinner on the road between Millopolis and Bridgeport. I've got a bill of fare here in my wife's handwriting and it reads like a fairy tale."

He took it out of his pocket and began reading it aloud.

"Let up on that," protested Long. "Don't you suppose a fireman has got as fine feelin's as an engineer has, or do you? If I listen to that a minute longer I'll have a stomach strike."

Jim would have read further, even under protest, but he was interrupted by the conductor, who came up to the engine on a trot.

"By gum, Jim," he exclaimed, "the water has broken through the fill between us and the hills and we are marooned unless we go ahead and take chances on getting out."

"How about orders?" inquired the engineer.

"The wires went down in the rush and the operator has lost his connections at both ends."

"What's the matter with waiting here and taking it easy till the dry spell sets in?" inquired the fireman jokingly.

"See that water coming up there?" said the conductor, pointing to the rising tide creeping up the embankment to where the engine stood. "In a mighty little while it will be over this track, and the Lord only knows how high it will get or what will happen to the fill with all that water piling up against it, and more coming every minute. Fifty feet of the fill has been eaten away since the break took place back yonder, and it is dropping like grass before fire."

"We've got to get out of this," said Moore decisively. "Shake up the fire, Dick."

"But how?" asked the conductor. "We have a hundred passengers aboard, and we can't risk their lives, can we?"

"Do you want to drown them right here in the coaches like rats in a cage?" inquired Moore.

"Of course not."

"Then what are you going to do? Give them wings? Of course you are not. The way is open before us as far as we can see, and we've got to run for it and trust to Providence not to get shut off. Go back and tell your passengers the kind of a hole we are in and hear what they have to say. Quick about it, too, do you see that water crowding up on us?"

"BUT HOW?" ASKED THE CONDUCTOR.

The waves of the rushing flood lapped the shore in a soft pounding that was as insidious and as sure as an epidemic. The fireman shook himself and began shoveling coal into the furnace mouth. Moore touched a cock here and there; a spurt of boiling water from one, a sizz of steam from another, and he looked satisfied with the signs.

"Shake her up, Dick," he urged. "We have got steam enough to go on, but we've got to have enough to go like blazes. There's business ahead."

The conductor returned in a short time reporting that the passengers were unanimously in favor of taking all chances and make a rush for safety.

"Now, Moore," said the conductor, "it's up to you to get us out of this. Maybe you can't do it, and we'll have to go down together, or swim for it. You've got to let her go for all she's worth and get there or bust. Are you ready?"

"All aboard," Moore sang out cheerfully for answer, but with a firmness showing he had the best courage of his class, and their courage is of the kind that is even better than that of soldiers.

The engine was fairly humming now, and the steam was sizzing out of her, hot and dry, insistent upon having its energies exerted to the utmost.

"I'm ready if you are," cried Long, slamming the doors of the furnace, whose fires roared like the coming of a storm.

Moore took a long look ahead, and swept his eyes around the waters that were closing in on him. He tried his valves and cocks and saw that everything was in good shape, and with a word to his cab mate he slowly opened the throttle for the race before him. The engine responded to the impulse of the steam as gradually it forced a way through the steel pitals, tugging and straining for a moment and gathering speed as the throttle opened wider. She seemed to be stiff at first from long standing, but as she warmed up she loosened her joints and at the end of the first mile she was whirling along with the throttle wide open. The race for life against the insatiate flood had begun and Jim Moore sat with eyes straining forward over his engine as a driver looks over his horse, flying through the last quarter with the wire just ahead. Twenty miles meant only as many minutes under ordinary circumstances, but these were not ordinary circumstances. A hundred lives and a great engine and train of cars were in the engineer's keeping, and an angry flood, eager to destroy, was creeping swiftly upon him to take them to itself.

Five miles ont into the rushing sea and as the last car of the train rolled across a trestle it swayed under the contending forces of weight and water and fell into the torrent, leaving in an instant a gap where an instant before the train had been. On they sped, and the bridge over the river was in sight. The water had risen to the tracks between the train and the bridge, and Moore hesitated. It was as if he were plunging into the very river itself, for there was a wide spread of water in which no sign of a track appeared, and the road might be washed out.

"How is it, Dick?" he shouted to his fireman, who from his side of the cab was looking forward.

"Wet," yelled Long in response, pale and frightened, but with his nerve still holding good.

"Watch the fire," commanded Moore, with a grim smile, and the engine dashed into the unknown. The water flew out at either side from the great drivers in clouds of spray, drenching the cab, but the track was firm and the train passed through safely and onto the bridge. The long slender structure swayed and creaked and groaned, and the waters roared beneath, but the network of steel held, and the river was behind them. Beyond the bridge for half a mile the water obliterated the track again, but the engineer did not stop to make inquiries. It was death one way or the other—slow if he stopped; sudden if he went ahead and there was no track, and he chose the quicker route.

Safely again, and on, over another trestle which stood until the train was half a mile beyond, when it toppled into the flood and floated off down the stream. Five miles more, now, and the range of low hills with their elevation and safety rose before the hurrying train. The engine was whirling along at a mile a minute, and but five minutes were needed to carry them from the jaws of death. Suddenly the track sank and the engine plunged. Engineer and fireman clung to their places, helpless, but the wheels stayed on the rails and the engine dashed ahead. The water poured into the firebox and clouds of steam enveloped the men in the cab. The steam in the boiler went down as the water rose, but the engine struggled on as if conscious of the peril, and in a moment had caught the solid track again, and with a groan and a shriek as of pain, yet of triumph, she dashed out of the water and to the firm earth once more.

But she was not making a mile a minute now. It was all she could do to turn a wheel; but above the flood she gained heat and steam again, and ten minutes later the train pulled into little station on the high ground and the danger had been passed.

White faced and trembling passengers came hurrying from the cars to the engine with all kinds of praise and congratulations and purses, but Moore and his fireman were quite calm. They were as badly shaken up as any passenger they pulled, worse perhaps, but they were not showing it to the public, and in another ten minutes the train was running on to Bridgeport as if nothing had happened.

"Got any tobacco, Dick?" asked Moore when things were moving smoothly.

Long handed him over a big plug of the juicy, chaw kind.

"Well," said the engineer biting off a generous chew "this ain't exactly the kind of Thanksgiving eating I was figuring on, but I am darned glad to be able to get away with it."

"Me, too," said Dick as he bit off a hunk and heaved a sigh of relief.

JOY RESTORES HER SIGHT.

Shock of Long-Absent Son's Return Makes Mother, Blind for Four Years, See Again.

Sight has been miraculously restored to the stone-blind eyes of an aged mother by the voice of her son who returned unheralded after an absence of 18 years. The woman is Mrs. Sophia Fabian of New Orleans, and the son is Henry, now 39 years old. He left home in 1886 and none of the family had seen him since and heard from him but rarely.

Some years after he disappeared his mother began to lose her sight. Nine years ago one eye became totally blind and five years after the other one also was extinguished. Since then she has lived in total darkness, being led around by the hand. Being, as she is, 76 years of age, Mrs. Fabian never thought she would see again. Three years ago she went to an eminent oculist, who informed her that the sight of one eye might possibly be recovered, but that she would never see out of the other.

A short time ago Henry Fabian dropped in recently, and at once went to his old home. His mother was sitting alone. He came in upon her, and cried: "Mother!" Despite his absence of 18 years her mother heart knew his voice. The sudden shock of joy and the intense longing to see his face again brought a miracle and restored partially to her the sight of one eye. She threw herself into his arms.

The recovery was not complete, but ever since Mrs. Fabian's sight has been rapidly recovering. By the aid of glasses she can now read again and can walk entirely without assistance, although the printed characters are strange to her, and although she has not walked alone for almost five years.

MINIATURE BAR ON WHEELS

Philadelphia Hotel Introduces Cocktail Perambulator—Drink Mixed in Sight of Patrons.

There is something new in Philadelphia. It is the cocktail perambulator, and was wheeled about the other day for the first time by the waiters at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel. This is the way it works:

A patron orders a cocktail, and away goes the waiter. In a moment the thirsty one sees the perambulator approaching on two big rubber-tired wheels. The waiter pushes the perambulator to the table where the patron is sitting and it comes to a halt, maintaining its equilibrium by means of a rod, as does a hansom cab at rest.

Then the waiter takes a glass, some shaved ice and other necessary ingredients from the perambulator, mixes the drink, serves it and wheels the machine away.

Nocturne by Chopin Found.

The Twentieth Nocturne by Chopin has been discovered by the merest accident, in Rome, and it is said to be finer than any of the known pieces of that composer. Jacob Tobaja, a well-known Venetian, traveling in Switzerland, bought of a music dealer a volume of musical compositions in MS. The dealer had no idea of its origin and Taboja was only intersted in the curious handwriting. Coming home he examined the quarto, and a couple of pages that had been folded up attracted his attention. With the aid of a magnifying glass he deciphered the signature and title "Nocturno, opus 20, Chopin."

An Unlimited Supply.

Miss Rose Peterson, Secretary Parkdale Tennis Club, Chicago, from experience advises all young girls who have pains and sickness peculiar to their sex, to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many beautiful young girls develop into worn, listless and hopeless women, simply because sufficient attention has not been paid to their physical development. No woman is exempt from physical weakness and periodic pain, and young girls just budding into womanhood should be carefully guided physically as well as morally.

If you know of any young lady who is sick, and needs motherly advice, ask her to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., who will give her advice free, from a source of knowledge which is unequalled in the country. Do not hesitate about stating details which one may not like to talk about, and which are essential for a full understanding of the case.

Miss Hannah E. Mershon, Collingswood, N. J., says:

"I thought I would write and tell you that, by following your kind advice, I feel like a new person. I was always thin and delicate, and so weak that I could hardly do anything. Menstruation was irregular.

"I tried a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and began to feel better right away. I continued its use, and am now well and strong, and menstruate regularly. I cannot say enough for what your medicine did for me."

How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Fannie Kumpe.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have derived from your advice and the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The pains in my back and womb have all left me, and my menstrual trouble is corrected. I am very thankful for the good advice you gave me, and I shall recommend your medicine to all who suffer from female weakness."—Miss Fannie Kumpe, 1922 Chester St., Little Rock, Ark. (Dec. 16, 1900.)

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure any woman in the land who suffers from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, nervous prostration, and all forms of woman's special ills.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness.

In the death of Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge at Lexington, another member of one of Kentucky's most distinguished families has gone to the great beyond. He was endowed with a master mind and there are few as pleasing orators as he was, and thousands have been charmed by his eloquence in every part of this great land.

In Siam and in some of the mountain districts of India all the funerals of people who have died during the previous twelve months take place on New Year's day. The bodies are temporarily interred soon after death, but are taken to their last resting place on the 1st of January following their demise. The funeral and wedding feasts are celebrated together in these countries.

The natives of India take more and more to beer. Formerly the consumption was very small; there are now, however, many large breweries, and last year their combined production aggregated nearly 9,000,000 gallons. It is said that about 40 per cent. of this production is consumed by the army. Most of the breweries are in the Himalaya mountain districts, on the railroad line between the stations of Murree and Darjeling.

George H. Northrup, of Raceville, N. Y., refused $1,000 for Regent, a rose comb black Minorca cock. Being importuned to put a price on Regent, Mr. Northrup said nothing less than $1,500 would buy him, and he was not particular about disposing of him for that price. Regent is probably the most valuable bird under feathers. He weighs nine pounds and is accordingly valued by the owner at $166 a pound. Victor, the sire of Regeut, was sold last March by Mr. Northrup to Henry Schultz von Schultzenstein, of Berlin, Germany, for $1,000. At the same time he sold to the German fancier 22 other rose-comb black Minorcas for $4,000, one of the cocks bringing $500. Mr. Northrup is a wealthy man and his whole fortune came from a dozen rose-comb black Minorca eggs, which he purchased for $12.

Maryland, casting an Electoral vote for Roosevelt and seven for Parker, will do nothing unprecedented. In 1892 North Dakota chose a Populist, a Republican, and a Democrat as its three Presidential Electors, and the state gave one vote each to Weaver, Harrison and Cleveland. California's Electoral vote was split in 1880, when Hancock received five and Garfield one; in 1892, when Harrison received one and Cleveland eight, and in 1896 when Bryan got one Electoral vote from the state and McKinley eight. In 1892 Ohio elected twenty-two Republican Electors and one Democrat. Michigan's Electors in 1892 stood five for Cleveland and nine for Harrison. In 1896 Kentucky gave one Electoral vote for Bryan and twelve for McKinley, and in 1892 three Harrison Electors and one Populist were chosen in Oregon.

Colonel Henry W. Watterson is in town. He will sail for Europe to-morrow and expects to remain on the other side of the Atlantic for at least ten months. The result of the election has left Colonel Watterson in a very despairing mood.

"There is nothing to reorganize," he said. "The defeat last Tuesday was too complete to permit of hope, even for a long time to come. I have read that Tom Watson is talking about bringing together all the different elements of Democracy, but the man who talks of carrying out such reorganizing plans in six months or a year is impractical. Let Tom formulate. That's his business. But it will come to nothing.

"I can see neither hope nor future for the Democratic party until something comes along to burst up the Republican party. The Democrats were in power for about half a century until the slavery question split them. The Republican party is now so strongly intrenched that it cannot be dislodged except by a great split in the party itself or some great national convulsion like the Civil War. The talk of possible Democratic victory in 1908 is absurd.

"If wheat dropped to 40 cents a bushel and corn to 10 cents, if cholera broke out in the Philippines and yellow fever in Wall street, or if some great national disturbance or great natural upheaval which no one can foresee broke out, there might be some chance for the Democrats in four years from now. The protective system maintained by the Republicans is as great an oligarchism as slavery, and some time in the future it will wreck the party, but it is likely to be years before that happens.

"The Republicans have all the necessary resources to hold on to the position they have now. They are armed with Krag-Jorgensens, while the Democrats have nothing but bows and arrows. The Democrats have no money. I guess it was "Pull Dick, pull devil" up at their headquarters during the campaign, and now that it is all over I don't believe they have enough money left to buy a bottle of whisky."

Kentucky, famous for its whisky, has made a record on the water wagon, as will be evidenced by the statement that at the close of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition nearly 800,000 gallons of water will have been consumed in the Kentucky Building at the World's Fair.

No whisky has been bought by the Kentucky Commission, and all that has been used was the gift of distillers of this state.

"Hundreds for water; not one cent for whisky," was the declaration made by the Kentucky Commission at the opening of the Exposition, and it has been carried out to the letter. The water bill of the commission at the end of the Exposition will have amounted to $236.40, at the rate of three cents per gallon for 783,325 gallons.

For the use of Kentuckians and other visitors to the state pavilion a modern water fountain was installed, and that ice water was the more popular beverage among the men, who are sometimes alleged to have an especial fondness for something stronger, is attested by the enormous quantity consumed. It is understood that there is some whisky to be found in the building, but it has been used only for "medicinal" purposes.

Still another tradition which has served to place Kentuckians in a false light is that concerning the carrying of firearms, those in the effete East believing that every Kentucky man carries a revolver. At the Kentucky Building at the World's Fair not a pistol is to be found.

No Kentuckians have been arrested, either, by the Jefferson Guards or the World's Fair police, upon any charge whatever since the opening of the exposition. Several citizens of that state are on the Jefferson Guard, and they have proven to be of the very best service to the officers.

The prediction is freely made in Indiana that no matter what the issue in the Senatorial contest may appear to be at this time, it will be an out and out contest of strength between Fairbanks and Beveridge before it is over.

Judge Brown, son of the late Jos. M. Brown, Georgia's war Governor and U. S. Senator for years, is out in a card proposing that the electors of all the southern States vote for Roosevelt and make his election unanimous.

When Postmaster Sweeney, of Paris, was State Auditor under Gov. Taylor he paid out nearly $25,000 for the support of the army of soldiers that Taylor had brought to Frankfort. The Democratic State officers brought suit on his bond for most of this money, alleging it had been paid out illegally. The Circuit Court decided against Sweeney, but the Court of Appeals reversed this decision, saying: "It is clear from the record that no regular orders were ever given these troops discharging them from active service. Gen. Castleman, who was appointed by Governor Beckham as Adjutant General, never having given orders to them to disband. The meetings of the Legislature were not held at the State House between January 31st and February 19th following. We therefore conclude, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the pay rolls for the soldiers and their necessary subsistance were proper claims against the State, and that no recovery should be had on the Auditor's bond for these warrants although he paid them without proper voucher."

Some people are trying to make the impression that turkeys are scarce and thereby force up the price. It is said that the crop is fully as good as it was last year. —Georgetown Times.

In the Ninth District a contest for Congressman is on its way to the court of appeals, each party claiming the election of its candidate, but the Republicans appear to have the strongest case.

I was all run down from nervousness and overwork and had to resign my position and take a rest. I found that I was not gaining my strength and health as fast as I could wish, and as your Wine of Cardui was recommended as such a good medicine for the ills of our sex, I bought a bottle and began using it. I was satisfied with the results from the use of the first bottle, and took three more and then found I was restored to good health and strength and able to take up my work with renewed vigor. I consider it a fine tonic and excellent for worn-out, nervous condition, and am pleased to endorse it.

The great mills in the northeast are experiencing trouble in obtaining enough American wheat to supply their demands. A novel and successful plan to secure water during these drouthy times was adopted by Postmaster Young. He was told that if he would put a cake of corn bread in one of his sunken and dry springs the crawfish would work their way up to the surface to partake of the bread, and that a vein of water would follow them. Mr. Young tried the experiment a few evenings since and was surprised the next morning to find his pool filled with eight or ten barrels of fine water. This beats going to the expense of employing a drilling outfit to bore a well, which sometimes proves a failure as a water producer.—Mt. Olivet Tribune-Democrat.

EXPLOSIONS OF GAS.

Four Persons Killed and a Score Injured at Chicago.

Fourteen Miners Were Killed at the Carbonade Mines, Near Morrissey, B. C., as a Result of a Terrific Coal Gas Explosion.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Four persons were killed and a score of other persons were injured by a series of gas explosions that completely destroyed the plant of the Pyle Electric Headlight Co., in South Chicago, Friday. The shocks of the explosions were so severe that all the buildings near the demolished plant were badly damaged and windows were shattered for blocks and persons walking in the streets were thrown from their feet at a great distance. Over pressure on tanks containing gas is believed to have caused the accident. Several of the injured will die.

All of the dead were buried under tons of burning timber and hot brick and iron, making it impossible to remove their bodies for houra after the accident occurred. Firemen poured water on the portion of the building in which the dead were thought to be buried until the flames were subdued aufficiently to permit of the four dead bodies being removed from the debris.

The scene of the explosion is the old Hyde Park gas plant that passed into the hands of the Peoples' Gas Light and Coke Co. several years ago with the consolidation of the gas interests in Chicago. Through lease the big plant is occupied partly by the Pyle National Electric Headlight Co., which is largely engaged in supplying illumination for railroad coaches. This illuminant is forced into small retorts, which when attached under the floor of a car will supply it with light for months. In order to make this possible the retorts are subjected to an extremely high pressure. It was such a tank that caused the first explosion. Without warning of any kind it burst with a flash and a roar that shook the earth and seemed to lift the building from its foundation. Amid the hurricane of debris workmen were blown out of the structure, far into the street about the building. Before any one realized what had happened retort after retort exploded in such rapid succession that it was almost impossible to distinguish the detonations.

There were nine such explosions in all which left the plant in flames. Part of the demolished structure is occupied by the Peoples' Gas Light and Coke Co., and with the spread of the flames it was feared that two large tanks filled with gas would become ignited, but hard fighting on the part of fully a hundred firemen finally subdued the flames and prevented an explosion which would undoubtedly haye caused a great loss of life and property. The total loss caused by the accident is estimated at $75,000.

St. Paul, Nov. 19.—A Fernie, B. C., dispatch says 14 miners were killed at the Carbonado mines near Morrissey Friday afternoon as a result of a terrific explosion of coal gas. AMERICAN FEDERATION LABOR.

Charges Filed Against the Officers and the Executive Council.

San Francisco, Nov. 17.—Business and pleasure divided the time of the delegates to the American Federation of Labor Wednesday. In the forenoon a stormy session was held, in which a factional fight regarding the seating of John Mangan, a delegate from the Florists and Gardeners' union, among the Chicago unions, was aired. The question of the standing of the Chicago Federation of Labor, recently suspended by the national federation, also entered into the discussion.

Charges and specifications were filed against Samuel Gompers, president; Frank Morrison, secretary, and the executive council for their action in September, 1903, in issuing a charter to the bridge, stone and iron workers in violation of the provisions of the constitution requiring that such charters shall not be granted without the consent of the unions in closely allied trades.

San Francisco, Nov. 18.—The Chicago Federation fight was threshed out on the floor of the convention in the afternoon session of the American Federation of Labor Thursday, but after a hot and acrimonious debate lasting two hours and a half the matter was finally referred to the committee on local and federated bodies, with instructions that a report be rendered at the earliest possible moment.

The point at issue rested upon the refusal of the Chicago Federation to comply with the demand of the American Federation to expel two local Chicago unions. The basic principle of the whole dispute rested on a question of trade jurisdiction. The United Plumbers' Association of America claimed jurisdiction over the two Chicago unions in question, which were not affiliated with the national body. They were upheld by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, but the Chicago Federation persisted in disregarding the ruling and allowed two seceding unions to affiliate with the central body. The Chicago Federation was thereupon expelled from the national body until such a time as it saw fit to comply with the edict of the executive council.

San Francisco, Nov. 19.—By unanimous vote the delegates to the American Federation of Labor Friday decided to aid the striking textile workers of Fall River to the extent of $25,000 per week for three weeks. If by the end of this time it is found that the strike is not broken the executive council will, if it sees fit, continue the donation. The money for the purpose is to be raised by an assessment of one cent each week levied on each member of every labor organization affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Stirring and impassioned addresses on behalf of the workers of the Fall River district were delivered.

Delegate Driscoll, of Boston, put the motion before the house, which was carried amid the cheers of the entire convention. Many delegates arose in their seats and on behalf of the organizations which they represented offered then and there to hand over to Delegate Golden checks to cover the amount of their respective unions' assessments. Delegate Keefe, of Chicago, handed over a check for $1,500 on behalf of the longshoremen, dock and marine workers of his city. Others quickly followed suit, a delegate from the Brewers' union offering to turn over the actual cash if given a few moments' time to get it.

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 19.—The news that the American Federation of Labor had voted to raise immediately $75,000 in aid of the strikers here was received joyously by the officials of the various textile unions and the strikers in general. The newspapers issued extra editions containing the announcement.

The action at San Francisco is considered by most of the union officials aa the only step necessary to enable the strike to be carried to a finish. It is estimated that it costs about $10,000 weekly to conduct the contest against the mill owners.

President N. R. Borden, of the Fall River Manufacturers' association, when told of the labor body's action, said: "The assessment levied by the American Federation of Labor will have no effect whatever on the manufacturers. They can not and will not make any concessions."

TO ENLARGE NAVY.

Russians Engaged in Elaborating a Naval Program.

America Likely to Profit by It—It is Expected That at Least One Big Ship Will be Constructed in This Country.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 19.—America is likely to profit both directly and indirectly from the execution of the large naval program which Russia is now elaborating. The vital importance of the sea power has been Russia's bitterest lesson of the war and the government is fully determined that the maintenance of the empire's position in future as a first class power will be impossible without an adequate navy. If the losses the Pacific fleet has already sustained should be followed by disaster to Vice Adm. Rojestvensky's squadron, it will be necessary not only to rebuild the whole navy, but to increase its strength. The immensity of the task seems to be fully appreciated.

While some of the contracts will be placed abroad, owing to the limited facilities of Russian yards (and it is expected that at least one big ship will be constructed in America), the admiralty's plans will be directed towards ultimate divorce from dependence upon foreign shipbuilders by the organization at home of vast shipbuilding, armor plate, ordnance and kindred industries. For this purpose it is realized, however, that foreign builders and specialists must be attracted; and some alluring proapects are likely to present themselves. Vickers Sons & Maxim and Armstrong, Whitworth & Co., Limited, of England, have already made advances, but owing to the anti-English sentiment British firms are not meeting with a very cordial reception. The disposition is to turn towards France, Germany and the United States; and a great plant at Libau or on the banks of the Neva directed by American brains and possibly an association with French and German enterprise is one of the possibilities of the near future.

Among the Americans here negotiating with the Russian government is J. E. Wilson, who is trying to sell an invention of smokeless powder perfected by a Scotchman named Archbold, who once was a resident of the United States. The particular merit claimed for the powder, which is adapted to heavy artillery, is a quick-drying quality, ordinary smokeless powder taking aeveral months to dry.

Theodore S. Darling, who has options on the dynamite guns at San Francisco, which were recently sold by the United States, is trying to negotiate their sale to Russia, with a view to their shipment to Vladivostok.

FASHIONABLE FINERY.

The front panel is quite the newest thing in skirts.

Most of the small hats are tricornes or boat-shaped turbans.

The crown is quite distinct from the brim in the new turbans.

Tulle is one of the latest trimming ideas and is used in great quantities.

Ribbon of two contrasting shades is very smart for trimming tailor hats.

Coq de roche is most effective as a relief note with gray-green and brown.

Not for years has the separate wrap been such an important feature of dress.

The plush coat, put away years ago, is to make its reappearance this winter.

Aigrettes are to be much worn and are of spangled and jatted tulle for turbans.

Lovely poke bonnets trimmed with ostrich tips are ahown for wee maidens.

Lots of fire brown and spinach green will be exploited in panne velvet and net.

This new "yetta" skin is not nearly so becoming as the soft, long-haired furs.

It would be difficult not to find at least one becoming color in the approved list.

As long as big sleeves remain in vogue the short cape garment will be to the fore.

Toques made of velvet leaves and fruit are very modish, particularly the vine and leaves of the muscatel grape.

"WHACKS"

And What They Mean.

When Old Mother Nature gives you a "whack," remember "there's a reason," so try and say "thank you," then set about finding what you have done to demand the rebuke, and try and get back into line, for that's the happy place after all.

Curious how many highly organized people fail to appreciate and heed the first little, gentle "whacks" of the good old Dame, but go right along with the habit, whatever it may be, that causes her disapproval. Whisky, Tobacco, Coffee, Tea or other unnatural treatment of the body, until serious illness sets in or some chronic disease.

Some people seem to get on very well with those things for awhile, and Mother Nature apparently cares but little what they do.

Perhaps she has no particular plans for them and thinks it little use to waste time in their training.

There are people, however, who seem to be selected by Nature to "do things." The old Mother expects them to carry out some department of her great work. A portion of these selected ones oft and again seek to stimulate and then deaden the tool (the body) by some one or more of the drugs—Whisky, Tobacco, Coffee, Tea, Morphine, etc.

You know all of these throw down the same class of alkaloids in Chemical analysis. They stimulate and then depress. They take from man or woman the power to do his or her best work.

After these people have drugged for a time, they get a hint, or mild "whack," to remind them that they have work to do, a mission to perform, and should be about the business, but are loafing along the wayside and become unfitted for the fame and fortune that waits for them if they but stick to the course and keep the body clear of obstructions so it can carry out the beheats of the mind.

Sickness is a call to "come up higher." These hints come in various forms. It may be stomach trouble or bowels, heart, eyes, kidneys or general nervous prostration. You may depend upon it when a "whack" comes it's a warning to quit some abuse and do the right and fair thing with the body.

Perhaps it is coffee drinking that offends. That is one of the greatest causes of human disorder among Americans.

Now, then, if Mother Nature is gentle with you and only gives light little "whacks" at first to attract attention, don't abuse her consideration, or she will soon bit you harder, sure.

And you may also be sure she will hit you very, very hard if you insist on following the way you have been going.

It seems hard work to give up a habit, and we try all sorts of plans to charge our ill feelings to some other cause than the real one.

Coffee drinkers when ill will attribute the trouble to bad food, malaria, overwork and what not, but they keep on being sick and gradually getting worse, until they are finally forced to quit entirely, even the "only one cup a day." Then they begin to get better, and unless they have gone long enough to set up some fixed organic disease, they generally get entirely well.

It is easy to quit coffee at once and for all, by having well made Postum, with its rich, deep, seal brown color which comes to the beautiful golden brown when good cream is added, and the crisp snap of good, mild Java is there if the Postum has been boiled long enough to bring it out.

It pays to be well and happy for good old Mother Nature then sends us her blessings of many and various kinds and helps us to gain fame and fortune.

Strip off the handicaps, leave out the deadening habits, heed Mother Nature's hints, quit being a loser and become a winner. She will help you sure if you out out the things that keep you back.

"There's a reason," and a profound one.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

ANOTHER BIG BATTLE.

Increased Activity Indicates That One is Imminent.

General Attack on Port Arthur Resumed—A Shell From a Japanese Naval Gun Exploded a Magazine Near the Arsenal.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Consul General Fowler Thursday cabled the state department from Chefoo that the situation at Port Arthur is extremely critical, the outer forts having fallen into the possession of the Japanese. He also states that three Japanese torpedo boat destroyers are lying outside of Chefoo harbor and that the Russian crew of the torpedo boat destroyer are transferring their arms and supplies to a Chinese cruiser which is posted in front of the Russian consulate.

Tokio, Nov. 21.—It is reported that the Japanese, after successfully mining, occupied a counter scarp on Sung Shu mountain last Friday.

Increasing activity along the Shahe river seems to indicate the imminence of another great battle. The Russian feints, evidently intended to draw a Japanese attack, are uniformly repulsed.

Army headquarters Saturday received the following report from Field Marshal Oyama's report, dated November 18:

"At dawn to-day a detachment of the enemy made an attack near Hsingiuntun. They were repulsed by us. Since this morning the enemy in the vicinity of Shahke village have indirectly bombarded our positions with mortars and field pieces. They have effected no damage. A body of the enemy's infantry were discovered at Hsiamya and Hsiaoyantzu. We shelled them and they fled in confusion to a neighboring village. The enemy have burnt Huanglashetzu and villages to the southeast on the right bank of the River Hun."

A dispatch from the army besieging Port Arthur, dated November 19, says:

"During the bombardment this afternoon a shell from a Japanese naval gun exploded a Russian magazine near the arsenal. Our operations against all the forts are proceeding as prearranged from Manchurian headquarters. At noon to-day we shelled the Hucsian infantry engaged in entrenching east of Reiuchiangtun, and also infantry in the rear of the villages, causing them to flee in confusion. In other directions there is no change to note."

Chefoo, Nov. 21.—The general attack on Port Arthur was resumed November 18 or 19, according to the report of persons arriving here Sunday from Dalny. They say that the Japanese are so secretive that it is difficult in Dalny to learn the true facts. Even the officers detailed to work at the base do not know what their comrades at the front are doing. November 16 a peculiarly heavy explosion shook every ship lying at Dalny. The explosion was ascribed to the blowing up of land mines or a magazine.

Hecker, of Michigan, and has also told him that if he feels that his health will not permit him to take this place the president desires to offer him a position on the inter-state commerce commission.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 21.—Speaking with a press representative over the long-distance telephone from his home at Warrensburg, Sunday evening, Senator Francis M. Cockrell declined to say whether or not he had been offered the isthmian canal commissionership by President Roosevelt, or whether he would accept such an appointment if tendered him. I expect to reach Washington on Monday, the 28th, and shall take no action until then."

Senator Cockrell declined to say whether or not the isthmian canal commissionership would be an agreeable appointment. Saturday in an interview with a press reporter Senator Cockrell said:

"If tendered any position by the president I should treat it with the greatest consideration and do whatever might be best in the premises."

TWELVE PERSONS MET DEATH.

Two Entire Families Wiped Out By a Fire in Brooklyn.

New York, Nov. 21.—Smothered before they could reach the rear fire escape in a burning tenement building at 186 Troutman street in the Williamsburg district of Brooklyn, 12 persons met death shortly before 2 o'clock Sunday morning. Two entire families, those of Maranio Triolo and Charles Pologuio, are wiped out. the last living member of each being now in a hospital with no hope of their recovery. They are Charles Pologuio, 33 years old, and Tony Triolo, 13 years old, both of whom are terribly burned. Although, in the coroner's opinion, all the dead were suffocated, the bodies were badly burned before they could be taken from the ruins by the firemen. The burned tenement house is in the center of a row of three-story tenements extending the length of the block and was occupied by Italians.

The fire is supposed to have started in the cellar of the grocery store of Antonio Giambalvos, on the ground floor. The cellar was stored with inflammable material and the flames spread with lightning like rapidity. All the occupants were asleep at the time, and there was considerable delay in sending in the first alarm.

BIG FIRE IN CINCINNATI.

Property to the Amount of Half a Million Dollars Went Up in Smoke.

Cincinnati, Nov. 21.—Fire caused a loss Sunday in the central part of the city, on the south side of Fourth, between Walnut and Main streets, and also on Main, near Fourth, approximating $500,000. It started about noon in an abandoned building in the rear of the Pounsford Stationery Co. There was a strong breeze that caused the flames to spread rapidly so that with the whole fire department at work it required several hours to get the conflagration under control and early in the afternoon a general conflagration was apprehended. The loss on the several five-story buildings was $140,000, distributed as follows: McMicken estate, $75,000; Rudolph Wurlitzer, $40,000, Baker estate, $10,000; Sammet Bros., $10,000; J. Frank Jones, $5,000. The nine-story St. Paul building, owned by the Emerys, stopped the fire westward and was damaged about $500.

Next west of the St. Paul building is the 18-story new building of the First National bank, which suffered no damage. But little was saved east of the St. Paul building to Main street. As the McMicken estate all went to the University of Cincinnati, that institution is a heavy loser. The heaviest losses were on stocks of merchandise, as follows: The Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., pianos and musical instruments, $200,000; insurance, $220,000. The Pounsford Stationery Co., $60,000; F. A. Schwill & Sons, manufacturers of glassware and bottlers supplies, $55,000; Queen City window glass works, $40,000; the Loring Andrews Co., jewelry manufacturers, $45,000; Sammet Bros., tailors, $7,000; Thomas Kennedy, type machinery, $15,000; J. PROPOSED WORLD'S FAIR.

To Be Known as the Semi-Centennial Peace Jubilee Exposition.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 19.—Friday the first announcement was made of a formal movement to hold in this city in 1915 a world's fair to be known as the semi-centennial peace jubilee exposition, commemorating the end of the war between the states. It is learned that assurances of aid from the government and various organizations has been secured. The following address explaining the nature of the exposition has been issued:

"From 1861 to 1865 there was in these United States the greatest civil war the world has ever seen. Peace between the states was established on April 9, 1865. The year 1915 will be the semi-centennial anniversary.

"Chattanooga is the geographical center of the scenes of the civil war. With the great national interest that centers here the United States government would no doubt contribute generously to such an exposition. It has had for years in contemplation the erection of a peace memorial arch at Chattanooga which is to surpass anything of the kind in the world. This could be finished and dedicated in 1915."

A LYNCHING IS FEARED.

Wm. Moore, White, Killed By Three Negroes in a Lexington Saloon.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 21.—William Moore, a laboring man, was killed Sunday night by three Negroes who attacked the white man in a saloon. Moore leaves a wife and ten children unprovided for. He was standing in a saloon talking to two other white men when the three Negroes, Jim Garfield, John Taylor and Ed Taylor, came in the door and, with the words, "We will clean out all you white dogs," began firing. Moore fell without a word, shot through the heart. Two other men escaped by hiding behind a post which was penetrated by two bullets. The Negroes covered the crowd with their revolvers and backed out of the saloon. Ed Taylor and Garfield were caught and lodged in jail. John Taylor is a paroled convict, having been sentenced to ten years for murder. He served five years. A crowd has collected and a lynching is feared.

DYNAMITE OUTRAGE.

Another Explosion at the Newport Foundry Sunday Night.

Newport, Ky., Nov. 21.—There was another explosion of dynamite at the Newport foundry at 10:30 o'clock Sunday night, and Superintendent S. N. Shanley was knocked down and slightly injured. Since the explosion a week ago the officials and employes of the works have expected a repetition of the outrage and were on the lookout Sunday night when they saw two men approach the building.

Superintendent Shanley and Watchman William Eng ran out and discovered a fuse burning. They stamped it out, and at that moment there was an explosion a few feet from them that threw Superintendent Shanley backward against the building. He was badly bruised, and his ear drums were badly injured as the result of the explosion.

The Covington police were notified, but no arrests were made.

Big Sandy Dam Completed.

Catlettsburg, Ky., Nov. 18.—Amid firing of cannons, shrieks of whistles from more than a score of river packets, towboats and factories, the blare of a brass band and the shouts of 5,000 persons, including 500 members of the Ohio Valley Improvement association, who lined the banks of the stream, Big Sandy river lock and dam No. 1 at Catlettsburg, Ky., was Thursday afternoon formally turned over to the government by the contractors, who have been building it during the past three years at a cost of $400,000.

Elizabethtown, Ky., Nov. 21.—The Hardin county grand jury has indicted J. R. Neighbors, the saloonkeeper, on a charge of assault and battery for striking Mrs. Carrie Nation over the head with a chair in this city.

YOUNG TEACHER MISSING.

The Family Fears She Has Met With Foul Play.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 18.—Suicide theories to explain the disappearance of Miss Ida Baron were given a quietus by the discovery Thursday that the missing young school teacher had gone to her trunk, where she had $37 in cash, and taken out $47 before leaving the house. She is not known to have contemplated any purchases with this money, and it has been found that she did not deposit it in the bank where she has an account. She has an aunt, Mrs. Margaret Plato, in St. Joseph, Mo., with whom she corresponded. It was thought that she might have gone there, but a telegram from Mrs. Plato states that nothing has been heard from her.

Councilman John Baron, her father, believes that she started for the World's fair and has met with foul play. Her sister went to St. Louis to see the fair several weeks ago. She desired to go at the time, but decided she would rather use the money to make a payment on a cottage which she had bought.

It is known that Miss Baron intended to be at home Monday evening, and she had every reason to desire to be there.

A TRIPLE TRAGEDY.

Brothers Shot, Woman Killed and Her Body Burned.

Williamsburg, Ky., Nov. 19.—A triple tragedy occurred near Cumberland Falls. George Curd was killed, Thos. Curd fatally wounded and Emma Durham killed and her body burned in her cabin. The Curd brothers inherited considerable land from their father's estate and moved on it last summer to care for timber. They had put the Durham woman on one tract to hold it, and as they were passing near the house were fired upon. Thomas Curd was shot with a shotgun first. He fell over a bank and crawled about two miles to his home. George was dead when found. It is supposed the Durham woman was killed to hide the identity of the assassins. A large searching party has gone to the scene. The Curd family was one of the oldest and wealthiest of the county.

SHOT HIMSELF.

Add Casey, Son of Ex-Sheriff Tom Casey, Attempted Suicide.

Cynthiana, Ky., Nov. 21.—Add Casey, son of ex-Sheriff Tom Casey, who was defeated in the democratic primary Saturday for county judge, shot himself Sunday morning at 11:50 o'clock. The act is supposed to be on account of the depression over his father's close defeat. Young Casey was barkeeper at King & McShane's saloon, on Pike street. He shot himself in his room over the saloon to the right of the heart, the bullet ranged around to the side of the body. His condition is pronounced by Drs. Richter and Boyd as precarious, though the patient was resting easy Sunday night.

A Hunter Badly Wounded.

Covington, Ky., Nov. 19.—The pleasure of a hunting party was marred by an accident that may prove fatal to Julius Schmidt, a business man of Linden street, Ludlow, Ky. The gun of G. H. Merkel, of Cincinnati, who was with him, was accidentally discharged and Schmidt received the load.

Peacemaker Shot.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Nov. 19.—Matt Major, a planter, was shot in the side and seriously, if not fatally, wounded by a man said to be John Reese. Reese and a man named Carter were quarreling when Major interfered. Reese, it is said, then turned on Major.

A Brakeman Crushed.

Covington, Ky., Nov. 21.—Archie Clark, 25, a brakeman on the Southern railroad, was fatally injured Sunday morning at Erlanger, Ky. He had been coupling cars and when the train left the station he attempted to catch one of the moving cars and was thrown under the wheels.

No Trace of Miss Baron.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 21.—Miss Ida Baron, the schoolteacher, is still missing. Councilman John Baron says that he had not been able to find any trace of his daughter. "If she is still alive," he said, "she is either being kept away against her will or because her mind is impaired."

Murder at Mt. Sterling.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., Nov. 21.—Joseph Taylor, colored, was murdered here by William Black, also colored. Parties are searching for Black, who escaped, and a lynching is threatened.

To Shield Members From Punishment.

Somerset, Ky., Nov. 21.—The sentencing for life of Avery Freeman, convicted of killing W. H. Bryant, has divulged the existence of a secret organization, the object of which is the shielding of its members from punishment for crime.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is Pleasant to Take.

The finest quality of granulated loaf sugar is used in the manufacture of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and the roots used in its preparation give it a flavor similar to Maple syrup, making it quite pleasant to take. Mr. W. L. Roderick, of Poolesville, Md., in speaking of this remedy, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with my children for several years and can truthfully say it is the best preparation of the kind I know of. The children like to take it and it has no injurous after effect. For sale by all Druggists.

There is no question but that the repeated drouths in this section of country is due largely to the destruction of forest trees, which of late years has gone remorselessly on. In course of time the wise farmer will open his eyes to the necessity of planting trees to supply the need of those that have been cut away.—Georgetown Times.

A Washington correspondent says the greatest hoard of the yellow metal ever gathered in any country could not buy one year's harvest of our corn and wheat. To buy one season's wheat crop would take all the gold mined in this country in six years. In the last seven years all the gold mines have produced only enough to buy one year's yield of our six leading cereals.

The large shipments of water over the Cincinnati Southern continues, and the traffic of this line is almost congested because of the number of tanks it has to haul every day. Over 100,000 gallons of water are shipped out of Lexington every day, and there is no apparent sign of decrease. The farmers are all complaining of the condition of their crops, and with long faces, confidently predict that unless something moist comes to their rescue in the near future, the crops will be absolutely parched. The stock are suffering and water has to be hauled from great distances for live stock.—Lexington Herald.

One of our exchanges gives the following recipe for stocking the penitentiary: When your boy doesn't want to go to school let him loaf, when he gets into trouble and your neighbor reports it to you, curse your neighbor in the presence of your boy, but don't reprimand the boy. When he gets a little larger, and purloins something of value and you find it out just laugh at it and let it go; when he gets into something that calls him to the justices court and he is found guilty, pay the fine, curse the court, the jury and everyone connected with the matter, and pity the boy and you will soon have a splendid candidate for the pen.

One of the strangest holiday resorts, and one of the most interesting, is that recently made accessible to the public at Padirac, in the department of Lot, France. There a wonderful series of caverns, containing magnificent stalacities and a subterranean lake and river, has yielded the secrets to the adventurous explorer, and the dangers of the visit have now been ingeniously reduced so that the average sightseer may traverse the "antres vast" with ease and safety.

For ages the caves remained absolutely unexplored, but by the enterprise of M. Martel, a barrister, they have been thoroughly examined and described, and by means of iron stairways and galleries have been rendered accessible. One vast crater like opening is 300 feet in circumference and when M. Martel made his first visit to the depths he had to descend on a board attached to two ropes after the manner of a swing. He went down 300 feet, and with several companions, began an extraordinary series of discoveries. The chief of these is an underground river, which he navigated in a collapsible boat.

Albert Snyder was reported very poorly last night.

Anybow it is a nice time for getting ready for winter.

VOICES IN THE NIGHT

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Elson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Nov. 27, 1904.

Text:—"And the Lord called yet again, Samuel. And Samuel arose and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And he answered, I called not, my son; lie down again. Now Samuel did not yet know the Lord, neither was the word of the Lord yet revealed unto him."—1 Sam. 3:4, 7.

THE incidents surrounding our text bring before us a charming and inspiring picture. The rich and stately and sacred courts of the Tabernacle of Jehovah, the place He had appointed for His dwelling place in the midst of His people; the scene of the perfunctory services of Eli, the high priest, and the training school and seminary of Samuel, the novitiate. There was the outer court with its great brazen altar for sacrifice, and upon which the fire burned continually. Between it and the holy place stood the laver where the priests washed before entering the temple. Within the temple was the holy place with its altar of incense, and its table of shew bread and the golden candlestick on either side. Before the altar of sacrifice and within this holy place the high priest ministered daily. Then there was the holy of holies behind the vail where rested the ark of the covenant surmounted by the cherumbim, and between which there burned the shechinah glory over the mercy seat. Into this holiest place the high priest came but once a year. It was to this temple that Samuel as a young boy had been brought by his mother, and consecrated to the Lord's service. It was here that he ministered unto the Lord before Eli. But the word of the Lord was unknown and unheard in those evil days of corrupt priesthood and meaningless ceremony, and there was no revelation from God. The day's ministrations had ended; the aged high priest had laid himself down to rest, and Samuel, his faithful attendant, had sought his couch in the apartments adjoining. The gentle light of the seven-branched candlestick, burning without in the holy place kept its faithful vigil, and spoke of God's presence, while the souls of men were unconscious in slumber.

AH! HOW often we are unconscious of God's presence. The body, God's chosen temple, is the place where He would abide, but we know Him not. Self, the high priest, is there, to serve and minister to the desires and needs of the life. The thought is not above the physical and material. God's presence is not felt. Samuel, the young novitiate, is there, in the person of the gentle, sensitive soul. It serves as best it can before the high priest, self. But it is not given any service above the mere sensual and material. It feels a higher need and obligation even while it serves on the lower plane of the material. The period of the low spiritual condition prevails and the lamp of God's presence burns feebly. Such is the condition, oh, so often, in the heart and life! Such was the condition of Israel and in the temple. It was God's chosen dwelling place, even as the body of man is God's appointed temple. "Know ye not," God asks, that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" The temple had its appointed service, meaningless if the true purpose and spirit were lacking; It had its high priest to discharge the religious functions, and so the body temple has its appointed service, its homage to pay to God, its worship to offer. While self is the high priest in office every feature of the service is subservient to the dominant, physical, sensual self. The temple had its Samuel, the novitiate appointed of God to rise to the place of authority in the temple and to rescue the holy place and the sacred service from its debased and debasing conditions. And so the body temple has within it the eternal soul, the novitiate, whom God has appointed to grow up within and to rescue the body temple from its low spiritual condition.

DURING the still watches of the night voices are heard within the temple. God's voice calls: "Samuel, Samuel." Samuel's voice is heard in answer: "Here am I," as he runs to Eli's side, as was his wont when summoned to minister to his needs. Eli's voice is heard in dull, heavy, uncomprehending peevishness. "I called thee not, my son; lie down again." The three voices heard in the midnight watches of the life's great need. God's voice calling. The soul's voice in answer, and self quieting the query of the soul and bidding it go and lie down again. God's voice is calling to you and to me. We know not His voice. We are unfamiliar with the sound thereof. Once, twice, God has called, perhaps more, and each time you have settled the matter by urging the soul to the sleep of indifference and oblivion. Will God call again? Are you indifferent as to whether he will or not? Are you glad that the conscience of the soul has been stilled and its questioning silenced? Do you feel better content within the temple of your body that you can minister to your own need as the caprice and whim of self may dictate? God pity the man who has stilled the voice of God to the soul! He has so repeatedly turned [illegible] its questionings that [illegible] and the light [illegible] God, the voice of the soul responding to the voice of God, and saying: "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth."

SELF rules in the body temple. God wants self to surrender and to let His spirit control. Self as the high priest of the life is unresponsive to God's will and God's leading. Self seeketh its own gratification, its own ambition, its own plans, and is jealous of its rights. It rules, and proposes to rule. It is not willing to surrender to God. Old Eli in the temple must make room for the younger man. And when at last he opened the way for Samuel to meet God and hear His voice and receive His message, it was that God might deliver His judgment upon Eli and Eli's house for sin and misrule. When self at last is brought to the point of recognizing God's voice and bids the soul respond to God's call, it means that self is at last ready to step to God's judgment bar and receive sentence. It was God's plan that Samuel should fill the place of Eli; and it is His plan, His blessed plan, that the soul should occupy the place of self. Self is under judgment. It is to be destroyed. As God's word puts it, "the old man is to be crucified, with the affections and lusts." In order that the soul may expand to the infilling of God and occupy the body temple; in order that the new man, the new creation in Christ Jesus, may come to the fullness of the stature of a son of God. Self is the present occupant of the body temple that is to be judged and removed, while the soul is to be quickened by the touch of God and appointed to fill the high priestly office. It is not pleasant for one to contemplate the giving up of self in order that God may be formed in him, except as we view it from God's standpoint. With all the awful judgment before him, Eli could say: "It is the Lord; let Him do what seemeth Him good." And so can we say, as we hear the judgment of God against self and the will of the flesh.

THERE are three things in the attitude of Samuel which we wish to specially emphasize: First, he was awakened; second, he was stirred to seek, and, third, he was patient to wait. Had he had the spirit of some people when the voice of God at last pierces the heavy ears and wakes them to consciousness, he would have listened for a moment or two in impatience and then would have turned over for "a little more sleep and a little more slumber." But the voice of God aroused him, and he was thoroughly awake and anxious to hear and obey. He did not know God in a personal way. God had never spoken to him with distinct voice. Ah, how many there are who are in the same spiritual condition. But God speaks, and the voice is heard, and the evidence is furnished in the case of Samuel by his springing out of bed and seeking the voice, and in the case of the soul in its search after the voice that has spoken. Bed was no longer the place for Samuel, and the present place of indifference is not the place for the soul to abide. The voice has called. You are in perplexity and doubt. You know not what it all means. But the voice has called, and your duty is to spring from the place of indifference to that of active search. And "he that seeketh findeth." You will come to know clearly as Samuel did that it is God that has been calling, and then it is your part to patiently wait in faith until God speaks again, so that you may answer in obedience and faith: "Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth." Such must be the attitude of the soul if it would come to know God and hear Him speak. Awake, oh soul, to thy need! Seek that you may find! Patiently wait that God may speak to your soul His revelation!

SAMUEL, as he listened that night to the revelation of God, discovered three things, and every soul as he receives the revelation of God through the Holy Spirit has a like experience. Samuel found a new relationship with God. And because of the revelation and the fellowship with God his responsibilities were increased toward the nation whose prophet and judge he was to become. Has God revealed Himself to your heart? Have you been made one with the Father through faith in the crucified Son? Then upon you has rolled a new and heavy responsibility. Dare you be indifferent to it, while you hear the judgments of God pronounced against sin and the sinner? Dare you keep silent, while men are going down to eternal death? Can you remain indifferent while friends and loved ones are being swept along in the tide that will plunge the soul to eternal destruction? Yours is a new and tremendous responsibility; if the light of God's revelation has shined in your heart. And the third experience which comes with the revelation of God to the soul is the realization of God's righteousness and the awful sinfulness of sin. Before you received God's gracious revelation you perhaps did not realize what sin was and what awful judgments God has pronounced against it, but as you have come into the pure light of God's holiness and been cleansed from all sin in the blood of the precious Lamb of God, you have seen with God's eyes, and peered for the first time into the very abyss of the pit. Samuel did not realize the iniquity of Eli's house, great as he knew it to be, until God revealed it to him that night. And so we must receive God's revelation to view sin in its true light. May God help us to bear the voices in the night: The voice of God, speaking to the soul. The voice of the inner self abiding the soul seek of God, the voice of the soul responding to the voice of God, and saying: "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth."

THE REAL INSIDE OF IT.

WHY MISSOURI CHANGED.

Republicans Won Through the Indifference of Democratic Voters.

Drunk with the joy of a Butler victory, the Globe recently emptied this cornucopia of craziness upon the republican banquet tables:

"All hail, republican Missouri! It is no longer poor old Missouri, but a state that stands erect with its face to the light and marching in company with New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana. Missouri has cut loose from bourbonism," etc., etc.

Yet the fact is, says the St. Louis Republic, that the result in Missouri was not determined by republican, but by democratic voters; as everybody who has followed the figures knows. Returns, printed in the Globe as well as in other newspapers, show that democratic indifference and not republican gains determined the election. The democratic voters stayed at home and permitted the republican voice to speak. It was a default; not a defeat.

It was the fact that democrats would not accord full support to the national and state tickets which caused the reverses. No sane man doubts that there were enough loyal democrats in Missouri to swing the victory, had they so desired. Missouri is potentially democratic by a preponderating majority, and there isn't a reliable republican authority in the state who will gainsay it.

The election went by default, and nothing else. The democracy which has held it with ease for a generation can retake it at will. The very returns of the election support this proposition. The result afforded the Missouri republican party, from general down to the smallest private in the rear rank, the greatest surprise ever occasioned. The average republican's eyes the next day could have been "knocked off with a stick." It will require some time for the republicans to recover their breath. But they will not be surprised when democracy promptly recovers the state. That democratic voters should go fishing on election day was amazing. That they will speedily reassert themselves in full strength is natural and inevitable.

Crying "All hail to republican Missouri" is the mere drool of doddering imbecility overtaken by the shock of the unexpected.

At first the Ananias exponent of "poor old Missouri" was struck dumb. Then from its obmutescence it fell into a state of transports and tremens, from which, doubtless, it will never recover. To the profound shock of the result in the state was superadded the intoxication of a Butler victory in St. Louis—altogether too much for the starved and emaciated party organ, which had not tasted victory for so many, many long years.

What can old Ananias mean when it rejoices that Missouri has cut loose from "bourbonism?" Missouri was never afflicted with bourbons, except once, and that was in the days of the bourbons and ryes and old crows and tom gins of the reconstruction days when the republican party was last in power. Is Ananias ironical? Does it mean that in reality we have come again into the thrall of the bourbons? To be sure, the imperialism and ring republicanism of to-day do smack of the old federal gang rule which was the high-proof and only genuine blown-in-the-bottle bourbonism ever enjoyed by Missouri.

To toast the feast tables with "All hail, republican Missouri" is the sheerest delirium in old Ananias. The old cracked voice that has carped so long has a crazy ring—an uncanny ring like the song of a senile swan; and like that song it bears the suggestion of dissolution. Sing, Ananias; sing once. There will never be another opportunity. Missouri, so sure as the sun continues to rise and set, will return to the democratic power which has defaulted, and republicanism's short dream will be at an end.

——If it be true that President Roosevelt has decided that ex-Secretary Root shall be the republican nominee in 1908 —congratulations, Elihu. It goes.—Albany Argus.

——The people of New York and the people of the United States are a generous constituency, and their generosity is neither marked nor bounded by party lines. We are sure that they will extend to Alton B. Parker their respect and their sympathy, in this hour of disappointment and defeat. His character is an asset of which he cannot be deprived, and the service which as a jurist he has rendered to this commonwealth and to the body of jurisprudence in this land is unaffected by the extraordinary disposition [illegible] of the national poll.—[illegible] Republic [illegible].

THE PRESIDENT'S VICTORY.

Qualities Which Have Kept the Nation's Chief in the Limelight's Glare.

The people are discussing the personal popularity of Roosevelt. It is undeniably great. His qualities inspire a liking. It is also true that his qualities inspire fear, so the many of those who don't like him lie down in fear. The turning over of the corporations to him is proof of this. But his popularity remains a large quantity to be reckoned, says the Utica Observer.

In the first place, it must be confessed that he has the courage of his convictions, whatever they may be at the time, and the people like it. We have had presidents who have been afraid to assert positively any statement, no matter if its truth was self-evident. Not so with Theodore Roosevelt. Whether the statement refers to the big stick, or to arbitration, or to protection Roosevelt lets it out. He makes a confidant of the citizens, and they return the compliment by voting for him.

It is, in the second place, his love of playing the game of politics. Through his whole life he has exemplified this love. Whether he was a New York assemblyman, or delegate to the republican national convention, a police commissioner in New York city, an assistant secretary of the navy, colonel of the rough riders, governor of New York, vice president or president, he has kept his eye on the game of politics, playing it for all it was worth, never wearying of the excitement, always ready to respond to any call made upon his mental powers or his physical resources—in fact doing with love all those things which larger statesmen do as a matter of duty and patriotism. "I do love politics," he said some years ago, when he was a younger man. Well, he has reason to now; but he will make a better president during the next four years if he abates that love or holds it in control. It will ennoble his fame as president if he does so.

His mental powers are big enough to equip him in his side occupation as a writer of many books. Some of these books have achieved a lasting popularity which is reflected on their author when a chance arises to show the appreciation of the public.

These are a few of the many causes which have combined to make Theodore Roosevelt the popular man he is. We must add that his popularity has increased enormously with democrats since he has announced that he will not run again!

OPINION AND COMMENT.

——The president announces positively that John Hay will remain secretary of state until March, 1908. Great cinch on the future, isn't it?—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——If the democratic party had not survived so many crushing defeats, one might doubt whether it could possibly live. But you cannot kill it. It stands for certain eternal theories and principles of government that have in them the seeds of life.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——So good a republican authority as the Chicago Tribune says that in Delaware, under the Roosevelt-Addicks alliance, the current price of votes was $40 apiece. This beats the 40 acres and a mule with which the republicans in the old times bought negro votes, for the Roosevelt-Addicks combine actually paid the $40.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——Aside from this pleasing personal impression, which will go with Mr. Parker into retirement, he will be long remembered as a candidate who stoutly advocated principles, whether men would hear or forbear. He stood for political truths which ought to be popular, if they are not, just yet; and when they come to fruition—when the corrupt alliance between the tariff beneficiaries and the republican party is broken up; when we recover the declaration of independence and apply its principles to the Filipinos—Judge Parker will be recalled as one who preached to his countrymen sound doctrine before they were ready to receive it.—N. Y. Evening Post (ind.).

——The president's new peace conference movement was timed most excellently as an offset to the big stick talk. And there have been hints that Mr. Roosevelt is no politician!—St. Louis Republic.

——The people did not vote against Judge Parker or the democratic platform; they voted for Theodore Roosevelt and they didn't stop to consider specifically for just what Mr. Roosevelt stands. They didn't care. Democratic conservatism or democratic radicalism had no more to do with the result of the election [illegible] the war in Manchuria.—[illegible] Press.

CHARGED WITH CRUELTY.

The Principal and a Teacher at Glasgow Were Indicted.

Glasgow, Ky., Nov. 26.—Indictments were returned by the grand jury against E. B. Terry, principal of the local schools, and Miss Edna Smith, one of the teachers. Each is charged with cruelty and unmercifully whipping Thomas Richardson, son of J. M. Richardson, democratic candidate for congress and state prison commissioner. Mr. Richardson is now contesting for the seat in congress.

The boy is about 16 years of age, and it is charged that Miss Smith literally cut his flesh to pieces with a whip because he refused to divulge the name of a comrade who had carried a pistol to a picnic given by the teacher. Miss Smith claimed that she acted under instructions given by Principal Terry. It is said that Terry himself also whipped the boy after Miss Smith had done, despite the alleged fact that the lad had been so badly whipped by her that he was barely able to walk.

Miss Smith was dismissed by the trustees the day after the alleged whipping occurred. Public sentiment toward Terry had been bitter, but he was permitted to hold the principalship.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 26.—George C. Webb, of this city, has been appointed receiver for the Blue Grass Consolidated Traction Co., of which Senator G. B. Davis, of Detroit, is president. The company was organized several years ago with a capital of seven million dollars. It proposed to build electric lines from Lexington to nine neighboring cities. Grading was undertaken on several of the lines and an indebtedness of nearly ten thousand dollars incurred. The company failed to get the expected backing and work was suspended. A number of suits were brought and have been pending for over a year. The franchises held are valued at $6,000 and it is understood that the other local traction company, the Blue Grass, of which Y. The train was a freight running a double-header; four cars separated the two engines and about 300 yards from the bridge, over 200 feet high, an axle broke on the car following the first engine, derailing ten cars and the second engine. Cunningham, Bledsoe and Cox were pinned under the engine and all were badly burned. Bledsoe's left foot was crushed and he was scalded about the body and sustained internal injuries. Cox escaped suffocation by digging a hole in the ground into which he thrust his head. His whole body was literally cooked. AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

A PROLIFIC WEED.

Something About the Galinsoga Parviflora and How It Has Spread Westward.

About one year ago I mentioned the advent of a weed which very suddenly occupied the whole of the eastern south and already, within a year or very little more, had to some extent shared a large tract not only of uncultivated grass and clover fields, but of waste lands. It is known as Galinsoga parviflora, and is not wholly to be considered as a cumberer of the land, along with other weeds, but as a useful forage plant, far more valuable than the majority of plants classed as weeds. The present appearance of this weed in the west, in nearly all the large cities, in which it occupies the roadsides and a large part of the cultivated land, as well as the gardens of the cities, is an interesting fact in connection with the subject of weeds, and the several ways in which they spread far and wide; in this instance thousands of miles in as few as five years from its first appearance near Charleston, S. C.

I am reminded of the circumstance by a note from a subscriber to this paper, asking for seed of the plant for the purpose of sowing (mixed with grass seeds) for making a pasture. I am rather disinclined to aid in spreading such a hardy and prolific weed as this for obvious reasons; but in this instance would do so were it not that the plant is abundant all over the neighborhood where the applicant lives, writes a correspondent in the Country Gentleman. The plant is easily recognized by its low growth, much similar to that of clover, and by its small white flowers.

This Galinsoga is an interesting example of the amazingly rapid spread of weeds, and of the carefulness which should be exercised in regard to the introduction of similar plants, which may bring inconvenience—to say the least—to thousands of persons. My mention of the plant and its history was not given as any recommendation of it for a fodder plant, but merely in the interest of general knowledge. Considering how many of our worst weeds were introduced in very simple, but thoughtless ways, and how justly the public execrates the memory of the persons implicated in the mischief, all concerned should, I think, be slow to spread any plant, out of mere curiosity the injurious character of which may in after years make his name disagreeably notorious. Still, while this Galinsoga may cause waste of labor and some apprehension by its prolific habit, it is not so bad as the large majority of weeds, and in some circumstances may be turned to profitable uses. But it is a weed and hence not to be made a friend and companion of.

FATTENING TURKEYS.

Some Hints for Preparing the Birds for the Market—What to Feed Them.

When selling dressed poultry, it always pays to have as plump, nice-looking carcasses as can possibly be obtained. The producer thus not only obtains higher prices, but his reputation is enhanced and his market made surer for future years. Turkeys are no exception to the rule. And by shutting them up and feeding them properly, the poorest specimens may be brought into a fine condition for marketing in a month or two. Some have found that barley meal and corn meal, mixed half and half, is a most excellent ration for fattening fowls, especially if it be fed fresh at each meal, with no more given than the turkeys will eat up clean. It is the opinion of the writer, however, that more variety is better. Accordingly, he would suggest that boiled potatoes, mashed and mixed with meal, with some skimmed milk added, be fed moderately warm and to substitute for the lack of insects, have some kind of animal food, of which nothing is cheaper or more desirable than butchers' scraps, stirred into it. At least once a day good sound corn one year old, should also be given; new corn is too loosening in he used. No more of this than of the mash, however, should be thrown out than the birds can be induced to eat up clean and that their flesh may look bright and present a good appearance, they should have all the water they want to drink. Turkeys that have got their growth and are in fair condition, may be fattened in from three to four weeks if they are regularly and well fed and watered

KEEP AFTER THE LICE.

Eternal Vigilance Is the Price of Freedom from the Little Pests.

With the development of any industry comes an increase of the parasitic enemies of that industry. This is as true of the poultry industry as of others, and is especially true as regards the parasitic enemies of the flock. Some of these are so small as not to be readily discovered and hence may cause serious loss before the owner becomes aware of their presence.

The following instructive article recently appeared in the Gardener's Journal:

"The bird lice belongs to the group Mallophaga, quite distinct from human lice (Pediculidae) and from mammalian lice (Haematopinus). These Mallophaga have not a piercing mouth, their mouth is simply used for biting. They subsist upon the productions of the skin and fragments of feathers. They cause violent itching and bite sharply and must produce considerable pain when present in large numbers, as is too often the case. The feathers, especially the saddle hackle, generally show notched edges with lice infestation.

"Eight distinct species of lice attach fowls. The presence of these lice (Pthiriases) is generally ascribed to too uniform or insufficient nutrition, or else to damp, dark and dirty runs, especially those badly ventilated. Food, either when uniform or insufficient, has no effect upon their presence. Dark, damp places, however, when dirty are sure to harbor all these pests, especially when badly ventilated. It is also said that certain breeds affect their presence, but observation tends to show that all breeds are more or less subjected to infestation. In every case they set up severe irritation and inflammation of the skin, which often leads to stunted growth, and even death. Lice and other parasites flourish on unhealthy birds.

"All lice breed rather rapidly. The eggs or nuts are laid upon the down feathers, as a rule; they are often beautifully sculptured objects, oval in form. In about six to ten days they hatch into small, pale, active lice, which at once commence to irritate the birds. The adults are occasionally found in the nests. Some species are found copulating in the nests. Menopon pallidium have been kept alive for months upon fresh feathers, the quill epidermis being especially eaten. Before reaching the full-grown state as many as ten to 12 molts apparently take place, there being little difference in each stage, except the gradual darkening of the markings."

PIGS ALWAYS PROFITABLE.

Even Where Corn Does Not Make a Heavy Yield the Making of Pork Pays Well.

The hog is profitable in every locality. It is a mistake to suppose that money can be made on hogs only in the corn belt. Conditions vary, and so do the results of feeding.

There is a great deal of money in the raising of hogs in the corn belt, because there is a cheap feed close at hand. But in the localities where corn is not so generally grown the hog is profitable, for he is more fecund on highly nitrogenous feeds.

Even in the localities where only two or three hogs are fattened per year per farm, they yield a good profit, as the meat supplied has not paid the toll of railroad fares and wholesale and retail profits. Corn is a great advantage in furnishing cheap pork; it is a disadvantage in reducing the fecundity of the herd.

There are two factors on opposite sides of the problem, and the balance in favor, or against has never been figured out. The farmers living in the corn belt declare that the balance is in favor of the large corn ration.

Canadian growers declare that what we have gained on the one score has been lost on the other, and that hogs raised in Canada reproduce themselves in such greater numbers that the cost of a pound of pork there is no greater than in the United States, when the cost of reproduction is taken into consideration.

There is another factor in favor of the localities outside of the corn belt, where pigs are raised, a few only on each farm, and that is the lessened losses from disease. There are great areas of territory where hog cholera has never been known, but where hogs are raised only in small numbers, as in New England. So, for one reason or another, the hog is profitable everywhere.—St. Louis Republic.

RENEW LIMITED MARRIAGE.

Turk and Wife Residing in St. Louis Again Married for a Period of Twenty-Five Years.

C. Anastassiu Dit Natalie, a Turk, and his wife, of St. Louis, closed their first term of a limited marriage contract the other day and entered into a second term by being reunited in Justice Campbell's court room. They had not heard of George Meredith and his plan, which set the world to talking recently, but they said the custom is recognized in the northern part of Africa and in parts of Turkey.

As residents of these regions they did not consider their first marriage, performed in Brussels, Belgium, as meaning "until death does part," but drew up an agreement for a limited term of 25 years, with the privilege of renewal.

The couple have one child, a daughter 12 years old, who was present when the renewal ceremony was performed.

"My wife and I think as much of each other" said Natalie, "as when we were married 25 years ago, and I am certain that we will feel the same way 25 years hence, when we will again renew our vows."

MUST PAY ALIMONY FIRST.

Husbands Who Divorce Wives Granted Bare Living Only by Illinois Supreme Court.

The Illinois supreme court has decided that a man must exist on the barest necessities of life, if it becomes necessary, in order to make his full payments. Jennie Shaffner, the divorced wife of former commander of the navil militia of Illinois, B. M. Shaffner, of Chicago, accused him of failing to pay $80 a month alimony and of being $1,200 behind.

Shaffner declared his meager law practice and his poverty prevented him from making the payments. The supreme court says his statements of financial condition are not complete. The court says:

"He who seeks to establish the fact that his failure to pay is the result of the lack of funds must show with reasonable certainty the amount of money he has received and disbursements.

"The court decides that whatever he has left after meeting his barest living expenses must be applied to the alimony."

MARRIES HER MOTHER.

Youthful Lover Turns to Widow for Sympathy and Finally Makes Her a Bride Again.

When the famous marrying clergyman, Rev. John H. Prescott, of Sayville, L. I., united Mrs. Emma Baker, widow of Capt. Syms Baker of the United States life saving service, to Frank Green, a unique romance was disclosed.

The bride is 42 years of age, while her husband is 20 years her junior.

About a year ago Mr. Green began to pay marked attention to one of the pretty daughters of the sprightly widow.

Miss Baker, however, did not encourage him, and he became noticeably despondent and unhappy. In his sorrow he turned to his sweetheart's mother for consolation and sympathy.

Mrs. Baker was at first inclined to make light of her youthful lover's protestations, but he finally won her.

OFFICIAL CUP OF COFFEE.

Proper Method of Brewing the Beverage to Be Determined in Washington.

By direction of the secretary of agriculture the bureau of plant industry is to take up at once experiments to determine the best manner in which to brew a cup of coffee. To this end, says a Washington report, F. L. Stevenson, a specially trained expert, has been engaged. The view of the department is that a cup of coffee is good because of the manner in which it is brewed, rather than from the quality of the bean from which the beverage is made. It will be appreciated by all persons acquainted with the art and mystery of coffee-making that various conditions, apparently trivial in themselves, have to be taken into consideration in producing the beverage.

For instance, in the process of roasting the beans may be more or less damaged by being under or over done, and the flavor of the coffee thus impaired to a corresponding degree. Hence the necessity for ideal conditions in roasting. Again, the effects of water at various temperatures upon the ground coffee and the proper period for infusion will, for the first time in the history of coffee-making, be thoroughly and accurately ascertained.

The retention of caffeine, the active principle of coffee, to which it owes its stimulating effects, and the elimination of the caffeotannic and caffeic acids, which are not only injurious to health, but communicate an unpleasant, bitter taste to the beverage, will be, of course, the principal objects.

MURMURS FROM GROUND.

Strange Sounds Heard for Many Centuries on the Red Sea Borders.

A singular phenomenon occurs on the borders of the Red sea to a place called Nakous, where intermittent underground sounds have been heard for an unknown number of centuries. It is situated about half a mile distant from the shore, whence a long reach of sand ascends rapidly to a height of 300 feet. This reach is about 900 feet wide and resembles an amphitheater, being walled by low rocks.

The sounds coming up from the ground at this place recur at intervals of about an hour. They at first resemble a low murmur, but ere long there is heard a loud knocking, somewhat like the strokes of a bell and which at the end of about five minutes becomes so strong as to agitate the sand. The explanation of this curious phenomenon given by the Arabs is that there is a convent under the ground here and that these monks ring for prayers. So they call it Nakous, which means a bell.

The Arabs affirm that the noise so frightens their camels when they hear it as to render them furious. Philosophers attribute the sound to suppressed volcanic action—probably to the bubbling of gas or vapor underground.

Her Mistake.

"Mamma," said a little West side girl yesterday morning, "I can't go to school to-day. My tooth is achin' awful."

"All right, Lucy," said her mother, "get your jacket and I'll take you to a dentist and have the tooth pulled."

The child hesitated a moment and then said: "Oh, mamma, I made a mistake. It ain't my tooth—it's my head that's achin'."—Kansas City Times.

A Teacher's Testimony.

Hinton, Ky., Nov. 28 (Special)—It has long been claimed that Diabetes is incurable, but Mr. E. J. Thompson, teacher in the Hinton school, has pleasing evidence to the contrary. Mr. Thompson had Diabetes. He took Dodd's Kidney Pills and is cured. In a statement he makes regarding his cure Mr. Thompson says:

"I was troubled with my kidneys for more than two years and was treated by two of the best doctors in this part of the state. They claimed I had Diabetes and there was little to be done for me. Then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and what they did for me was wonderful. It is entirely owing to Dodd's Kidney Pills that I am now enjoying good health."

Many doctors still maintain that Diabetes is incurable. But Diabetes is a kidney disease and the kidney disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure has yet to be discovered.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a Uterine Tonic and Regulator. I suffered for four years with irregularities and Uterine troubles. No one but those who have experienced this dreadful agony can form any idea of the physical and mental misery those endure who are thus afflicted. Your Vegetable Compound cured me within three months. I was fully restored to health and strength, and now my periods are regular and painless. What a blessing it is to be able to obtain such a remedy when so many doctors fail to help you. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is better than any doctor or medicine I ever had. Very truly yours, MISS EASY WHITTAKER, 604 39th St., W. Savannah, Ga."

No physician in the world has had such a training or such an amount of information at hand to assist in the treatment of all kinds of female ills as Mrs. Pinkham. In her office at Lynn, Mass., she is able to do more for the ailing women of America than the family physician. Any woman, therefore, is responsible for her own trouble who will not take the pains to write to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free.

A letter from another woman showing what was accomplished in her case by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: I am so grateful to you for the help Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me that I deem it but a small return to write you an expression of my experience.

"Many years suffering with weakness, inflammation, and a broken down system, made me more anxious to die than live, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound soon restored my lost strength. Taking the medicine only two weeks produced a radical change, and two months restored me to perfect health. I am now a changed woman, and my friends wonder at the change, it is so marvellous. Sincerely yours, MISS MATTIE HERRY, 429 Green St., Danville, Va."

The testimonials which we are constantly publishing from grateful women prove beyond a doubt the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to conquer female diseases.

VOICES IN THE NIGHT

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Nov. 27, 1904. Text:—"And the Lord called yet again, Samuel. And Samuel arose and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And he answered, I called not, my son; lie down again. Now Samuel did not yet know the Lord, neither was the word of the Lord yet revealed unto him."—1 Sam. 3:6, 7.

THE incidents surrounding our text bring before us a charming and inspiring picture. The rich and stately and sacred courts of the Tabernacle of Jehovah, the place He had appointed for His dwelling place in the midst of His people; the scene of the perfunctory services of Eli, the high priest, and the training school and seminary of Samuel, the novitiate. There was the outer court with its great brazen altar for sacrifice, and upon which the fire burned continually. Between it and the holy place stood the laver where the priests washed before entering the temple. Within the temple was the holy place with its altar of incense, and its table of shew bread and the golden candlestick on either side. Before the altar of sacrifice and within this holy place the high priest ministered daily. Then there was the holy of holies behind the vail where rested the ark of the covenant surmounted by the cherumbim, and between which there burned the shechinah glory over the mercy seat. Into this holiest place the high priest came but once a year. It was to this temple that Samuel as a young boy had been brought by his mother, and consecrated to the Lord's service. It was here that he ministered unto the Lord before Eli. But the word of the Lord was unknown and unheard in those evil days of corrupt priesthood and meaningless ceremony, and there was no revelation from God. The day's ministrations had ended; the aged high priest had laid himself down to rest, and Samuel, his faithful attendant, had sought his couch in the apartments adjoining. The gentle light of the seven-branched candlestick, burning without in the holy place, kept its faithful vigil, and spoke of God's presence, while the souls of men were unconscious in slumber.

AH! HOW often we are unconscious of God's presence. The body, God's chosen temple, is the place where He would abide, but we know Him not. Self, the high priest, is there, to serve and minister to the desires and needs of the life. The thought is not above the physical and material. God's presence is not felt. Samuel, the young novitiate, is there, in the person of the gentle, sensitive soul. It serves as best it can before the high priest, self. But it is not given any service above the mere sensual and material. It feels a higher need and obligation even while it serves on the lower plane of the material. The period of the low spiritual condition prevails and the lamp of God's presence burns feebly. Such is the condition, oh, so often, in the heart and life! Such was the condition of Israel and in the temple. It was God's chosen dwelling place, even as the body of man is God's appointed temple. "Know ye not," God asks, that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" The temple had its appointed service, meaningless if the true purpose and spirit were lacking; it had its high priest to discharge the religious functions, and so the body temple has its appointed service, its homage to pay to God, its worship to offer. While self is the high priest in office every feature of the service is subservient to the dominant, physical, sensual self. The temple had its Samuel, the novitiate appointed of God to rise to the place of authority in the temple and to rescue the holy place and the sacred service from its debased and debasing conditions. And so the body temple has within it the eternal soul, the novitiate, whom God has appointed to grow up within and to rescue the body temple from its low spiritual condition.

DURING the still watches of the night voices are heard within the temple. God's voice calls: "Samuel, Samuel." Samuel's voice is heard in answer: "Here am I," as he runs to Eli's side, as was his wont when summoned to minister to his needs. Eli's voice is heard in dull, heavy, uncomprehending peevishness. "I called thee not, my son; lie down again." The three voices heard in the midnight watches of the life's great need. God's voice calling, the soul's voice in answer, and self quieting the query of the soul and bidding it go and lie down again. God's voice is calling to you and to me. We know not His voice. We are unfamiliar with the sound thereof. Once, twice, God has called, perhaps more, and each time you have settled the matter by urging the soul to the sleep of indifference and oblivion. Will God call again? Are you indifferent as to whether he will or not? Are you glad that the conscience of the soul has been stilled and its questioning silenced? Do you feel better content within the temple of your body that you can minister to your own need as the caprice and whim of self may dictate? God pity the man who has stilled the voice of God to the soul! He has so repeatedly turned [illegible] with its questionings that [illegible] and the light [illegible] the temple [illegible] turned Samuel away, but the third time that God called the old priest was aroused to the meaning of the voice and told Samuel how he should answer and what he should do if again the voice should call. God grant that self may be roused to the consciousness of God, and when He calls again the soul may be bid to say: "Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth."

SELF rules in the body temple. God wants self to surrender and to let His spirit control. Self—as the high priest of the life is unresponsive to God's will and God's leading. Self seeketh its own gratification, its own ambition, its own plans, and is jealous of its rights. It rules, and proposes to rule. It is not willing to surrender to God. Old Eli in the temple must make room for the younger man. And when at last he opened the way for Samuel to meet God and hear His voice and receive His message, it was that God might deliver His judgment upon Eli and Eli's house for sin and misrule. When self at last is brought to the point of recognising God's voice and bids the soul respond to God's call, it means that self is at last ready to step to God's judgment bar and receive sentence. It was God's plan that Samuel should fill the place of Eli, and it is His plan. His blessed plan, that the soul should occupy the place of self. Self is under judgment. It is to be destroyed. As God's word puts it, "the old man is to be crucified, with the affections and lusts," in order that the soul may expand to the infilling of God and occupy the body temple; in order that the new man, the new creation in Christ Jesus, may come to the fullness of the stature of a son of God. Self is the present occupant of the body temple that is to be judged and removed, while the soul is to be quickened by the touch of God and appointed to fill the high priestly office. It is not pleasant for one to contemplate the giving up of self in order that God may be formed in him, except as we view it from God's standpoint. With all the awful judgment before him, Eli could say: "It is the Lord; let Him do what seemeth Him good." And so can we say, as we hear the judgment of God against self and the will of the flesh.

THERE are three things in the attitude of Samuel which we wish to specially emphasize: First, he was awakened; second, he was stirred to seek, and, third, he was patient to wait. Had he had the spirit of some people when the voice of God at last pierces the heavy ears and wakes them to consciousness, he would have listened for a moment or two in impatience and then would have turned over for "a little more sleep and a little more slumber." But the voice of God aroused him, and he was thoroughly awake and anxious to hear and obey. He did not know God in a personal way. God had never spoken to him with distinct voice. Ah, how many there are who are in the same spiritual condition. But God speaks, and the voice is heard, and the evidence is furnished in the case of Samuel by his springing out of bed and seeking the voice, and in the case of the soul in its search after the voice that has spoken. Bed was no longer the place for Samuel, and the present place of indifference is not the place for the soul to abide. The voice has called. You are in perplexity and doubt. You know not what it all means. But the voice has called, and your duty is to spring from the place of indifference to that of active search. And "he that seeketh findeth." You will come to know clearly as Samuel did that it is God that has been calling, and then it is your part to patiently wait in faith until God speaks again, so that you may answer in obedience and faith: "Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth." Such must be the attitude of the soul if it would come to know God and hear Him speak. Awake, oh soul, to thy need! Seek that you may find! Patiently wait that God may speak to your soul His revelation!

SAMUEL, as he listened that night to the revelation of God, discovered three things, and every soul as he receives the revelation of God through the Holy Spirit has a like experience. Samuel found a new relationship with God. And because of the revelation and the fellowship with God his responsibilities were increased toward the nation whose prophet and judge he was to become. Has God revealed Himself to your heart? Have you been made one with the Father through faith in the crucified Son? Then upon you has rolled a new and heavy responsibility. Dare you be indifferent to it, while you hear the judgments of God pronounced against sin and the sinner? Dare you keep silent, while men are going down to eternal death? Can you remain indifferent while friends and loved ones are being swept along in the tide that will plunge the soul to eternal destruction? Yours is a new and tremendous responsibility; if the light of God's revelation has shined in your heart. And the third experience which comes with the revelation of God to the soul is the realization of God's righteousness and the awful sinfulness of sin. Before you received God's gracious revelation you perhaps did not realize what sin was and what awful judgments God has pronounced against it, but as you have come into the pure light of God's holiness and been cleansed from all sin in the blood of the precious Lamb of God, you have seen with God's eyes, and peered for the first time into the very abyss of the pit. Samuel did not realize the iniquity of Eli's house, great as he knew it to be, until God revealed it to him that night. And so we must receive God's revelation to view sin in its true light. May God help us to bear the voices in the night: The voice of God, speaking to the soul. The voice of the inner self bidding the soul seek to God, the voice of the soul responding to the voice of God, and saying: "Speak, Lord, Thy servant heareth."

THE REAL INSIDE OF IT.

WHY MISSOURI CHANGED.

Republicans Won Through the Indifference of Democratic Voters.

Drunk with the joy of a Butler victory, the Globe recently emptied this cornucopia of craziness upon the republican banquet tables:

"All hail, republican Missouri! It is no longer poor old Missouri, but a state that stands erect with its face to the light and marching in company with New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana. Missouri has cut loose from bourbonism," etc., etc.

Yet the fact is, says the St. Louis Republic, that the result in Missouri was not determined by republican, but by democratic voters; as everybody who has followed the figures knows. Returns, printed in the Globe as well as in other newspapers, show that democratic indifference and not republican gains determined the election. The democratic voters stayed at home and permitted the republican voice to speak. It was a default; not a defeat.

It was the fact that democrats would not accord full support to the national and state tickets which caused the reverses. No sane man doubts that there were enough loyal democrats in Missouri to swing the victory, had they so desired. Missouri is potentially democratic by a preponderating majority, and there isn't a reliable republican authority in the state who will gainsay it.

The election went by default, and nothing else. The democracy which has held it with ease for a generation can retake it at will. The very returns of the election support this proposition. The result afforded the Missouri republican party, from general down to the smallest private in the rear rank, the greatest surprise ever occasioned. The average republican's eyes the next day could have been "knocked off with a stick." It will require some time for the republicans to recover their breath. But they will not be surprised when democracy promptly recovers the state. That democratic voters should go fishing on election day was amazing. That they will speedily reassert themselves in full strength is natural and inevitable.

Crying "All hail to republican Missouri" is the mere drool of doddering imbecility overtaken by the shock of the unexpected.

At first the Ananias exponent of "poor old Missouri" was struck dumb. Then from its obmutescence it fell into a state of transports and tremens, from which, doubtless, it will never recover. To the profound shock of the result in the state was superadded the intoxication of a Butler victory in St. Louis—altogether too much for the starved and emaciated party organ, which had not tasted victory for so many, many long years.

What can old Ananias mean when it re[illegible] Missouri but "see from "bourbonism?" Missouri was never afflicted with bourbons, except once, and that was in the days of the bourbons and ryes and old crows and tom gins of the reconstruction days when the republican party was last in power. Is Ananias ironical? Does it mean that in reality we have come again into the thrall of the bourbons? To be sure, the imperialism and ring republicanism of to-day do smack of the old federal gang rule which was the high-proof and only genuine blown-in-the-bottle bourbonism ever enjoyed by Missouri.

To toast the feast tables with "All hail, republican Missouri" is the sheerest delirium in old Ananias. The old cracked voice that has carped so long has a crazy ring—an uncanny ring like the song of a senile swan; and like that song it bears the suggestion of dissolution. Sing, Ananias; sing once. There will never be another opportunity. Missouri, so sure as the sun continues to rise and set, will return to the democratic power which has defaulted, and republicanism's short dream will be at an end.

—It is be true that President Roosevelt has decided that ex-Secretary Root shall be the republican nominee in 1908 —congratulations, Elihu. It goes.—Albany Argus.

—The people of New York and the people of the United States are a generous constituency, and their generosity is neither marked nor bounded by party lines. We are sure that they will extend to Alton B. Parker their respect and their sympathy, in this hour of disappointment and defeat. His character is an asset of which he cannot be deprived, and the service which as a jurist he has rendered to this commonwealth and to the body of jurisprudence in this land is unaffected by the extraordinary disproportionate result of the national poll.—Brooklyn Eagle (Ind.).

THE PRESIDENT'S VICTORY.

Qualities Which Have Kept the Nation's Chief in the Limelight's Glare.

The people are discussing the personal popularity of Roosevelt. It is undeniably great. His qualities inspire a liking. It is also true that his qualities inspire fear, so the many of those who don't like him lie down in fear. The turning over of the corporations to him is proof of this. But his popularity remains a large quantity to be reckoned, says the Utica Observer.

In the first place, it must be confessed that he has the courage of his convictions, whatever they may be at the time, and the people like it. We have had presidents who have been afraid to assert positively any statement, no matter if its truth was self-evident. Not so with Theodore Roosevelt. Whether the statement refers to the big stick, or to arbitration, or to protection Roosevelt lets it out. He makes a confidant of the citizens, and they return the compliment by voting for him.

It is, in the second place, his love of playing the game of politics. Through his whole life he has exemplified this love. Whether he was a New York assemblyman, or delegate to the republican national convention, a police commissioner in New York city, an assistant secretary of the navy, colonel of the rough riders, governor of New York, vice president or president, he has kept his eye on the game of politics, playing it for all it was worth, never wearying of the excitement, always ready to respond to any call made upon his mental powers or his physical resources—in fact doing with love all those things which larger statesmen do as a matter of duty and patriotism. "I do love politics," he said some years ago, when he was a younger man. Well, he has reason to now; but he will make a better president during the next four years if he abates that love or holds it in control. It will ennoble his fame as president if he does so.

His mental powers are big enough to equip him in his side occupation as a writer of many books. Some of these books have achieved a lasting popularity which is reflected on their author when a chance arises to show the appreciation of the public.

These are a few of the many causes which have combined to make Theodore Roosevelt the popular man he is. We must add that his popularity has increased enormously with democrats since he has announced that he will not run again!

OPINION AND COMMENT.

—The president announces positively that John Hay will remain secretary of state until March, 1908. Great cinch on the future, isn't it?—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

—If the democratic party had not survived so many crushing defeats, one might doubt whether it could possibly live. But you cannot kill it. It stands for certain eternal theories and principles of government that have in them the seeds of life.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

—So good a republican authority as the Chicago Tribune says that in Delaware, under the Roosevelt-Addicks alliance, the current price of votes was $40 apiece. This beats the 40 acres and a mule with which the republicans in the old times bought negro votes, for the Roosevelt-Addicks combine actually paid the $40.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—Aside from this pleasing personal impression, which will go with Mr. Parker into retirement, he will long remembered as a candidate who stoutly advocated principles, whether men would hear or forbear. He stood for political truths which ought to be popular, if they are not, just yet; and when they come to fruition—when the corrupt alliance between the tariff beneficiaries and the republican party is broken up; when we recover the declaration of independence and apply its principles to the Filipinos—Judge Parker will be recalled as one who preached to his countrymen sound doctrine before they were ready to receive it.—N. Y. Evening Post (Ind.).

—The president's new peace conference movement was timed most excellently as an offset to the big stick talk. And there have been hints that Mr. Roosevelt is no politician!—St. Louis Republic.

CHARGED WITH CRUELTY.

The Principal and a Teacher at Glasgow Were Indicted.

Glasgow, Ky., Nov. 26.—Indictments were returned by the grand jury against E. B. Terry, principal of the local schools, and Miss Edna Smith, one of the teachers. Each is charged with cruelty and unmercifully whipping Thomas Richardson, son of J. M. Richardson, democratic candidate for congress and state prison commissioner. Mr. Richardson is now contesting for the seat in congress.

The boy is about 16 years of age, and it is charged that Miss Smith literally cut his flesh to pieces with a whip because he refused to divulge the name of a comrade who had carried a pistol to a picnic given by the teacher. Miss Smith claimed that she acted under instructions given by Principal Terry. It is said that Terry himself also whipped the boy after Miss Smith had done, despite the alleged fact that the lad had been so badly whipped by her that he was barely able to walk.

Miss Smith was dismissed by the trustees the day after the alleged whipping occurred. Public sentiment toward Terry had been bitter, but he was permitted to hold the principalship.

RIOT AT A GAME.

Three Hundred Students Engaged in Breaking Heads With Bricks.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 25.—The intense rivalry which marks the annual game between the Louisville male high school and the Manual Training high school, culminated in a fair-sized riot after the game Thursday. The opposing forces clashed at Third and Breckinridge streets, a fashionable residence section, and for 20 minutes 300 students were busily engaged in breaking heads with bricks and clubs and gouging each other with the points of their school pennons. The police stopped the disorders, which were renewed Thursday night, only to be promptly squelched. While many students were hurt, none was so badly mauled as to be sent to a hospital.

RECEIVER APPOINTED.

George C. Webb Will Attend to the Affairs of Blue Grass Traction Co.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 26.—George C. Webb, of this city, has been appointed receiver for the Blue Grass Consolidated Traction Co., of which Senator G. B. Davis, of Detroit, is president. The company was organized several years ago with a capital of seven million dollars. It proposed to build electric lines from Lexington to nine neighboring cities. Grading was undertaken on several of the lines and an indebtedness of nearly ten thousand dollars incurred. The company failed to get the expected backing and work was suspended. A number of suits were brought and have been pending for over a year. The franchises held are valued at $6,000 and it is understood that the other local traction company, the Blue Grass, of which Y. Alexander is president and which is operating lines to Paris and Georgetown, will take over these franchises and probably early build the line to Versailles.

WRECK ON HIGH BRIDGE.

Engineer Killed and Three Injured, One Probably Fatally.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 25.—A wreck on the C., N. O. & T. P. railway at High Bridge, 18 miles from here, resulted in the death of Engineer Ben Cunningham, of Somerset, Ky., and the injury of W. F. Bledsoe, of Midway; E. C. Cox, Campbellsville, Ky., and Ernest Shoars, Danville, Ky. Cox will probably die. The train was a freight running a double-header; four cars separated the two engines and about 300 yards from the bridge, over 200 feet high, an axle broke on the car following the first engine, derailing ten cars and the second engine. Cunningham, Bledsoe and Cox were pinned under the engine and all were badly burned. Bledsoe's left foot was crushed and he was scalded about the body and sustained internal injuries. Cox escaped suffocation by digging a hole in the ground into which he thrust his head. His whole body was literally cooked. The injured men were brought here on a special train and are in the St. Joseph's hospital.

Agricultural Hints.

A PROLIFIC WEED.

Something About the Galinsoga Parviflora and How It Has Spread Westward.

About one year ago I mentioned the advent of a weed which very suddenly occupied the whole of the eastern south and already, within a year or very little more, had to some extent shared a large tract not only of uncultivated grass and clover fields, but of waste lands. It is known as Galinsoga parviflora, and is not wholly to be considered as a cumberer of the land, along with other weeds, but as a useful forage plant, far more valuable than the majority of plants classed as weeds. The present appearance of this weed in the west, in nearly all the large cities, in which it occupies the roadsides and a large part of the cultivated land, as well as the gardens of the cities, is an interesting fact in connection with the subject of weeds, and the several ways in which they spread far and wide; in this instance thousands of miles in as few as five years from its first appearance near Charleston, S. C.

I am reminded of the circumstance by a note from a subscriber to this paper, asking for seed of the plant for the purpose of sowing (mixed with grass seeds) for making a pasture. I am rather disinclined to aid in spreading such a hardy and prolific weed as this for obvious reasons; but in this instance would do so were it not that the plant is abundant all over the neighborhood where the applicant lives, writes a correspondent in the Country Gentleman. The plant is easily recognized by its low growth, much similar to that of clover, and by its small white flowers.

This Galinsoga is an interesting example of the amazingly rapid spread of weeds, and of the carefulness which should be exercised in regard to the introduction of similar plants, which may bring inconvenience—to say the least—to thousands of persons. My mention of the plant and its history was not given as any recommendation of it for a fodder plant, but merely in the interest of general knowledge. Considering how many of our worst weeds were introduced in very simple, but thoughtless ways, and how justly the public execrates the memory of the persons implicated in the mischief, all concerned should, I think, be slow to spread any plant, ont of mere curiosity the injurious character of which may in after years make his name disagreeably notorious. Still, while this Galinsoga may cause waste of labor and some apprehension by its prolific habit, it is not so bad as the large majority of weeds, and in some circumstances may be turned to profitable uses. But it is a weed and hence not to be made a friend and companion of.

FATTENING TURKEYS.

Some Hints for Preparing the Birds for the Market—What to Feed Them.

When selling dressed poultry, it always pays to have as plump, nice-looking carcasses as can possibly be obtained. The producer thus not only obtains higher prices, but his reputation is enhanced and his market made surer for future years. Turkeys are no exception to the rule. And by shutting them up and feeding them properly, the poorest specimens may be brought into a fine condition for marketing in a month or two. Some have found that barley meal and corn meal, mixed half and half, is a most excellent ration for fattening fowls, especially if it be fed fresh at each meal; with no more given than the turkeys will eat up clean. It is the opinion of the writer, however, that more variety is better. Accordingly, he would suggest that boiled potatoes, mashed and mixed with meal, with some skimmed milk added, be fed moderately warm and to substitute for the lack of insects, have some kind of animal food, of which nothing is cheaper or more desirable than butchers' scraps, stirred into it. At least once a day good sound corn one year old, should also be given; new corn is too loosening to be used. No more of this than of the mash, however, should be thrown out than the birds can be induced to eat up clean and that their beak may look bright and present a good appearance, they should have all the water they want to drink. Turkeys, if they meet with their growth and are in fair condition, may be fattened for market in a few weeks if they are [illegible] and watered [illegible] Pittomist.

KEEP AFTER THE LICE.

Eternal Vigilance Is the Price of Freedom from the Little Pests.

With the development of any industry comes an increase of the parasitic enemies of that industry. This is as true of the poultry industry as of others, and is especially true as regards the parasitic enemies of the flock. Some of these are so small as not to be readily discovered and hence may cause serious loss before the owner becomes aware of their presence.

The following instructive article recently appeared in the Gardener's Journal:

"The bird lice belongs to the group Mallophaga, quite distinct from human lice (Pediculidae) and from mammalian lice (Haematopinus). These Mallophaga have not a piercing mouth, their mouth is simply used for biting. They subsist upon the productions of the skin and fragments of feathers. They cause violent itching and bite sharply and must produce considerable pain when present in large numbers, as is too often the case. The feathers, especially the saddle hackle, generally show notched edges with lice infestation.

"Eight distinct species of lice attack fowls. The presence of these lice (Phthiriaces) is generally ascribed to too uniform or insufficient nutrition, or else to damp, dark and dirty runs, especially those badly ventilated. Food, either when uniform or insufficient, has no effect upon their presence. Dark, damp places, however, when dirty are sure to harbor all these pests, especially when badly ventilated. It is also said that certain breeds affect their presence, but observation tends to show that all breeds are more or less subjected to infestation. In every case they set up severe irritation and inflammation of the skin, which often leads to stunted growth, and even death. Lice and other parasites flourish on unhealthy birds.

"All lice breed rather rapidly. The eggs or nuts are laid upon the down feathers, as a rule; they are often beautifully sculptured objects, oval in form. In about six to ten days they hatch into small, pale, active lice, which at once commence to irritate the birds. The adults are occasionally found in the nests. Some species are found copulating in the nests. Menopon pallidium have been kept alive for months upon fresh feathers, the quill epidermis being especially eaten. Before reaching the full-grown state as many as ten to 12 molts apparently take place, there being little difference in each stage, except the gradual darkening of the markings."

PIGS ALWAYS PROFITABLE.

Even Where Corn Does Not Make a Heavy Yield the Making of Pork Pays Well.

The hog is profitable in every locality. It is a mistake to suppose that money can be made on hogs only in the corn belt. Conditions vary, and so do the results of feeding.

There is a great deal of money in the raising of hogs in the corn belt, because there is a cheap feed close at hand. But in the localities where corn is not so generally grown the hog is profitable, for he is more fecund on highly nitrogenous feeds.

Even in the localities where only two or three hogs are fattened per year for sale, the pride "good, fair," the meat supplied has not paid the toll of railroad fares and wholesale and retail profits. Corn is a great advantage in furnishing cheap pork; it is a disadvantage in reducing the fecundity of the herd.

There are two factors on opposite sides of the problem, and the balance in favor, or against, has never been figured out. The farmers living in the corn belt declare that the balance is in favor of the large corn ration.

Canadian growers declare that what we have gained on the one score has been lost on the other, and that hogs raised in Canada reproduce themselves in such greater numbers that the cost of a pound of pork there is no greater than in the United States, when the cost of reproduction is taken into consideration.

There is another factor in favor of the localities outside of the corn belt, where pigs are raised, a few only on each farm, and that is the lessened losses from disease. There are great areas of territory where hog cholera has never been known, but where hogs are raised only in small numbers, as in New England. So, for one reason or another, the hog is profitable everywhere.—St. Louis Republic.

RENEW LIMITED MARRIAGE.

Turk and Wife Residing in St. Louis Again Married for a Period of Twenty-Five Years.

C. Anastassiu Dit Natalie, a Turk, and his wife, of St. Louis, closed their first term of a limited marriage contract the other day and entered into a second term by being reunited in Justice Campbell's court room. They had not heard of George Nuzeith and his plan, which set the world to talking recently, but they said the custom is recognized in the northern part of Africa and in parts of Turkey.

As residents of these regions they did not consider their first marriage, performed in Brussels, Belgium, as meaning "until death does part," but drew up an agreement for a limited term of 25 years, with the privilege of renewal.

The couple have one child, a daughter 12 years old, who was present when the renewal ceremony was performed.

"My wife and I think as much of each other" said Natalie, "as when we were married 25 years ago, and I am certain that we will feel the same way 25 years hence, when we will again renew our vows."

MUST PAY ALIMONY FIRST.

Husbands Who Divorce Wives Granted Bare Living Only by Illinois Supreme Court.

The Illinois supreme court has decided that a man must exist on the barest necessities of life, if it becomes necessary, in order to make his full payments. Jennie Shaffner, the divorced wife of former commander of the navil militia of Illinois, B. M. Shaffner, of Chicago, accused him of failing to pay $80 a month alimony and of being $1,200 behind.

Shaffner declared his meager law practice and his poverty prevented him from making the payments. The supreme court says his statements of financial condition are not complete. The court says:

"He who seeks to establish the fact that his failure to pay is the result of the lack of funds must show with reasonable certainty the amount of money he has received and disbursements.

"The court decides that whatever he has left after meeting his barest living expenses must be applied to the alimony."

MARRIES HER MOTHER.

Youthful Lover Turns to Widow for Sympathy and Finally Makes Her a Bride Again.

When the famous marrying clergyman, Rev. John H. Prescott, of Sayville, L. I., united Mrs. Emma Baker, widow of Capt. Syms Baker of the United States life saving service, to Frank Green, a unique romance was disclosed.

The bride is 42 years of age, while her husband is 20 years her junior.

About a year ago Mr. Green began to pay marked attention to one of the pretty daughters of the sprightly widow.

Miss Baker, however, did not encourage him, and he became noticeably despondent and unhappy. In his sorrow he turned to his sweetheart's mother for consolation and sympathy.

Mrs. Baker was at first inclined to make light of her youthful lover's protestations, but he finally won her.

OFFICIAL CUP OF COFFEE.

Proper Method of Brewing the Beverage to Be Determined in Washington.

By direction of the secretary of agriculture the bureau of plant industry is to take up at once experiments to determine the best manner in which to brew a cup of coffee. To this end, says a Washington report, E. L. Lewton, a specially trained expert, has been engaged. The view of the department is that a cup of coffee is good because of the manner in which it is brewed, rather than from the quality of the bean from which the beverage is made. It will be appreciated by all persons acquainted with the art and mystery of coffee-making that various conditions, apparently trivial in themselves, have to be taken into consideration in producing the beverage.

For instance, in the process of roasting the beans may be more or less damaged by being under or over done, and the flavor of the coffee thus impaired to a corresponding degree. Hence the necessity for ideal conditions in roasting. Again, the effects of water at various temperatures upon the ground coffee and the proper period for infusion will, for the first time in the history of coffee-making, be thoroughly and accurately ascertained.

The retention of caffein, the active principle of coffee, to which it owes its stimulating effects, and the elimination of the caffeotannic and caffeic acids, which are not only injurious to health, but communicate an unpleasant, bitter taste to the beverage, will be, of course, the principal objects.

MURMURS FROM GROUND.

Strange Sounds Heard for Many Centuries on the Red Sea Borders.

A singular phenomenon occurs on the borders of the Red sea to a place called Nakous, where intermittent underground sounds have been heard for an unknown number of centuries. It is situated about half a mile distant from the shore, whence a long reach of sand ascends rapidly to a height of 300 feet. This reach is about 800 feet wide and resembles an amphitheater, being walled by low rocks.

The sounds coming up from the ground at this place recur at intervals of about an hour. They at first resemble a low murmur, but ere long there is heard a loud knocking, somewhat like the strokes of a bell and which at the end of about five minutes becomes so strong as to agitate the sand. The explanation of this curious phenomenon given by the Arabs is that there is a convent under the ground here and that these monks ring for prayers. So they call it Nakous, which means a bell.

The Arabs affirm that the noise so frightens their camels when they hear it as to render them furious. Philosophers attribute the sound to suppressed volcanic action—probably to the bubbling of gas or vapor underground.

Her Mistake.

"Mamma," said a little West side girl yesterday morning, "I can't go to school to-day. My tooth is achin' awful."

"All right, Lucy" said her mother, "get your jacket and I'll take you to a dentist and have the tooth pulled."

The child hesitated a moment and then said: "Oh, mamma, I made a mistake. It ain't my tooth—it's my head that's achin'."—Kansas City Times.

A Teacher's Testimony.

Hinton, Ky., Nov. 28 (Special)—It has long been claimed that Diabetes is incurable, but Mr. E. J. Thompson, teacher in the Hinton school, has pleasing evidence to the contrary. Mr. Thompson had Diabetes. He took Dodd's Kidney Pills and is cured. In a statement he makes regarding his cure Mr. Thompson says:

"I was troubled with my kidneys for more than two years and was treated by two of the best doctors in this part of the state. They claimed I had Diabetes and there was little to be done for me. Then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and what they did for me was wonderful. It is entirely owing to Dodd's Kidney Pills that I am now enjoying good health."

Many doctors still maintain that Diabetes is incurable. But Diabetes is a kidney disease and the kidney disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure has yet to be discovered.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a Uterine Tonic and Regulator. I suffered for four years with irregularities and Uterine troubles. No one but those who have experienced this dreadful agony can form any idea of the physical and mental misery those endure who are thus afflicted. Your Vegetable Compound cured me within three months. I was fully restored to health and strength, and now my periods are regular and painless. What a blessing it is to be able to obtain such a remedy when so many doctors fail to help you. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is better than any doctor or medicine I ever had. Very truly yours, Miss Easy Whittaker, 604 39th St., W. Savannah, Ga."

No physician in the world has had such a training or such an amount of information at hand to assist in the treatment of all kinds of female ills as Mrs. Pinkham. In her office at Lynn, Mass., she is able to do more for the ailing women of America than the family physician. Any woman, therefore, is responsible for her own trouble who will not take the pains to write to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free.

A letter from another woman showing what was accomplished in her case by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham: I am so grateful to you for the help Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me that I deem it but a small return to write you an expression of my experience.

"Many years suffering with weakness, inflammation, and a broken down system, made me more anxious to die than live, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound soon restored my lost strength. Taking the medicine only two weeks produced a radical change, and two months restored me to perfect health. I am now a changed woman, and my friends wonder at the change, it is so marvellous. Sincerely yours, Miss Mattie Henry, 429 Green St., Danville, Va."

The testimonials which we are constantly publishing from grateful women prove beyond a doubt the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to conquer female diseases.

BOONE CO. RECORDER
Wednesday, - - Nov. 30, 1904.
W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher

Official Democratic plurality in Kentucky is 11,876.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets are becoming a favorite for stomach troubles and constipation. For sale by all Druggists.

Secretary Shaw has called on the banks for $25,000,000; and we were told that that sort of thing would be done only in the event of the election of a Democratic President.

A friend at Verona sends the RECORDER a Missouri paper in which is published an article giving the result of the investigation of the cabbage worm by a Missouri experiment station. Those who conducted the investigation says the cabbage worm is a fake, that nothing unusual is found on the cabbage this year.

Twenty millionaires assembled at the Bellevue-Stratford tonight for their annual country dinner. These plowmen in the field of finance dined upon terrapin, canvasback duck, mushrooms and other viands. The wines were of the finest, but rustic simplicity was suggested by a big cider press in one corner of the room.

The press was not a mere ornament, but whenever one of the diners felt so inclined he would go to the machine, place a basket of apples under the press, and, with a few turns of a giant screw, supply himself with real home-made cider.

Another evidence of good faith in adopting the role of farmers was given by the millionaires in their method of eating certain courses. For the oysters the banqueters were supplied with miniature pitchforks, while they dissected their salad with toy rakes. Terrapin was conveyed to their mouths with small hoes.

The consomme cups were brought to the table in toy hay wagons, and wheeled to the hand of each guest in little red iron wheelbarrows. The punch was served in cups formed of apples, hollowed out and then frozen solid. A rooster strutted about the room and picked up the crumbs.

The table was circular, the hollow in the middle being filled with pumpkins, melons, corn, grapes, cabbages, apples, nuts, trailing beans and vegetables of every description. Many of the vegetables had been hollowed out and electric lights inserted. The pumpkins and some of the larger articles had been fantastically carved, decorated with moss wigs, and with their electric features they grinned at the "farmers."

To reach the room it was necessary to find a way through a cornfield. The floor was covered with wheat, upon which live roosters crowed to their contentment. A big stuffed bull was at one side of the room, his stall being decorated with more wonderfully carved and illuminated vegetables.

Along the opposite side of the room was a rail fence separating the guests from a pig, a calf and three fierce-looking stuffed rams. Farming utensils were scattered about, overhauling hung upon pegs in the wall and all was as ideally bucolic as the imagination of the millionaires could suggest.

The ices were molded and tinted to form fruits and vegetables. After the cigars were lighted the "farmers" tilted back their chairs and discussed the weather and crops until after midnight. Then the hired man hitched up the rigs of the farmers and they drove to their several remote homesteads with jovial warnings to be up in time to milk the cows.

The ancient minstrel joke as to why married men live longer than bachelors, and the reply that it only seems longer, was conceived in a spirit of fun, but it is now scientifically asserted that matrimony is conducive to longevity. A certain learned professor has calculated that the mortality among bachelors from the age of 30 to 45 years is 27 per cent, while among married men of the same age it is 18 per cent. For 41 bachelors who attain the age of 40 years there are 78 married men who reach the same age. The difference is still more striking in persons of advanced age. At 60 years there remain but 22 bachelors for 48 married men. At 70, 11 bachelors for 27 married men, and at 80, 3 bachelors for 9 married men.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Dear Sir:—Being a patron of the common schools, and having at heart the good of the common schools of Kentucky, I take the liberty of calling into question the policy of appointing teachers who are not lawfully qualified, and who, therefore, can not lawfully draw the public money, and I believe that such a policy persisted in will eventually ruin the common schools of Boone county. If under existing laws the pay is such that not enough competent men and women can be found to teach our schools, it would be much better to amend them to violate the laws.

A TAX PAYER.

A giant cheese made in Hamilton, Mo., has been shipped for exhibition in the dairy section of the Missouri exhibit at the World's Fair. It is seven feet in diameter, 14 inches thick and weighs about 1,500 pounds. On the face of the cheese is the word "Missouri," and in base relief is pictured a milkmaid seated milking in a field of clover and grass. The plaster cast for making the cheese was made in St. Louis, and the milk used in the cheese was the product of two days milking of a Hamilton creamery, 1,690 pounds of curd being used.

The wheat crop in Southern Tennessee is pronounced to be the best that has been harvested in years. Some fields were so rich that the harvesters could not get to them in time to save them. Good times are prevailing generally throughout the Tennessee River section, and the farmers have good prospects for all their products this year.

Although tobacco growing in Mexico does not rank in importance with some of its other agricultural pursuits, it is, none the less, a very considerable industry. The total annual production amounts to 1,000,000 arrarrobas, or some 25,400,000 pounds, raised in 9 districts. The only tobacco that is in demand for export purposes is that of San Andres Tuxtla, of which about 80 per cent. is shipped to Antwerp, Hamburg and Bremen, but, as the land on which the crop is cultivated is limited, the production can not be increased to any material extent.

Pith of the Press.

Strange, but we haven't heard Boswell Rils mentioned for a Cabinet position. Minister to Denmark might do.—Atlanta Constitution.

General Kuroki pronounces the Russian story of his death as absurd, and General Kurok's word can scarcely be disputed.—Chattanooga Times.

One Democrat was elected to Congress in Pennsylvania. Congress will, of course, be appealed to to right this outrage.—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

Mr. Roosevelt's sweeping victory is due to the fact that the public couldn't resist Mr. Dowie's prayers. If you don't believe it, ask Dowie.—Rochester Herald.

Chairman Cortelyou has $400,000 of the campaign fund left over. Any of the old school politicians would have managed to finish that up so as to leave about $4.—Baltimore Sun.

The news that the Philidelphia Mint is making money for Panama is not surprising; this country has been making money for Panama ever since the revolution.—Philadelphia Telegram.

Here are a few garter superstitions that still survive:

Gold garter buckles are "lucky" and silver ones the reverse.

The girl who wears her garters below the knee will early lose her beauty.

To put on the left garter before the right on dressing in the morning will bring bad luck all day.

The marriage of a bride who wears any but white garters on her wedding day will have an unhappy ending.

The luckiest colors for garters are white, blue and black. The wearers of yellow garters will lose a friend within a year.

If a garter breaks in church the wearer's marriage will be happy, but if the accident happens at a dance it is a sign that the wearer's sweetheart is faithless to her.

About the worst case of assault and battery on record is that at Port Arthur.

The vote in Missouri was 44,000 less than four years ago. That looks like the staying-at-home Democrats carried the state for Roosevelt.

BILIOUSNESS AND CONSTIPATION CURED BY THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT
Because the liver is neglected people suffer with constipation, biliousness, headaches and fevers. Colds attack the lungs and contagious diseases take hold of the system. It is safe to say that if the liver were always kept in proper working order, illness would be almost unknown.
Thedford's Black-Draught is so successful in curing such sickness because it is without a rival as a liver regulator. This great family medicine is not a strong and drastic drug, but a mild and healthful laxative that cures constipation and may be taken by a mere child without possible harm.
The healthful action on the liver cures biliousness. It has an invigorating effect on the kidneys. Because the liver and kidneys do not work regularly, the poisonous acids along with the waste from the bowels get back into the blood and virulent contagion results.
Timely treatment with Thedford's Black-Draught removes the dangers which lurk in constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and will positively forestall the inroads of Bright's disease, for which disease in advanced stages there is no cure. Ask your dealer for a 25c. package of Thedford's Black-Draught.

Local News.

Only 23 days more until Christmas will be here again.

A liberal reward would be paid for a sign of rain that never fails.

Our Bellevue correspondent was an early visitor to town yesterday.

Go to Raymond Jackson, at Burlington, for mixed feed, ship stuff, etc.

Where has the moisture that has been manufactured into frost this fall come from.

In Scott county corn is selling for 45 cents a bushel delivered. Here it brings 60 cents.

The Ohio river was lower last Thursday than it had been for 42 years on Thanksgiving day.

Golden Grange, at Union, will hold its annual election of officers on Saturday, December 10th.

Bentler & Tanner bought between 700 and 800 turkeys for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

For Sale—Extra good, fresh milch cow and young calf. Apply to Robert Carver, Locust Grove neighborhood.

There have been worse weather for Thanksgiving days than that of last Thursday. It was good weather for the hunters.

C. C. Talbott, of Florence, called yesterday and had his name entered on the RECORDER muster roll, as several other have done recently.

There was an epidemic of marriages in this county last week. No doubt there are several who wish they had been numbered among the victims.

Notice is hereby given that all school tax that remains unpaid in District No. 14 (Woolper) on December 1, 1904, I will advertise and sell property to pay.

J. M. EDDINS, Collector.

John Baldon will move his saw mill to the farm on Gunpowder owned by the late James Henderson. He has bought about 20 acres of oak timber which he will cut into lumber at that location.

The RECORDER has a friend who is very anxious to secure three copies of the paper of Nov. 16th, and any person having one of that date will confer a favor by sending it to this office, and they will be paid for it.

There has been numerous callers at the Sheriff's office in the last ten days, and a large volume of money has found its way across his desk in that time. This is the last day in which you have to pay your taxes without being jacked up six per cent.

Farmer T. D. Jackson was offering for sale a lot of fodder, one evening last week, and when asked if it was nice and bright, replied, "certainly—there was no rain on the corn after it was planted." No futher questions concerning the fodder were asked.

Doesn't Respect Old Age.

It's shameful when youth fails to show proper respect for old age, but just the contrary in the case of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They cut off maladies no matter how severe and irrespective of old age. Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Fever, Constipation all yield to this perfect Pill. 25c at all Druggists.

M. J. Farris has, during the past few weeks, bought something over 3,000 barrels of corn at an average of $2 per barrel. He also purchased 7,000 shocks of fodder, fed out at 20 cents per shock, and 10,000 bales of wheat and millet straw, the wheat straw averaging $3 per ton and the millet straw $4 per ton. He has on hands at present 700 export cattle which he expects to winter.—Danville Advocate.

Some of the farmers who were in this office last week, complained that the hunters in many instances paid no attention to notices that their land was posted, and heeded not their requests not to trespass. They said that there was such a fusillade in the fields that stock was in danger, and that it was not safe for women to attempt to travel the public roads alone on horseback or in buggies.

The Best Liniment.

"Chamberlain's Pain Balm is considered the best liniment on the market," write Post & Bliss, of Georgia, Vt. No other liniment will heal a cut or bruise so promptly. No other affords such quick relief from rheumatic pains. No other is so valuable for deep seated pains like lame back and pains in the chest. Give this liniment a trial and become acquainted with its remarkable qualities and you will never wish to be without it. For sale by all Druggists.

Teachers' District Meeting.

The Teachers District Association met at Pleasant Ridge School House, Nov. 19th, and was a success in every way.

Quite a number of teachers were present, among whom were Miss Helen Dickey, of Union; Lucy Russell, of Constance; Sadie Crisler, Flora Youell, A. M. Yealey, and H. W. Northcutt, of the South Lotonia school.

The meeting was called to order by Chairman, D. M. Snyder, and was opened with a song, "Work for the night is coming," after which the invocation was offered by the Superintendent.

Organization followed. Superintendent Snyder was chosen Chairman and H. W. Northcutt, secretary. After a short talk by the Superintendent the program was taken up.

"How to teach History" was elaborately discussed by Prof. A. M. Yealey and H. W. Northcutt. Prof. Yealey insists that the prime object in teaching History successfully, is to keep pupils interested and he advises that teachers form their own questions from the text.

"Primary Reading" was the next subject given attention. In the absence of Miss Olga Han, the subject was assigned to Miss Northcutt, who was followed by several of the teachers. Supt. Snyder closed discussion of the subject. He insisted upon thoroughness and maintains that rapid promotion is to be avoided in primary work.

The meeting was then adjourned until 1:30 p. m.

The ladies of the district had prepared a sumptuous repast of which everyone heartily partook.

At 1:30 the meeting was again called to order.

"Geography, Relation to History" was the next subject but as Mrs. Wood and Miss Ryle, to whom it was assigned were not present, the subject "The Relation of Civil Government to Citizenship," was substituted and was elaborately discussed by H. W. Northcutt, who was followed by A. M. Yealey, Miss Northcutt and B. A. Floyd.

"Primary Arithmetic" was ably discussed by Miss Lucy Russell. She insisted that pupils be thoroughly drilled in principles rather than in definitions and solutions. Miss Russell was followed in her remarks by several of the teachers, who concurred with her that the prime object of Arithmetic is to cultivate and develop the reasoning powers.

"Present Trustee System" was assigned to B. A. Floyd. In an elaborate discourse he pointed out the advantages and defects of the present system. He was followed by several trustees and teachers and by Supt. Snyder.

The visiting and resident teachers and Supt. Snyder voted the following:

Resolved, That we as teachers extend our thanks to the ladies of Pleasant Ridge for the repast which they prepared and to the people of the district for their kindness and hospitality.

After the closing song "God be with you till we meet again," the meeting adjourned to meet again at Beaver.

HUBERT W. NORTHCUTT, Sec.

A Runaway Bicycle.

Terminated with an ugly cut on the leg of J. B. Orner, Franklin Grove Ill. It developed a stubborn ulcer unyielding to doctors and remedies for four years. Then Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured. It's just as good for Burns, Scalds, Skin Eruptions and Piles. 25c at all Druggists.

They do say that every Boone county farmer who visits Aurora now takes the largest ear of corn he can find, since H. A. Speckman, proprietor of the Eagle Sample Rooms, has offered a prize of a gallon Edgewood whisky for the finest ear of corn brought to his place from November 17 to Dec. 24th. Some Boone county man will get that holiday material, sure.

Chronic Diarrhoea Cured.

Mr. Walter Richardson, of Troutville, Va., had an attack of diarrhoea that came near ending his life. His physician had failed to relieve him and the disease had become chronic when he began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera; and Diarrhoea Remedy. It soon cured him and he now recommends that preparation whenever an opportunity offers. For sale by all Druggists.

Warning Against Small-Pox.

Since January, 1903, smallpox has prevailed, more or less extensively, in every county in Kentucky, with a total of over 2500 cases and 300 deaths, and costing in cash more than one-half million dollars, besides an estimated loss from interference with business and travel of something over one and one-half million dollars. Properly expended, this sum would have been more than enough to have guarded the health interests of our people for a generation, besides keeping every resident of the State vaccinated so that the existence of anything but an imported case of smallpox would have been impossible.

With the advent of cold weather, cases of the disease are being reported in widely separated sections in many counties, and we feel that it is again our duty to warn our officials and people of the necessity of prompt action to prevent serious and expensive local outbreaks. Fortunately, the prevention of this disease is as certain and as to as it is cheap and easy, and although it is unlawful to remain unvaccinated at any time, in the face of existing conditions intelligent people should not wait for the law to enforce them to evident duty. Vaccination and re-vaccination, properly done with reliable virus, is a sure preventive, and is entirely free from danger. It should always be done by a competent physician, with clean hands and instruments, at three points, at least an inch apart, on a well cleaned arm, and should dry thoroughly before the sleeve is drawn down. Fresh, reliable, commercial virus can be procured, but it is difficult to keep it active, and the Board prefers and recommends the use of humanized virus, especially in the country districts where the family physician can select it himself from the arms of healthy children and young girls. It is more certain to take, causes less soreness, and is believed to give better and longer protection. If the scabs are wrapped in tissue paper, sealed up and put in a dry, cool place, they can be kept almost indefinitely.

Physicians everywhere should be on their guard and should isolate the first case and vaccinate all exposed at once. Grown people almost never have chicken-pox. When unvaccinated, grown people have a contagious eruptive disease, under existing circumstances they should be isolated and treated as suspicious until the health authorities decide it is not small-pox. All should remember that there are no such diseases as "elephant itch," "African itch," "army itch," "cedar itch," or "Cuban itch," and these are "nigger" names for small-pox. Every person in the State who has not already been vaccinated should do so at once, and the ignorant or negligent should be compelled to protect themselves, for the benefit of their communities, by the proper authorities. The laws on this subject are ample and sufficient, and whenever small-pox spreads in any community it is the fault of the health or fiscal officials and should be charged to them. In preventing the spread of this horrible disease this Board asks and expects the support of all intelligent people. Copies of circulars, describing the modern methods of preventing this and other contagious diseases, may be had free of expense upon application to the Board at Bowling Green.

By order of the Board.

Farmers in various parts of the country are getting tired of having automobile scorchers recklessly rush along the highway and frighten horses, resulting in serious accidents. These panting, snorting machines would frighten most anything that was animated when driven at a high rate of speed. In Wisconsin some of the farmers resorted to shotgun persuasion and the result was that a few of the flying chafleurs were induced to slow up when they saw a horse ahead of them trying to walk on his hind legs. Indiana farmers are oiling up their old shooting irons also and hereafter will take a few wing shots at scorchers who forget to stop when a horse shies into a ditch.

If you are thinking of making your friend an Xmas present of a watch, clock or an article of jewelry come to me and we will consult prices. Give yourself plenty of time to compare my prices with those of city dealers, and it will save you from 10 to 25 per cent. As my goods are ordered direct from the factory you get nothing but clean, new goods—no stock-worn stuff that has laid around for years. Try me an be convinced.

R. W. CLARK, Jeweler, Burlington.

Capt. Frank Hartmah and a friend, of Lawrenceburg neighborhood, transacted business in Burlington, yesterday.

The dryest year known in this State was 1854. It was seasonable to about July 1; after that there was no more rain during the growing season. There was very little grain other than corn raised at that time, and the failure of that crop resulted in great destitution. Much stock died from starvation during the winter of 1854 5. We have had no year of drouth to compare with it since, though we have experienced many dry seasons. At that time there were no railroads to bring produce from the more favored sections of the country.

It is noticeable that the weather conditions have changed in this State. As a rule we have sufficient rain during the spring and summer but very little, if any, during the fall months and frequently not until late in December. The time has come when provision must be made for water from under the earth's surface. The depreciation of stock values during a continuous drouth is very great and is due to insufficient stock water. We had just as well make up our minds to provide for water storage. It is a necessity. —Scott County Democrat.

If the gentleman who came to town on the 22d inst., and brought a clock for me to repair, but by mistake put in the hands of another person not a jeweler, will send me his name he will confer a great favor on me. R. W. CLARK, Jeweler, Burlington.

It is said that pole-cats and coons are plentiful this fall, and the local fur dealers anticipate making a considerable quantity of coin off of the crop.

NEED NAVY OFFICERS.

Annual Report of Chief of Bureau of Navigation.

The Estimate Made in 1902 For Ships Now in Commission is Inadequate—The Chief Makes Recommendations.

Washington, Nov. 24.—How badly off the navy is for officers, and how seriously this condition may affect the navy and the nation is plainly told in the annual report of Rr. Adm. George A. Converse, chief of the bureau of navigation, approved by Secretary Norton. Experience, especially in gun fire, he says, has shown that it is necessary to increase the number of officers assigned to the ships, so that the estimate made in 1902 of the number of officers needed for ships in commission is inadequate. It provides for only about one-half as many officers as ships of the same class carry in the British, French and German navies. Adm. Converse recommends that the number of lieutenants be increased from 200 to 300. "It is especially desirable," the admiral says, "that every battleship and other powerful vessel requiring the greatest skill and experience for proper efficiency should have her full quota of officers of suitable rank; yet many of our battleships have lieutenants as navigators, practically all have lieutenants as ordnance officers, and several battleships have ensigns and even midshipmen as watch and division officers.

This very unsatisfactory and even dangerous condition is due to the many urgent demands for officers, the existing inadequacy of numbers often making it impossible to detail officers of appropriate rank. The increasing numbers of midshipmen graduated from the naval academy in time will partially relieve the situation in the lower grades, but more lieutenant commanders and lieutenants are needed than existing laws provides."

Because of the important part played by torpedo craft in the war in the Far East is deemed advisable that the larger vessels of this type be commanded by lieutenant commanders.

To illustrate how much older the captains of the American navy are than those of foreign navies the report says the youngest American commander to-day on the day he attained that rank was older than the average age of Japanese captains, and about the same as the average of English and German captains. He had passed the compulsory retirement age for Japanese captains and was within sixteen months of the compulsory retirement age for German and English officers. No specific remedy for this defect is ordered because Adm. Converse feels that if the need be recognized by higher authority satisfactory means may be soon devised. He remarks, however, that "until a measure is adapted for the compulsory retirement of commanders and captains that do not gain promotions at certain ages, the flow of promotion and the ages of officers in the different grades will not be satisfactory.

J. F. VALENTINE ARRESTED.

He is President of the Iron Molders' Union of North America.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 24.—Joseph F. Valentine, president of the Iron Molders' Union of North America, was placed under arrest here Wednesday by the police officials of this city upon a telegraph request from the Cincinnati police authorities. Valentine made no resistance to his being taken into custody, and instead of trying to avoid such action, waited at his hotel several hours for the expected officer.

Valentine's arrest is made in connection with alleged violence by members of the organization of which he is the head, in Cincinnati where a strike is on.

Valentine was not locked up, but was detained in the detectives' room of the Central police station. Valentine was permitted to address a local union of the iron molders Wednesday in accordance with an engagement he had made several weeks ago.

An interesting incident in connection with the arrest of President Valentine is the fact that Mayor Tom L. Johnson asked the police to permit Mr. Valentine to go about on his own recognizance. The mayor further assured the president of the molders' union that he was invited to spend his time at the mayor's home or at any hotel in the city he cared to remain at.

DOESN'T LIKE TITLE.

Sir Edward Objects to the Name "American" Ambassador.

He Said at a Banquet That the Word Implied Domination Over All the Western Hemisphere—He Suggested the Title of Usona.

London, Nov. 25. — The annual Thanksgiving banquet of the American society at the Hotel Cecil Thursday night was marked by the presentation to Ambassador Choate of a portrait of himself painted by Hubert Herkemer and paid for by subscription by members of the society. An unusual note for such a gathering was introduced by Sir Edward Clarke, who, proposing Mr. Choate's health, sarcastically derided the title "American" ambassador, declaring that the word American implied domination over the whole of the western hemisphere, which the United States does not possess and is not entitled to, as Great Britain is territorially a larger power on the American continent than the United States. Sir Edward suggested that a more suitable title would be Usona, signifying United States of North America.

Having in the first public criticism here of the state department's order that embassies hereafter shall be called "American" thus uttered a "respectful protest" against the assumption of the larger name, Sir Edward Clarke proceeded to refer to the miserable underpayment of American judges and America's waste of energies in providing for survivors of civil war, and in building iron clads which she could never use.

Ambassador Choate, replying, said that Americans were quite satisfied with their name, and then referred to the recent election in the United States as a splendid tribute of devotion and affection. Having remarked upon the regeneration of public life in America, regardless of party, now in progress, Mr. Choate alluded to the ever-growing friendship between Great Britain and America as reason for thanksgiving and added: "I asked Lord Lansdowne if he was ready to negotiate treaty of arbitration. 'Why,' said Lord Lansdowne, 'it goes without saying.'"

Continuing, Mr. Choate maintained that many things go without saying between Great Britain and America, above all that they should avoid all possible causes of offense and settle all differences by peaceful means.

He paid a high tribute to the Archbishop of Canterbury's "Rediscovery of America" and dilated upon the value of visits to America by such men as the archbishop and John Morley.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, proposing President Roosevelt's health, expressed his sincere thanks for the great hospitality with which he was received in America. He said America faced problems greater than the world had ever seen, but by a stroke of genius had found the man to conquer the difficulties. "We on this side," said the archbishop, "not less than the brothers to you across the Atlantic, thank God and take courage because the destinies of America are safe in Roosevelt's hands."

SCIENTIFIC STRAYS.

Although iron pyrites and copper pyrites are difficult to distinguish underground by candle light, they are separated visually by the use of the bluish-white flame of magnesium wire or the acetylene light.

A square foot of uncovered pipe, filled with steam at 100 pounds pressure, will radiate and dissipate in a year the heat put into 3,116 pounds of steam by the economic combustion of 398 pounds of coal. Thus, ten square feet of bare pipe corresponds approximately to the waste of two tons of coal per annum.

Oxygenated water at 12 volumes is pronounced by M. A. Renard the best preservative of milk. Added directly after milking, in the proportion of two to three per cent., it decomposes in six or eight hours into water and oxygen, leaving no foreign substance as do borax or salicylic acid, and effecting no change like boiling or freezing. The antiseptic action persists long enough to prevent alteration.

The new carbon-molybdenum compound of Henri Moissan is obtained by heating melted molybdenum and aluminum in the electric furnace. The metallic product is treated with a concentrated solution of potash, when needle crystals of the new compound are obtained. The substance is very hard, scarcely attacked by acids, unaffected by water or steam below 600 degrees, and promises to be of value for molybdenum steels.

The physiological effects of electric currents have been investigated by Prof. Nernst at Bonn. The safety of the human body when exposed to a powerful high-frequency electric current has been explained as due to the passage of the current over the surface of the body only, but Prof. Nernst finds the reason of the current's harmlessness to be probably that it does not have time to effect a change in the cellular tissue before the reversal of the current takes place. Experiments on frogs have confirmed the new theory.

WOLVES HELD AT BAY.

A GREEDY PACK OF ILLS SURROUND A CLERGYMAN'S WIFE.

Through the Arrival of Timely Aid She Escapes from the Terrors of a Prolonged Siege.

The Rev. W. A. Dentou, of Girard, Crawford county, Kansas, tells the following story of a harrowing experience of one of the members of his family: "My wife," he says, "was assailed for fifteen years by a combination of ailments following the birth of our first child. The food she ate fermented in her stomach, she had frequent dizzy spells, her limbs were swollen and painful, her nerves were quite shattered, she was unable to sleep and she was many times on the verge of heart failure.

"Physicians gave her only temporary relief. Finally the favorable reports of some relatives and neighbors led her to make trial of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. She experienced improvement almost at once. They relieved her sleeplessness, the smothering sensations have disappeared and have not annoyed her for years. They freed her from stomach trouble and the dropsical tendency was mitigated. The progress of the rheumatism, which had begun to make her fingers crooked, was stayed and the pain was banished. In every respect they gave her more help than any other remedy she had ever used, and she is today in better health than for many years.

"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are our staple household remedy, and I am in the habit of recommending them to all who suffer from troubles like those which afflicted my wife."

All the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and repair shattered nerves are contained, in a condensed form, in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppression, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental strain, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold in boxes at fifty cents a box or six boxes for two dollars and fifty cents, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N.Y. Be sure you get the genuine; substitutes never cured anybody.

NEW ERA IN RUSSIA.

The Czar May Grant His Subjects a Constitution.

The Zemstvo Memorial Presented to Him and He Was Deeply Impressed With the Contents of the Document.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 26.—The unexpected may happen after all. The meeting of the Zemstvoists, "First Russian Congress," as it is now called, may indeed work the inauguration of a new era for Russia. Emperor Nicholas, the initiator of the plan for universal disarmament, may turn back upon the reactionaries and crown his reign by granting to his subjects the constitution which his grandfather had already prepared when he fell by the hand of an assassin.

The basis of such a possibility is the significant fact that late Friday afternoon the emperor received in the palace at Tsarskoe-Selo, M. Shipoff, of Moscow; M. Petrunkelvitch, of Tever; M. Rodzianko, of Ekaterinoslav, and Count Heiden, four prominent members of the Zemstvo congress, and listened at length to their views. It develops that when Minister of Interior Sviatopolk-Mirsky presented the Zemstvo memorial and resolutions on November 24 the emperor was so deeply impressed as well by the contents of the documents as by the character of the signers and that he immediately expressed a desire to personally receive a deputation of four.

The Zemstvoists therefore went to Tsarskoe-Selos by imperial command. At their audience, it is understood they explained fully their position and reiterated the views expressed by the memorial that the salvation of the empire from ruin by revolution lay in the adoption of the general ideas expressed in the memorial. The emperor was greatly impressed by what he heard and asked many questions. While it is understood that he gave no indication of his purposes except the sympathy he displayed, the deputation, when they returned to St. Petersburg, were in high spirits.

The news that the delegation had been given an audience by the emperor spread like wildfire through the city Friday night and created a tremendous sensation, rejoicing among liberals and amazement among the uncompromising supporters of the old regime.

Earlier in the day the report was current an immediate effect of the Zemstvo meeting would likely be the realization of the plan for giving two elected Zemstvo representatives seats in the council of the empire.

One of the prominent liberals who participated in the congress declined to share in the jubilation of some of his colleagues, and expressed the opinion that victory was yet a long way off, although he said he believed it was sure to come in the end. He pointed out that the declaration in the memorial in favor of the abrogation of special privileges and for the equality of all classes before the law when it became known throughout Russia was bound to appeal strongly to the peasantry. "All the members of the congress," said he, "are large landed proprietors. A leveling process which would put the Mujik on an equality with them must be prejudicial to their personal interests. In no other country in the world except Russia would find men anxious to make sacrifices for an altruistic ideal."

GEN. CHAFFEE'S REPORT.

He Suggests the Disfranchisement of Deserters From the Army.

Washington, Nov. 26.—Lieut. Gen. Chaffee, chief of staff of the United States army, in his annual report says in his opinion little new general legislation is needed at this time. He says sufficient time has not elapsed since the reorganization of the army to determine wisely what legislation is necessary. He suggests the enactment of state laws disfranchising deserters from the army, adding:

"If all states and territories should by law withhold from deserters exercise of the right to vote at national, state and municipal elections, unless the act of desertion be atoned for by lawful discharge, subsequently earned by service, it seems probable that the most healthful remedy practicable would be applied to the evil and that the result would be surprisingly great."

The general says that inquiry of men in guard houses on his tour of inspection elicited no special reason for desertion, the general reply being that army life was not what had been anticipated. Gen. Chaffee believed the adoption of his suggestion would relieve military prisons of two-thirds of their occupants.

The report urges the re-establishment of recruiting depots at Fort Sioux, Columbus barracks and Jefferson barracks.

At present there are something over 1,700 general prisoners at army posts and the post guard houses are "Simply crowded to an unsanitary limit." Additional prison facilities on the Indianapolis military reservation are specifically recommended. A number of extracts from the reports of general officers favoring the restoration of the canteen are given.

RUSH OF IMMIGRANTS.

New York, Nov. 26.—So great has been the rush of immigrants to this port within the last few days that the immigration station at Ellis Island was crowded Friday and several thousand steerage passengers were forced to remain Friday night on board the steamers on which they arrived from Europe. When the Baltic came in during the forenoon with a steerage list numbering 1,700, the officials of the steamer were informed that there was no room for them on the inland. Five thousand immigrants already were crowded in the detention quarters while the normal handling capacity of the present force of inspectors is only 3,000. Under the circumstances they refused absolutely to handle the additional 1,700 brought in by the Baltic and the steamship officers were obliged to keep them on board under guard.

VISITED WORLD'S FAIR.

President and Party Spent Nine Hours on the Grounds.

Careful Precautions Were Taken By the Officers to Insure the Personal Safety of the Chief Magistrate of the Nation.

St. Louis, Nov. 28.—In sharp contrast with the strenuous experience of Saturday, when a hurricane effort was made to view the Louisiana Purchase exposition in nine hours, President Roosevelt's time Sunday was passed quietly and uneventfully.

Rest and recuperation from the fatigue of Saturday constituted Sunday; almost the sole idea of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and their immediate party.

After a late family breakfast at the residence of William H. Thompson, treasurer of the Exposition Co., who entertained the President, Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Alice Roosevelt, Secretary and Mrs. Loeb and Dr. P. M. Rixey, the president and party attended divine service at 11 o'clock in the Second Presbyterian church. It was known that the president would attend the morning service at this church.

Long before the hour of his arrival the streets in that vicinity were banked with people almost from curb to curb. The crowd was handled admirably, however, and gave the big force of police and secret service officers no trouble. A considerable crowd assembled also near the Thompson residence. As the President and Mrs. Roosevelt descended the steps of the residence to enter their carriage, the people respectfully uncovered, but there was no noisy demonstration. The silence on this day was appreciated by the president. Both he and Mrs Roosevelt acknowledged the silent salutation of the crowd—the former by tipping his hat and the latter by bowing and smiling.

Careful precautions were taken by the officers to insure the personal safety of the president. Watchfulness was not relaxed for an instant. The president's carriage was surrounded by secret service officers and two picked sergeants of the Eighth United States cavalry rode, one on each side of the carriage, both going to and returning from the church. As the president's carriage stopped at the church entrance, the crowd could restrain its friendly feeling no longer. Hearty cheers were given for the president, which he acknowledged by tipping his hat. He was met at the entrance by the officers of the church, who escorted him and Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of the party to pews which had been reserved for them.

At the conclusion of the service Dr. Niccolls, the pastor, requested the congregation to remain seated while the president and his party retired from the church. The president was well on his way to the residence of Mr. Thompson, therefore, before the congregation had left the church.

After luncheon the President and Mrs. Roosevelt received informally a few personal friends who called merely to pay their respects. The president also greeted one of his former comrades in the Rough Riders, Private Schroeder, of Muskogee, I. T., who is now connected with the Indian police of the territory. He had come to St. Louis expressly to see the president. At 4 o'clock the party went for an extended drive.

On his return trip the president was followed by a procession containing more than 200 vehicles.

Sunday night the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Roosevelt, Secretary and Mrs. Loeb, Dr. Rixey and Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were entertained at dinner at 8 o'clock by Mr. and Mrs. Francis at their residence. After the dinner the president and party returned to the Thompson residence. At 10:15 they left in carriages for the exposition grounds, where their special train has been held awaiting their departure for Washington.

The special train carrying President Roosevelt and party left the World's fair grounds at 12:01 Monday morning on its way to Washington.

ENDS LIFE IN A CELL.

A Man of Many Aliases Hanged Himself at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, Nov. 28.—A man, believed to be prominently connected in Germany, committed suicide by hanging himself in his cell at the Central police station here Sunday. He was registered as Max Pickhardt, aged 27, Germany, at the police headquarters. As he registered at three hotels here under different names and under others names in St. Louis and elsewhere throughout the country, he was called "The German prince of many aliases." He was tall, fine looking and faultlessly dressed. Sunday he was moaning about "Liddie," and repeatedly said, "She will never know what became of me," etc. Letters were found addressed to Liddie Lang, Reichenback, Saxony, Germany, and he repeatedly said she was waiting there for his return. He prayed she would never hear of his downfall.

He was arrested last Tuesday at the Grand hotel, where he had registered as Clemen Christian Lanteren and charged with being a hotel thief.

He had passports and letters of recommendation that it is alleged were stolen from a prominent German army officer named Lanteren, at the Jefferson hotel in St. Louis. Previously he had registered at the Gibson house here as Julius Auer, a traveling jewelryman, whose trunk was worth $12,000 he claimed. Later the real Julius Auer arrived and found some of the valuables gone from his trunk. Then the princely German was traced to the St. Nicholas hotel here, where he had registered as Max Greiner. Since his arrest telegrams have poured into Cincinnati from Indianapolis, Louisville and other cities, and especially from St. Louis, inquiring about the alleged "slick hotel thief."

He had railway mileage in the name of J. Beltman, of Cincinnati, and of C. W. Nichols and L. McDonald, of New York, all said to have been secured from rooms in hotels. A large grip contained embroideries and other valuables, said to have been stolen from the World's fair. This grip was already marked for Liddie Lang, Reichenback, Saxony, Germany. While the man was wanted in a dozen cities, it is believed that he died without any one in this country learning his name.

He served as a soldier under Kit Carson in many Indian wars of New Mexico and in 1861 was commissioned major of the First New Mexico infantry by President Lincoln, and afterward promoted to colonel.

Mr. Chaves took part in several civil war battles in this section, including the battle of Valverde. In 1865 he was elected delegate to congress and served three terms.

JUMPED FROM THE PARAPET.

Two Prisoners Made Their Escape From Governors Island.

New York, Nov. 28.—Two prisoners escaped from Governors Island Sunday night by jumping from the parapet of Castle William to the ground, 30 feet below. The men, James Dunning and John Doyle, made their way unobserved to the water front where they swam to a small boat anchored near shore in which they rowed out into the bay. They hailed a ferryboat which picked them up and believing them to be shipwrecked sailors landed them in Brooklyn, where further trace of them was lost. Dunning and Doyle were transferred to Governors Island about eight months ago from western posts, from which they had deserted.

The entertainment given by Professor and Mrs. Hughes' school, last Thursday and Friday nights was fairly well attended. Considering the fact that it was the first time the pupils ever participated in an entertainment of that character they did extremely well. "Much has been printed recently in the newspapers in regard to the existence of a small snake or worm found in cabbage, and deaths have been reported of persons as a consequence of eating the same. The worm was first discovered, or, at least, the story of its existence, and its poisonous qualities, was started in Tennessee. In the great cabbage producing sections of the Northwest the trade in this vegetable has been nearly destroyed, and the thrifty German population of that section, who reaped large profits from the manufacture of sauer kraut, have lost thousands of dollars on account of the scare. Some physicians have declared that the worm is harmless. The matter has attracted such widespread attention that in several States agricultural stations have made an investigation. All of them report that the worm is harmless whether raw or cooked. Many people scatter paris-green over their cabbage to drive away the worms, and if anybody has died from eating the vegetable it is possible that this poisonous agency has had something to do with it. There is no information as to whether the worm is found generally in cabbage this season or not, and although it may be harmless the scare has had its effect, and the trade in cabbage has suffered correspondingly."

Mrs. J. J. Tanner, a most estimable lady, died at her home one and a quarter miles out on the Florence pike, last Sunday, after a long period of feeble health. Heart failure was the immediate cause of her death. She leaves a husband and a son, besides a number of relatives, among them a brother, Jerry Beemon, to mourn her departure. The funeral services and the burial took place at Hopeful church yesterday.

Capt. Charles Mauer, of Bellevue, was in town Monday. The Captain was looking fine, but denied most emphatically the report that had preceded him here a few days, and caused his friends to study up many nice things to say to him by way of congratulations.

RECTOR OF ST. LUKE'S,

Ashburnham, Ontario, Testifies to the Good Qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Ashburnham, Ont., April 18, 1903.—I think it is only right that I should tell you what a wonderful effect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has produced. The day before Easter I was so distressed with a cold and cough that I did not think to be able to take any duties the next day, as my voice was almost choked by the cough. The same day I received an order from you for a bottle of your Cough Remedy. I at once procured a sample bottle, and took about three doses of the medicine. To my great relief the cough and cold had completely disappeared and I was able to preach three times on Easter Day. I know that this rapid and effective cure was due to your Cough Remedy. I make this testimonial without solicitation, being thankful to have found such a Godsent remedy.

Respectfully yours,

E. A. LANGFELDT, M. A.,
Rector of St. Luke's Church.

Miss Katie Craig, of Petersburg, spent Thanksgiving in this place.

Mrs. Robt. Platt, of Covington, is visiting in the neighborhood.

We have been told that Jim Holmes is quite a rival to Ben R., of late.

When you see Charlie Bodle get him to tell you about the mule trade.

Mrs. Wm. Wingate returned from a visit to Connersville, Ind., last week.

Mrs. D. E. Lawell, of Lexington, is visiting friends in this neighborhood.

John Peel was in town last Saturday riding behind an elegant 2:30 stepper.

What has become of Ed Parsons?

Tom Willis, of Idlewild, passed here last Saturday with the same old smile.

The protracted meeting at the Methodist church closed with two additions.

Mesdames Etta Stephens and Adah Wilson will spend the holidays in Baltimore, Md.

We are glad to state that F. M. Stephens has recovered from his late illness. He is in his 81st year.

Dame Rumor says we are going to have a wedding soon, if Clay Pearson lives up to his contract.

Miss Permelia Stephens, of Rising Sun, Ind., was the guest of Mrs. Solou Stephens, last Friday.

John and Jay Calvert have painted their house and now have one of the prettiest houses in town.

They say "Gum" Williamson nurses the babies and washes dishes while his wife attends the telephone.

They say John Hodges makes frequent trips to this place of late. Having his horse shod we suppose.

When Ben McConnell, of East Bend, comes to town he makes things lively while he is here with his jokes.

Hog killing is now all the rage. Mike Bailey killed three hogs that averaged 645 net, and made 62 gallons of lard.

Messrs. Ode Kelly and Solon Stephens, jr., will leave for California, next Thursday, to make their future home.

What has become of the Petersburg "pencil shover?" Has he fallen along by the wayside, or is he preparing to tie up?

Mrs. Jessie Wilson and little son spent last week with her parents here. She returned to her home at Idlewild, last Saturday.

We have heard that our friend, Billy Stephens, of Petersburg, has turned to be a "Roosevelt" man. We suppose he wants a postoffice.

B. H. Stephens, of Big Bone, was over last week, having an animated argument with C. G. Riddell over the Japan-Russian war.

Mr. Editor, who is the Idlewild cor.? We like her items very much and would like to get acquainted with her. Long may she write.

They say that a certain man on election night layed down in the gutter, supposing it was his bed, and commenced calling a poor, innocent hog all sorts of hard names, mistaking it for his wife.

The health of the community is better than it has been for over a year. Less complaining, and people seem to be in better spirits than they have for a long time. We suppose it is on account of the promise of four more years of prosperity.

From the way people from this side of the river inquire of the ferrymen where to buy goods in Rising Sun, we think that the merchants would derive considerable advantage by advertising in the RECORDER. A person who advertises liberally is regarded as a liberal fellow and liberality begets many friends.

While in Rising Sun, Ind., last week, we met "Commissary" and he explained to us the reason the report was started that he was married, and his explanation was very plausible to us. He said, he did not care only for one thing, that it might have been the cause of four or five sweet old maids (his words) committing "hari-kari."

Being afraid that we might usurp Joe's job, we will have to bring our short letter to a close. Another short year has passed and we have been spared once more to extend to the readers of the dear old RECORDER a merry Xmas and a happy New Year. Hoping that those who read these items may be spared to read this paper one year hence, we will bid all adieu.

We have been informed that B. R. Stephens (the old reliable Ben) put up such a good talk to C. G. Riddell about John E. Calvert smiling so much to a couple of old maids on his route, those who Ben and Cal had hopes of, that C. G., discontinued his huckster wagon until next spring. They do say that all three of the aforesaid "old bachelors" do now hoof it every Sunday evening down the road to see who will get there first. We will bet on Ben every time.

Last Tuesday Mrs. J. R. Stephens, while going to Rising Sun, lost her pocket book containing three silver dollars, a pair of gold spectacles and a check for $600. Lee, son of R. T. Stephens, found it up above Rabbit Hash, where the pocketbook had been thrown away with only the check in it. Some one had found it and after taking the money and glasses, threw the book down by the road side. Mr. Stephens rewarded the boy with a $20 gold piece for returning the pocketbook and check.

We have been trying to solve the problem of what is the reason that there is not more "RECORDERS" come to this office every Thursday. When we are at the postoffice there are from 4 to 6 persons after looking over our paper just for a minute. It seems as though everybody in this precinct tries to keep along with the times and want to know what is going on in the county and there ought to be 75 more subscribers at this place. The problem is too deep for us, Mr. Editor, but probably it will work out itself.

o o o

Complaints have been made that signals on our roads have been turned up by some one. Before accusing be sure you didn't neglect turning it down.

All manner of dignity is a hollow cavity filled with pompous wind. Man is only a man, no odds what manner of perfume he uses to hide his animal odor.

We don't believe there has ever been a day since the organization of Boone county that more hogs were killed throughout the county than on last Thursday.

Louis Merrick and wife spent the week with Noah West. Louis put in the time cutting his winter's wood. He will move to the farm of Louis Clore in the near future.

Here is something for the little folk to study out and answer: Its a queer name of a lady. When beheaded and curtailed it is the name of another lady. Each name spells the same backward as forward and each has a double letter. Who will be first to answer.

We spent Wednesday afternoon and Thursday in inspecting our R. F. D. route. We are well pleased and feel proud of its showing. There is now five different make of boxes in use on the route. We believe that we should by another letter added, either E. F. R. D. or I. F. R. D. route—Excelsior, because we believe it excels all others in the county, or ideal because we believe it the ideal route of the county, and we know nearly all the boxes are the Ideal. Of the 53 boxes that will soon be up, 45 of the number are Ideal, sold by George Thomas. We have got the cream; the other fellows can have the blue milk.

Harve Smith, of Belleview, got a setback a few evenings since. He called on his girl up on Woolper. During their sweet conversation she said, turning her dreamy eyes to his, "I love all that is beautiful in art and nature; I revel in the green fields, the babbling brooks and the little wayside flowers; I feast on the beauties of earth, sky and air; they are my daily life and food, and—" "Daughter," cried out the mother from the kitchen, not knowing that Harve was in the drawing room, "whatever made you go and gobble up that big dish of mashed potatoes that was left over from dinner? I told you we wanted them warmed over for supper. If your appetite isn't enough to bankrupt your poor pa."

Bilious Colic Prevented.

Take a double dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as soon as the first indication of the disease appears and a threatened attack may be warded off. Hundreds of people who are subject to attacks of bilious colic use the remedy in this way with perfect success. For sale by all Druggists.

Tuesday evening about 6 o'clock a general alarm was given on the Hathaway and Waterloo telephone line, announcing that the residence of Dave Williamson was on fire, but we were glad to hear later that it was only one of the flues burning out.

Notwithstanding the truth of the old adage that "self praise is half scandal," we frequently find persons that are not succeeding in calling forth praise from others, persist in throwing bouquets at themselves, hoping thereby to draw the attention of the outside world to themselves. Do your duty and the praise will follow.

Here are some valuable hints to hunters: Always when crossing a wire fence, pull your gun through after you by the muzzle. When hunting on a farm where there is live stock, be sure and shut your eyes and pull the trigger. You can then swear you did not see the horse before you shot. If you miss a shot kick your dog, it was his fault. In lieu of quail shoot a few chickens. The farmers have nothing to do but raise them. If your gun misses fire blow in the muzzle, this will tell you whether or not it is loaded. If you want to make a great reputation as a hustler, buy your game from some farmer's boy. He wont give you away and the birds will taste just the same to your friends.

THE NAVAL ESTIMATES

The Annual Report of the Secretary of the Navy.

Attention Is Called To the Need For More Officers and Men in Order To Carry On the Work of the Navy.

Washington, Dec. 5.—The annual report of Secretary of the Navy Morton was made public Sunday.

The naval estimates for the next fiscal year are large, the largest ever submitted, notwithstanding the fact that they have been cut down from those sent in by the bureaus more than seventeen million dollars. We have asked for less than the money actually required to continue the naval program as laid down by the general board, of which Adm. Dewey is the head, notwithstanding all who have studied the question carefully agree that this program should be carried out.

The past year was an important one in the history of our naval construction. Never before were so many war ships launched by this or any other nation in one year. Vessel for vessel and type for type I believe our new ships will compare favorably with those with any navy afloat, and every American should be proud of the progress and character of work now being accomplished, not only in construction but in all branches of the service.

New ships necessarily require more officers, more marines, and more enlisted men, and the appropriations are quite likely to increase steadily for some years to come. The more ships we have the greater our fixed charges will he and the greater our facilities necessarily must be, in the way of yards and docks, and the ability to make repairs and take proper care of the fleet.

Last year the navy cost a little over a dollar per capita. It cost little compared to what war would cost, and it is the best insurance we have against war. We want such a navy in size, style and "sand" that no other navy will desire an engagement with us. It is our greatest exhibit in favor of peace. We are bound to occupy a prominent position among the great nations of the earth, and while doubtless we shall always be in the lead in every international movement to promote peace, it is much better for us to be at all times so well prepared for war that war will never come. I am sure that the people of the United States will approve of a navy that is well prepared at all times to take care of their defenses and to protect their position in the world. This is all we are trying to accomplish.

The lessons of the war in the east thus far are the same as those of the Spanish war with respect to the relative value and uses of battleships, torpedo boats and destroyers. Weight of metal, heavy guns and hard hit ting, whether at long or short range, still do the most effective work. The day of the battleship is not over, and the sphere of the lighter vessels, while important, is auxiliary only.

All commissioned officers of the navy are citizens of the United States. Of the total enlisted force, numbering 29,321, 80 per cent are native born, 11 per cent. naturalized, giving, therefore, 91 per cent. as citizens of the United States. Recruiting, now carried on extensively in the states of the middle west, brings to the navy an excellent class of young men. No better material can be found anywhere. If a taste for the service can be developed among this class of our citizens to such a degree that the enlisted personnel can be largely recruited from this source, great advantage to the navy will result. To this end it must be the united aim of all who have to do with naval administration to see that the enlisted personnel is dealt with justly.

Secretary of War Taft and Panama President Agree.

The New Republic Agrees to Reduce Her Tariff From 15 Per Cent. Ad Valorem to 10 Per Cent.—Other Terms.

Panama, Dec. 5.—The differences between the United States and Panama, which made necessary the visit of Secretary of War Taft to the isthmus, were settled Sunday by the issuance of an executive order signed by Secretary Taft for President Roosevelt and assented to in a letter by President Amador, of Panama.

The order provides that no trade for the canal zone or the republic of Panama can enter the ports established by the United States at either end of the canal, supplies for the construction of the canal and articles in transit being excepted. This turns the customs receipts of these ports over to the government of Panama.

Panama agrees to reduce her tariff from 15 per cent. ad valorem to 10 per cent. This reduction applies to all goods except wines, liquors, alcohol and opium.

Panama also agrees to reduce her consular fees and port charges to 60 per cent. of the rates at present charged. Absolute free trade is to apply between the canal zone and the republic of Panama. Vessels entering the canal ports are granted free entry to the ports of Colon and Panama and vessels entering the latter ports are extended the same privileges in the canal ports.

Complete jurisdiction is granted the United States in the harbors of Colon and Panama as to sanitation and quarantine regulations.

Panama reduces her rate of postage to two cents and is to furnish all stamps in the republic and in the canal zone. The zone authorities are to purchase stamps from Panama at 40 per cent. of their face value.

The order of Secretary Taft is to be ineffective unless Panama shall put into effect the gold standard, according to the currency agreement of June 20, 1904. It also makes a regulation regarding citizenship rights to Panamaians in the canal zone and provision is also made in the order for maintenance by the United States of important highways, partly in and partly out of the canal zone, and also for the building of a hospital. The order is made effective December 12, 1904.

It is stated, the correspondent adds, that within the last 24 hours the Japanese casualties have totalled 15,000.

Tokio, Dec. 5.—The diary of the fighting around 203 Metre hill, which is published in the Japanese papers, describes the terrible losses involved in the storming of the Russian position from dawn of November 28 till 11 o'clock in the forenoon of that day. A Russian counter attack began at dawn on November 29, and was so furiously pushed that the Japanese were compelled to retire from both sides of the hill into the valley. The attack was renewed the morning of November 30. "When all the Japanese reserves came up" from the southwestern corner; but these assailants only advanced 30 metres by 5 o'clock so stubborn was the resistance, and the Japanese suffered severe losses. AT ZEIGLER, ILL.

Thirty-Eight Sticks of Dynamite Found Near the Pump Station.

Benton, Ill., Dec. 5.—Sheriff Stein spent Sunday in Zeigler investigating the situation. Saturday night was comparatively quiet, only about 15 shots having been fired. Deputy United States Marshal Skaggs created a real sensation in Zeigler at noon by bringing 38 sticks of dynamite he had found between the office building and the pump station. The dynamite was tied in two bundles with a fuse on each that had been lighted, but which, it is supposed, the damp, cold night prevented exploding. The dynamite was placed on the ground just above the principal water main which supplies Zeigler with water. Had it exploded the water main and pump station would have been demolished.

THE CHADWICK CASE.

Woman Says She Will Pay Indebtedness in Full.

The Property of the Bank Borrower, Who Created a Financial Flurry, Placed in the Hands of a Receiver at Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 2.—The Cleveland Leader Thursday night offered its columns to Mrs. Chadwick if she cared to make a statement. Mrs. Chadwick, replying from New York, sent the following message:

"Thanks for telegram offering free use of your paper for statement. I will pay every dollar I owe."

Mrs. Cassie Chadwick, of Cleveland, borrowed a large sum of money from the Citizens national bank, of Oberlin, O., on, it is said, questionable securities. This caused the bank to close its doors.

Oberlin, O., Dec. 2.—The directors and officers of the Citizens' National bank of this city which is now in the hands of government examiners, have decided that there is more safety for the depositors and creditors concerning the affairs of the bank and its prospects in secrecy and hereafter will have less to say for publication. The nature of the security left by Mrs. Chadwick has not been made public.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 3.—Friday Nathan Loeser was appointed receiver for all the property of every kind and description belonging to Mrs. Cassie Chadwick. The receiver was appointed by Referee Harold Remington, who was empowered to act in the absence of United States District Judge Wing. Referee Remington fixed the bond of Mr. Loeser at $10,000. The latter is an attorney of this city. The plaintiffs in their petition declare "that within four months preceding the filing of this petition, while insolvent, Mrs. Chadwick paid to D. Wheaton & Son, of Cleveland, $700, with intent to prefer Wheaton over other creditors. The Wheatons are meat dealers.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 5.—As the result of extended conference between the United States district attorney and bank examiners, who have been looking into the affairs of the failed Citizens' bank, of Oberlin, and their counsel, which lasted until late Saturday night and all of Sunday, President C. T. Beckwith and Cashier Spear, of that bank, were placed under arrest late Sunday night by United States Marshal Chandler, of Cleveland, at their homes in Oberlin. Marshal Chandler personally took charge of the warrants and left for Oberlin at 9 o'clock Sunday night. Several deputies accompanied him.

The arrests of Beckwith and Spear are the first that have been made in the Chadwick case. The Citizens' National bank with which they are connected is creditor to the extent of $240,000 from Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick, whose financial affairs during the past week have been the cause of a great deal of publicity.

The bank is capitalized at but $60,000. Since the disclosure of the bank's dealings with Mrs. Chadwick, the president, cashier and directors have held conferences and meetings frequently. All the time there has been expressed by President Beckwith at least a hope of a reimbursement of the bank's loan to Mrs. Chadwick, but so far as known no remittance has been received. President Beckwith has been in a state bordering on physical collapse for nearly a week and for the past three or four days has been confined to his bed. He has expressed the most regret over the outcome of the bank's dealings with Mrs. Chadwick, but has given no intimation as to why such great sums of money has been loaned from the bank to Mrs. Chadwick.

The warrants on which Beckwith and Spear were arrested charge them with violation of the federal banking laws. Spear was the first man arrested. He was staying at a friend's home because of the illness of his wife. President Beckwith took his arrest quietly. Mrs. Beckwith, who had retired, hearing the noise, came down stairs. When she learned the situation she collapsed and became so ill that a physician was called to attend her. Neither banker was locked up. Marshal Chandler is sleeping with Spear at a hotel and Deputy Clobitz remains at President Beckwith's home during the night.

Nathan Loeser, receiver for Mrs. Chadwick's property, said Sunday night that he would qualify in that office Monday morning and would then file his bond for $10,000. Loeser also said that he would try to have chattel mortgage held by the Elyria bank set aside on the ground that it is a preference and that all creditors should share alike.

The Bank Open.

Oberlin, O., Dec. 3.—The doors of the Citizens' National bank were thrown open Friday morning to the public for the first time since the closing Saturday night. The report of the examiner has been made and is now on its way to Washington.

For New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company.

This New York Central's Fast Mail Engine Has Speed of Ten Electric Locomotive

The most powerful electric locomotive in the world has just been completed for the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad in the shops of the General Electric Company and the American Locomotive Works at Schenectady, N. Y.

This locomotive is one of between thirty and fifty which will be used by the Railroad Company for hauling the through passenger trains within its Electrical Zone from Grand Central Station through the Park Avenue tunnel to Croton on the Main Line, a distance of 34 miles, and to White Plains on the Harlem division, a distance of 24 miles.

This will be the heaviest steam railway passenger service which has ever been handled by electric locomotives. With one of these locomotives trains of ten or more cars will be hauled at express speed of 60 to 70 miles per hour, and the design and method of control are such that two or more locomotives can be coupled together and operated by a single engineer from the leading cab, so that the size of the train that may be under the control of one engineer is practically unlimited so far as the question of motive power.

In general design the locomotive is double ended and symmetrical in construction, so that it can be run in either direction with equal facility.

Mounted on the main frame of the locomotive is the steel cab in three divisions, in which are located the various devices for operating the locomotive. The locomotive is equipped for both straight and automatic air braking, signaling devices, bell, whistle, headlights, air-sanding device, electric air compressor, etc., being as complete in every way with respect to operating devices as a steam locomotive.

TIME ENOUGH FOR A NAP.

Sleeping-Car Porter Thought That "Rip Van Winkle" Could Sleep It Out.

Joseph Jefferson has "in his time played many parts," yet so closely is he identified with "Rip Van Winkle" that the public never lost sight of it when it had the privilege of seeing him. While he was playing in Missouri once he boarded a notoriously slow train for St. Joseph.

He went into the sleeping-car, but not to go to bed, as the train was due at St. Joseph late in the evening. It dawdled along, however, and the Philadelphia Press, and finding that it could hardly arrive before morning, he ordered his berth made up.

As the porter finished his task Mr. Jefferson said: "This is the worst road I ever traveled on. I fancy I'm in for a full night of it."

"Deed, I reckon you is, sah," replied the porter.

"Positively the slowest road! It'll be morning before we are there. Do you think you'll get in before I'm awake?"

"Slow road, sah! Bound to be plumb mo'nin', sah. But one of the passengers, sah, was tellin' me that you's the gen'leman what once went to sleep and stay years; and I reckon, sah, dat if you take one o' dem naps we'll be able to land you mighty close to St. Jo 'fore you wake, sah."

Anatomical Note.

Mrs. Nolan had made some disparaging remarks about the costume of her husband's bosom friend, Mr. Herlihy, and they were promptly resented.

"'His hat is turning green wid age,' is it?" said Mr. Nolan, with fine scorn, 'and the boots is rusty and cracked-lookin' did I hear ye say? Listen now to me, Mary Nolan. If ivery man's hat an' boots covered as warrm a heart as Phelim Herlihy's there'd be more proud wimmin in the worrld!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Just as with Her Father.

"Your daughter's music is improving," said the professor, "but when she runs the scales I have to watch her pretty closely."

"Just like her father," said Mrs. Nuritch. "He made his money in the grocery business."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

HAPPY CHILDHOOD.

Right Food Makes Happy Children Because They Are Healthy.

Sometimes milk does not agree with children or adults. The same thing is true of other articles of food. What agrees with one sometimes does not agree with others.

But food can be so prepared that it will agree with the weakest stomach. As an illustration—anyone, no matter how weak the stomach, can eat, relish and digest a nice hot cup of Postum coffee with a spoonful or two of Grape-Nuts poured in, and such a combination contains nourishment to carry one a number of hours, for almost every particle of it will be digested and taken up by the system and be made use of.

A lady writes from the land of the Magnolia and the mocking bird way down in Alabama and says: "I was led to drink Postum because coffee gave me sour stomach and made me nervous. Again Postum was recommended by two well-known physicians for my children, and I feel especially grateful for the benefit derived.

"Milk does not agree with either child, so to the eldest, aged four and one-half years, I gave Postum with plenty of sweet cream. It agrees with her splendidly, regulating her bowels perfectly although she is of a constipated habit.

"For the youngest, aged two and one-half years, I use one-half Postum and one-half skimmed milk. I have not given any medicine since the children began using Postum, and they enjoy every drop of it.

"A neighbor of mine is giving Postum to her baby lately weaned, with splendid results. The little fellow is thriving famously." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum agrees perfectly with children and supplies adults with the hot, invigorating beverage in place of coffee. Literally thousands of Americans have been helped out of stomach and nervous diseases by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee. Look in pkg. for the little book, "The Road to Wellville."

THE PRESIDENT TO CONGRESS

Roosevelt Sends His Annual Message to Lawmakers.

MANY IMPORTANT SUBJECTS

Sees a Pressing Need for Labor and Trust Legislation.

NO WORD ABOUT TARIFF.

Leaves the Subject for a Special Message Which He Promises at a Later Date.

Shows Good Results from the Work of the Agricultural Department—Outlines Our Relations with Foreign Countries and with the Philippines—Urges Need of Adequate Naval Force as Guarantee of Peace and Asks for Revision of Immigration Laws.

Washington, Dec. 5. — President Roosevelt's annual message to congress makes some 18,000 words. In accordance with established custom considerable space is devoted to a resume of the year in the administrative departments of the government, but much of the message is given up to a discussion of those subjects which are considered of vital interest to the nation, and upon many of which he deems legislation needed. It is this portion of the message which we give below.

To the Senate and House of Representatives: The nation continues to enjoy noteworthy prosperity. Such prosperity is of course primarily due to the high individual average of our citizenship, taken together with our great natural resources; but an important factor therein is the working of our long-continued governmental policies. The people have emphatically approved the general approval of the principles underlying these policies, and their desire that these principles be kept substantially unchanged, although of course applied with progressive spirit to meet changing conditions.

Caution Against Extravagance.

The enlargement of scope of the functions of the national government required by our development as a nation involves, of course, increase of expenses during the period of prosperity through which the country is passing justifies expenditures for permanent improvements far greater than would be wise in hard times. Battleships and forts, public buildings, and improved waterways are investments which should be made when we have the money; but abundant revenues and a large surplus always invite extravagance, and constant care should be taken to guard against unnecessary increase of the ordinary expenses of government. The cost of doing government business should be regulated with the same rigid scrutiny as the cost of doing a private business.

Capital and Labor.

In the vast and complicated mechanism of our modern civilized life the dominant note is the note of industrialism; and the relations of capital and labor, and especially of organized capital and organized labor to each other and to the public at large come second in importance only to the intimate questions of family life. Our peculiar form of government, with its almost complete severance of power between the nation and the several states, has been on the whole far more advantageous to our development than a more strongly centralized government would be; it undoubtedly responsible for much of the difficulty of meeting with adequate legislation the new problems presented by the total change in industrial conditions on this continent during the last half-century. In actual practice it has proved extremely difficult to get adequate legislation among the various states. From the very nature of the case this is especially true of laws affecting the employment of capital in large masses.

With regard to labor the problem is no less important, but it is far more difficult as the states retain the primary control of the police power the circumstances must be of the most extreme which require interference by the federal authorities, whether in the way of safeguarding the rights of labor or in the way of seeing that wrong is not done by unruly persons who shield themselves behind the name of labor. If there is resistance to the federal courts, interference with the mails, in interstate commerce, or molestation of federal property, or if the state authorities in some crisis which they are unable to face call for help then the use of the federal power may interfere; but though such interference may be caused by a condition of things arising out of trouble connected with some question of labor, the interference itself simply takes the form of restoring order without regard to the question which have caused the breach of order—for to inquire into the primary duty and in a time of disorder and violence all other questions sink into abeyance until order has been restored. In the District of Columbia and in the territories the federal law covers the entire field of government; but the labor question is only acute in populous centers of commerce, manufactures or mining. Nevertheless, both in the enactment and in the enforcement of law the federal government within its restricted sphere should set an example to the state governments, especially in a matter so vital as the subject of labor. I believe that under modern industrial conditions it is often necessary, and even where not necessary it is yet often wise, that there should be organization of labor in order better to secure the rights of the individual wage-worker. All encouragement should be given to any such organization, so long as it is conducted with due and decent regard for the rights of others. There are in this country some labor unions which habitually, and other labor unions which have often, been among the most effective agents in working for good citizenship and for uplifting the condition of those whose welfare should be closest to our hearts. But when any labor union seeks improper ends, or seeks to achieve proper ends by improper means, all good citizens and above all they all honorable public servants must oppose the wrongdoing as resolutely as they would oppose the wrongdoing of any great corporation. Of course any violence, brutality or corruption should not for one moment be tolerated. Wage-workers have an entire right to organize and by all peaceful and honorable means to endeavor to persuade their fellows to join with them in organizations. They have a legal right, which, of course, in circumstances may or may not be a moral right, to refuse to work in company with men who decline to join their organizations. They have under no circumstances the right to commit violence upon those, whether capitalists or wage-workers, who refuse to support their organizations, or who side with those with whom they do not agree. No man rule is intolerable in any form.

Employer's Liability Law.

The wage-workers are peculiarly entitled to the protection and the encouragement of the law from the very nature of their occupation railroad men, for instance, are liable to be maimed in doing the legitimate work of their profession, unless the railroad companies are required by law to make ample provision for their safety. The administration has been serious in enforcing the existing law for this purpose. That law should be amended and strengthened. Wherever the national government has power there should be a stringent employer's liability law, which should apply to the government itself where the government is an employer of labor.

In my message to the Fifty-seventh congress, at its second session, I urged the passage of an employer's liability law for the district of Columbia, and I renew that recommendation, and further recommend that the congress appoint a commission to make a comprehensive study of employer's liability with the view of extending the provisions of a great and constitutional law to all employments within the scope of federal power.

Medals of Honor.

The government has recognized heroism upon the water, and bestows medals of honor upon those who by any act of extreme and heroic daring have endangered their lives in saving, or endeavoring to save, lives from the perils of the sea in the waters over which the United States has jurisdiction, or upon an American vessel. This recognition should be extended to cover cases of conspicuous bravery and self-sacrifice in the saving of life in private employments under the jurisdiction of the United States, and particularly in the land commerce of the nation.

Prevention of Railroad Accidents.

The ever-increasing casualty list upon our railroads is a matter of grave public concern, and urgently calls for action by the congress. In the matter of appliances for comfort of railway travel our railroads give at least as good service as those of any other country in the world; and no reason why this service should not also be as safe as human ingenuity can make it. Many of our leading roads have been foremost in the adoption of the best and most needed safeguards for the protection of travelers and employes, yet the list of clearly avoidable accidents continues unduly large. The passage of a law requiring the adoption of a block signal system has been proposed to the congress. I earnestly concur in that recommendation, and would also point out to the congress that in addition to such legislation in the interest of the public safety limiting the hours of labor for railroad employes in train service upon railroads engaged in interstate commerce, providing that only trained and experienced persons be employed in positions of responsibility connected with the operation of trains, and for the proper means to prevent accidents caused by human weakness or misconduct; and there should be drastic punishment for any railroad employe, official or director of man, who is negligence of wrong orders or by disobedience of orders causes disaster. The law of 1901, requiring interstate railroads to make monthly reports of all accidents to passengers and employes on duty, should also be amended so as to empower the government to make a personal investigation, through proper officers, of all accidents involving loss of life which seem to require investigation, with a requirement that the results of such investigation be made public.

The safety appliance law, as amended by the act of March 2, 1903, has proved beneficial in many respects, but it does not meet the just provisions may be properly carried out, the force of inspectors and the amount of appropriation should be largely increased. This service is analogous to the steamboat inspection service, and deals with even more important interests. It has passed the experimental stage and demonstrated its utility, and should receive generous recognition to the end.

Unions of Government Employes.

There is no objection to employes of the government forming or belonging to unions; but the government can neither discriminate for nor against employes because of membership or non-membership in any union. The right of the employe to present his case by petition or in person, either individually or through any representative he may select, is preserved to him by the constitution and laws, and any law which denies this right is in my judgment clearly unconstitutional. Moreover, it is a very grave impropriety for government employes to organize themselves together for the purpose of extorting improperly high salaries from the government. Especially is this true of those within the classified service. The officers, both municipal and rural, are as a whole an excellent body of public servants. They should be amply paid. But their payment must be obtained by arguing their claims fairly and honorably before the congress, and not by banding together for the defeat of those congressmen who refuse to give promises which they cannot in conscience give. The administration has already taken steps to prevent and punish any violation of this principle; it will be wise for the congress to supplement this action by legislation.

Corporations.

When we come to deal with great corporations the need for the government to act directly is far greater than in the case of labor, because great corporations can become such only by engaging in interstate commerce, and interstate commerce is peculiarly the field of the general government. It is an absurdity to expect to eliminate the abuses in great corporations by state action. It is idle to hope to be patient with an argument that such matters should be left to the states, because more than one state pursues the policy of creating an easy field for corporations that are never operated within that state at all, but other states whose laws they ignore. The national government alone can deal adequately with these great corporations. To try to deal with them in an intemperate, destructive or demagogic spirit would, in all probability, mean that nothing whatever would be accomplished, and with absolute certainty that if anything were accomplished it would be of a harmful nature. The American people need to continue to show the very qualities that they have shown—that is, moderation, good sense, the earnest desire to avoid doing any damage, and yet the quiet determination to proceed, step by step, without halt and without hurry, in eliminating or at least in minimizing whatever of mischief or of evil there may be in interstate commerce in the conduct of great corporations. They are succeeding in no spirit of hostility to wealth, either individual or corporate. They are not against the rich man any more than against the poor man. On the contrary, they are friendly alike toward rich man and toward poor man, provided only that each acts in decent and law-abiding fashion toward his fellows. Great corporations are necessary, and only men of great and singular mental power can manage such corporations successfully, and such men must have great rewards. But these corporations should be managed with due regard to the interest of the public as a whole. Where this can be done under present laws it must be done. Where these laws come short others should be enacted to supplement them.

Yet we must never forget the determining factor in every kind of work, of head or hand, must be the man's own good sense, courage and kindliness. More important than any legislation is the gradual growth of a feeling of responsibility and forbearance among capitalists and wage workers alike; a feeling of respect on the part of each man for the rights of others; a feeling of broad community of interest, not merely of capitalists among themselves, and of wage workers among themselves, but of capitalists and wage workers in their relations to each other, and of both in their relations to their fellows who with them make up the body politic. There are many employers in this country, many labor leaders, who realize this.

Bureau of Corporations.

The bureau of corporations has made careful preliminary investigation of many important corporations. It will make a special report on the beef industry.

The policy of the bureau is to accomplish the purposes of its creation by cooperation, not antagonism; by making constructive legislation, not destructive prosecution, the immediate object of its inquiries; by securing complete publicity in fact and not merely by refusal to issue incomplete and hence necessarily inaccurate reports. Its policy being thus one of open inquiry into, and not attack upon, business, the bureau has been able to gain not only the confidence, but, better still, the cooperation of men engaged in legitimate business.

The bureau offers to the congress the means of getting at the cost of production of our various great staples of commerce. In the present investigation of the oil industry it will make a special report on the facts, and Plenty of black frosts but no rain.

An effort is on foot in New York to organize the employers of labors to combat labor unions.

The weather this fall has demonstrated that a Kentuckian even cannot do entirely without water.

When you want a plearant purgative try Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They are easy to take and produce no nausea, griping or other disagreeable effect. For sale by all Druggists.

Had the country in which the Japs and Russians are fighting been as hard pressed for water as Kentucky has been for the last few months it would have been necessary to disband the armies.

The court of Appeals has decided that Bennett, Republican, was elected to congress in the ninth district instead of Kehoe, Democrat. This decision cannot be called partisan, although the decision is made by a Democratic court.

The Democratic primary election for the nomination of candidates for county offices in Carroll county, came off yesterday. In some of the races considerable interest was being taking, notably that of county Judge. Judge Downs being up for a renomination.

In the last 23 years there have been 2,811 hangings on legal executions in the United States, the largest number for any one year being in 1902, when the number reached 144. The greatest number of murders and homecides in that time was in 1896, the record for which year shows 10,652.

President Hawkins, of Burley Tobacco Growers Association, has issued another statement from which it is inferred that sufficient tobacco has been secured to give the association control of the crop, and the capitalists of the east will advance the necessary money to handle it.

A decision has been made that notices of raffles or lotteries for the benefit of a church or society violate the law against using the mails to promote a lottery scheme or game of chance and publishers are liable to the penalty. This forbids newspapers making notices, either as paid matter or as news, and newspapers are being notified of the decision.

The Georgetown News says Judge Cantrill contemplates a trip to Hot Springs this winter where he will remain some time for the benefit of his health. Judge Cantrill was not well enough to hold court at Paris last week and Gov. Beckham appointed Hon. John D. Carroll, of Henry county to hold the term of court in Judge Cantrill's stead.

A strong pressure is being brought to bear on Gov. Beckham to call a special session of the General Assembly for the purpose of selecting a site for the new capitol building other than that occupied by the old building, but the Governor is not inclined to call the legislature. Some want to erect the new state house on some of the hill tops about Frankfort.

There has been a great change. The irishmen of other years have found other and more congenial occupations. Those of the second generation have been educated for other pursuits and are occupying good positions in all trades and in many professions. In fact, of all the millions which have made America their home, I think the Irish, as a rule, have become more nearly an integral part of the great Republic than those from any other nation.—Commercial Tribune.

The Kansas City Journal says that the Cherokee Indians are becoming cocaine fiends. The Journal says: "A little investigation shows that druggists are disposing of a great deal of this drug, but what is more startling still, is that there are a lot of persons who have been going into the country and selling cocaine to the Indians. It is a new vice for Indians, but it is wonderful how it is taking hold on them. It is said that the drug is being bootlegged as it has been the custom to bring in liquor. The authorities will start an investigation."

Ladies of Lexington have undertaken to raise funds to restore the head to the statue of Henry Clay in the cemetery in that city. The legislature should make sufficient appropriation to restore the statue and keep the monument in good repair. The monument is a matter of pride to all the people, and none would object to an appropriation.

Some of those interested, in good roads in Rabbit Hash precinct have agreed to hauled a certain amount of stone and gravel for the roads every year, for several years, while others have donated liberally of their money, and already the good effects are manifested in the way of improvement in the public roads at many points where they have been very bad. The example set in Rabbit Hash is one worthy of imitation in other parts of the county.

The Kentucky Exposition Commission decided to turn over all of the available staple Kentucky exhibits at the World's Fair to the Kentucky Geological Survey at Lexington, to be held there until the new capitol is completed, when they will be installed there as the nucleus of a permanent exhibit. The exhibit is valued at about $20,000. The Kentucky Building was sold for $325, the wrecking company agreeing to pay for the proper restoration of the grounds according to the rules of the exposition company. The beautiful $1,000 piano donated by a local piano firm will be placed in the Kentucky mansion for the use of the Governors of Kentucky. The commissions' report showed that of the fund allowed for the expenses of the commissioners about $1,000 will be returned to the treasury.

Has the number of suicides in the United States increased in late years? The Kansas City Journal says it has, and supports its contention with the following statistics: "In twelve years there have been over 77,000 suicides recorded in the United States, the number increasing annually from about 2,500 in 1891 to 8,600 in 1903. There were 50 per cent more suicides in Chicago in 1903 than in 1902. In Philadelpha, for 1902, the official records showed a ratio of fifteen suicides per 100,000 of population. The president of a life insurance company has stated that, while during fifty years the increase in suicides has averaged thirty to each 1,000,000 persons, the increase of suicides among insured lives has been much greater."

"California is the only country in the world where the pumpkins grow so thick upon the ground that you can walk across a twenty-acre pumpkin "patch" without stepping upon the ground. In fact there are "some pumpkin patches" here where there is not room enough upon the soil for all of the pumpkins to reside and they had to get off on the adjoining lot. Acres and acres and acres of pumpkins so thick you can't stack 'em up and you have to haul them off, beginning at one side and working gradually into the "patch." Pumpkins so large that they have to be loaded on a wagon with a derrick and cut into with a cross-cut saw. Say this is a pumpkin country and don't you forget it. Big pumpkins and little pumpkins and all sorts of pumpkins, until the Eastern gentleman who first arrives in California will not believe that which his eyes behold. And yet these pumpkins have never seen it rain. They have never had a single shower. If it had rained on them they would be growing yet."

The above is taken from the Santa Ana (California) Dispatch published by J. H. Westover, formerly of Williamstown, Grant county, and is about the best pumpkin story out. But what the Recorder started out to say is that the pumpkin being grown so successfully without rain, perhaps, Boone county farmers would better plant nothing but pumpkins next year.

The President's message is on one of the inside pages. It is very lengthy and one of his characteristic documents. The tariff question is ignored entirely by the message.

The Court of Appeals handed down an opinion in the Cabel Powers case, yesterday, reversing the judgment of the Scott county Circuit Court and granting Powers a new trial.

Copies of the paper advertised for came in from every direction, far and near. Thanks, friends.

Two car loads of cattle sold at the Bourbon stock yards in Louisville last week at the best price in ten years, $6.10 per hundred lbs. These cattle were bought in Louisville last March by W. D. Calloway, of Henry county, and have been corn fed ever since. When he bought them they averaged a fraction over 1,000 pounds, and during the high priced times of 1903 he was offered $6.50 per 100 pounds for them.

Although tobacco growing in Mexico does not rank in importance with soms of its other agricultural pursuits, it is, none the less, a very considerable industry. The total annual production amounts to 1,000,000 arrarrobas, or some 52,400,000 pounds raised in nine districts. The only tobacco that is in demand for export purposes is that of San Andres Tuxtla, of which about 80 per cent is shipped to Antwerp, Hamburg and Bremen, but, as the land on which the crop is cultivated is limited, the production can not be increased to any material extent.

The attendance at Sunday schools is on the increase now.

The water wagons went on duty early Monday morning.

It will take considerable rain to revive the springs and wells.

The December term of the Boone circuit court will convene next Monday.

Remember the big sale of the personal estate at Richwood on the 10th inst.

Some say that in its low stage the Ohio river is but little more than a sewer.

The water wagons about Burlington got pretty busy, the latter part of last week.

This has been a hard season on brick buildings. They crack worse in dry weather than they do in wet.

Bert Rouse has commenced building his new residence. It will be located nearer to the pike than the old one was.

The hollows are full of traps and snares, and the rabbit that is not caught in the next few months will have to be a strategist indeed.

Geo. Roseberry made his appearance, last Saturday, in Burlington with his bone and sausage wagon. George is a pretty good salesman.

Much of the wheat that was sowed this fall has not come up, and some say that is a pretty good indication of a good crop next year.

"A Silent Slave" will be played at Hebron next Saturday night by the same troop that appeared there a few weeks since. It is a good show.

A great many hogs found their way into the scalding box last week. The scarcity of corn and water hurried up that class of work.

Some who have killed their hogs report fine yields of lard, in some instances as high as 9 gallons to the hog, which is doing pretty well for a short corn crop.

They do say if you will drink river water that your flesh will increase. This report comes from Bellevue where they are trying the virtue of Ohio river product.

Many of the old wells that had been covered securely and declared out of business have been opened up in the last few days and called upon to assist in supplying water.

Sufferers from sciatica should not hesitate to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm. The prompt relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. For sale by all Druggists.

Farmers should prepare ponds and cisterns for storing water, as the last few years have demonstrated that they can no longer depend on springs and wells to supply them with water.

There is talk of organizing of local talent a minstrel troop that will furnish fun for this and surrounding neighborhoods all winter. Dr. Crisler will finance and manage the troop.

The rain last Friday night and Saturday stopped some of the farmers down on Woolper creek from hauling water with which to sprinkle their fodder so they could shuck their corn.

Notice is hereby given that I or one of my deputies will be at the school house in Big Bone church school district, on Saturday, Dec. 17th, to collect the school tax now due. B. B. Allphin, S. B. C.

Should the weather turn cold enough to freeze the river before there is a coal rise, the fuel question would be much more serious than at present. You can't imagine the inconvenience of both a water and a fuel famine.

Rev. Selby, assisted by Evangelist Johnson, is engaged in a very interesting protracted meeting at the Petersburg Methodist church, and Rev. Selby will preach at the East Bend church next Saturday night and Sunday morning only.

Last Friday Kirb Tanner closed a contract for filling a large number of cisterns with water on conditions it did not rain, and before noon on Saturday it rained just enough to encourage the parties of the second part to claim a cancellation of their contracts.

John T. Craven, of Hopeful neighborhood, has added much to the appearance of his always neat residence by a dress of white paint with appropriate trimmings. He sent to Philadelphia for metal shingles with which he reroofed the building. The roof he painted also.

The popularity of the rural mail route out from Burlington is growing every day. It does not seem to be generally understood that any person though not a box owner can deliver mail matter directly to the carrier who will return it to the office along with his collection from the boxes.

Be Quick.

Not a minute should be lost when a child shows symptoms of croup. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, will prevent the attack. It never fails, and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all Druggists.

Real estate agent W. E. Vest, made two good sales, last week. He sold to B. L. Rich the Wallace Garrison farm of 354 acres near Big Bone church, for $19,500, and the H. O. Rouse farm of 105 acres in Gunpowder neighborhood, to Mike Kraly for $7,300. Mr. Garrison will move to Covington; and Mr. Rouse, to Georgia.

C. W. Riley and his son, Edgar, of Bullittsville, had a joint birthday celebration last Saturday. It was Mr. Riley's fifty-sixth and his son's twenty-first anniversay. A bountiful feast was spread at the noon hour, and was enjoyed by a large number of friends, among whom were B. B. Allphin and wife and Mrs. L. H. Crisler, of Burlington.

A Frightened Horse.

Running like mad down the street dumping the occupants, or a hundred other accidents, are every day occurrences. It behooves everybody to have a reliable Salve handy and there's none as good as Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Burns, Cuts, Sores, Eczema and Piles, disappear quickly under its soothing effect. 25c, at all Druggists.

O. P. Tanner felled a large beech tree by the road side near his residence a mile out on the Burlington pike, one day last week. It was a stately old sentinel of over a century's duty, and had furnished a cool spot where hundreds of men and beasts had stopped to rest and refresh themselves from the fierce summer attacks of Old Sol. Had Owen's intentions been known a strong protest would have been presented against the destruction of the old landmark.

The gentleman who brought a clock to town for repairs and placed it in a certain person's hands, was informed of two in the town who repaired clocks, and he, through business methods, asked what eachone charged for cleaning a clock, and was told one charged 50 cents, the other, as I have been informed, charged $1. Let us remember there is a better way to advertise business than to abuse an other, and especially without a cause.

J. E. Hall.

In its circuit court proceedings the Warsaw Independent of last week says: "The Standard Oil Company was indicted four times. These indictments were for peddling without a license. On previous indictment the Standard Oil Company took an appeal to the Court of Appeals who decided they were not peddlers. Commonwealth's Attorney Frank Greene states that there has been a recent decision saying they are peddlers and had the present indictments returned. On Thursday W. I. Furnish, of Sanders, who drives the oil wagon, took out a peddler's license in the county court."

The largest sale in the north end of the county in a long time was that of Samuel Sederberg, last Wednesday. A very large crowd was in attendance and the bidding was spirited all day. Chas. Garnett, of Limaburg, was the auctioneer and worked hard to complete the sale but was unable to do so. At noon a lunch was served and everybody partook freely. Corn in the crib brought 56 cents a bushel; fodder, about 11½ cents a shock; cows, from $12 50 to $31; horses, good prices; potatoes, 57 cents, hay $9 or $10 per ton. A set of wagon harness for which Mr. Sederberg paid $35 three years ago sold for $37, and some other things went about the same way.

Mrs. Elizabeth Clore.

Miss Elizabeth Love was born in Burlington, Boone County, Kentucky, November 7, 1824. Her spirit went home to God, Who gave it, at 4 o'clock, November 27th, 1904. She died of a complication of diseases. She married Dr. Chamblin, June 25th, 1844. After the death of Dr. Chamblin she married Simeon Clore, January 4th, 1871. He died about three years ago. Since then she has made her home with her niece, Mrs. S. W. Carpenter. Although she never had any children of her own, she took a mother's place to and raised her nieces and nephews. One of them, Mrs. Howard Demaree, she cared for from infancy. She united with the Baptist church when 22 years of age. Her home was always open to her ministers and friends, who received a cordial welcome at all times. Among the hills of romantic old Kentucky, she spent her childhood and maidenhood, imbibing the true spirit of hospitality for which she was noted. She was tender and faithful with a soul of high and lofty attributes, untiring in her devotions to the comfort and pleasure of her friends, a good and true woman in all the walks of life, endowed by nature with lovable qualities. She trusted her Savior with implicit faith, realizing that He doeth all things well. She sleeps not in the night of darkness, for her rest is in the hallowed light of perfect truth in Heaven.

The deepest and most sincere sympathy of all who knew her is extended to the bereaved family.

Funeral services were at the home of Mrs. Samuel Carpenter, on Monday morning, conducted by Rev. W. F. Gibson. Music was rendered by the Presbyterian choir. The body was laid to rest at Maple Ridge.

Those from a distance present at the funeral were, Captain Milton Campbell, B. W. Campbell, of Cincinnati, Ohio, nephews of Mrs. Clore; Mrs. J. P. York, Dana, Indiana; Mrs. James Allen, William Allen and wife, Alamo, Ind.; Mrs. J. N. Talbott, Mrs. Johnson Clore, Mrs. John Garr and Mr. Elijah Clore, Crawfordsville, Indiana.

Mollie G. Clore.

Mrs. Clore has a large circle of relatives and acquaintances in this county, who will be pained to hear of her demise. She was a citizen of Burlington for many years, where she was noted for her many good traits of character and everybody was her friend. She died at Waveland, Indiana, the home of Mrs. S. W. Carpenter.

Hafer-Hossman.

Thanksgiving day, '04, the church at Hebron was the scene of a very pretty wedding, the contracting parties being Mr. Clyde Hafer and Miss Clara Hossman, two of the most popular young people of the neighborhood. At high noon the lovely bride, in a gown of white silk with her matron of honor, Mrs. Katherine Hafer, and preceded by Miss Lorena Hafer and Miss Clara Buckingham, and the handsome groom with his brother, Dr. L. C. Hafer, preceded by Messrs. Will Getker and Walter Hafer, entered the church to the strains of Mendellsohn's wedding march, beautifully rendered by Mrs. Alice Crigler. The altar was decorated with foliage plants and blooming chrysanthemums, and beneath a large bell of white flowers and ferns, the bridal party were met by the Rev. S. E. Slater, who, in a very solemn and impressive manner, united them in holy matrimony. From the church they repaired to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hossman, where an elegant dinner was served to about 40 relatives and friends. The next day they were tendered a reception at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Hafer. They received many handsome and useful presents, and start in life together with the best wishes of the entire community for a long, prosperous and happy married life.

THE BURDEN FOR SOULS

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Dec. 4, 1904

Text:—"Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved. I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart. For I could wish that myself were accused from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh."—Rom. 9:1; 8:2, 3.

THE Gospel which Christ has given to the world is intensive and extensive. Intensive to the point of moving the Almighty God to give His best treasure to earth, and leading the Son of God to give His life freely for the sin of the world. Extensive in that the whole world was included in God's plan of salvation and in that the sacrifice which Christ made wrought redemption for all the world. The terms in which Jesus is referred to all through the Bible from the time when God promised Abraham that in him should all the nations of the earth be blessed until John came crying: "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world," are those which reach out beyond Israel into all the world. This intensiveness and extensiveness is the very heart of the Gospel. It is the conception of the Gospel which every Christian should have, and its spirit must pervade the heart and life, if one is to do effectual and faithful service for the Master. It is the man with the large vision that aims the highest and goes the farthest. The king who was looking for an administrator for his kingdom examined each aspirant for the place and asked what were his qualifications. Each had much to say of himself and what the kingdom was to be through his administration. At last there came one with modest, quiet manner, but with a far, deep light kindling in the eye. His vision was not of self, but of the kingdom, his qualifications were not those of self-dependence and the assurance of conceit, but rather of earnest, faithful devotion to the vision of the high destiny of the kingdom. "Thou art the man for whom I have been looking!" exclaimed the king. "Into thy hands shall be committed this trust."

JOSEPH in Egypt was prepared for his large service by his vision of the far-reaching commission and destiny of Egypt. Daniel in Babylon was fitted for the control of the kingdom by the revelation of the place that kingdom held in the plans of the eternal God. Jesus was prepared to become the world's Saviour by the realization of God's purposes in Him for all the world. And the Christian is equipped and prepared for service by this same vision, this same realization of the intensiveness and extensiveness of the glorious Gospel. This condition and attitude of heart characterize the life and writings of Paul. His ministry everywhere, whether from the prison cell at Rome or at Athens, or Corinth or Ephesus where he preached to the multitudes, throbbed and pulsated with the intensity of the Gospel's power to save to the uttermost, and its extensiveness to reach out and enfold all the needy world. It was from such a heart, a heart filled with a realization of the power and possibilities of the Gospel, that there burst the cry: "My heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved. I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart. For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh." A heart burdened for souls. So burdened that he would gladly have given his life and his hope if thereby the lost sonls of his brethren might be saved. It was the echo of the cry of Moses in the wilderness, as he asked God to blot him out of His book if His mercy could not be extended towards a sinning people.

THIS burden for souls should rest upon the heart of every Christian. It is not an experience which should be confined to ministers and evangelists, and, a few of the more spiritual church members, but is one which should be manifested in every heart that has felt the cleansing power of Jesus' blood and the quickening power of His life. The burden for souls should characterize the Gospel, rather than be the unusual and infrequent expression of that Gospel. But such burden can come only as the soul catches a vision of the lost world, hopeless and helpless in its sin, and forever separated from God, and a vision of the Christ, and the world-wide salvation which He is able to offer through the atonement which He made for sin. This two-fold vision it is the privilege of every Christian to have, and without it he may not know the intensiveness and extensiveness of the blessed Gospel. But let him have these two visions, let him awaken to the intensity of the life and sacrifice of Christ and the extent of His mission and such a burden for souls will roll in upon his heart as will send him forth a soul winner. The life-saving crew, stationed upon the rock-bound coast by the government, would never be moved to push out into the raging deep after the perishing souls on the sinking ship if even the lookout they turned their eyes towards loved ones and life's cherished hopes in the cottage resting safely under the lee of the rock-ribbed shore, instead of searching the expanse of waters in the other direction for the ship in need, for the men going down to death in the black waters. They need the vision of the lost ship and the perishing souls to make them forget everything else and send them out upon their errand of mercy.

AND the Christian needs the vision of a world perishing in its sin to be aroused to the work of rescue. He needs to turn his eyes from the direction of the shore where all is safe and secure, and look out upon the engulfing waters of sin, he needs to see the shipwrecked souls tossing helplessly about and going down to death; he needs to behold the lowering clouds of God's judgments upon sin, to feel the fierce blasts of His wrath against all ungodliness. Ah, how complacently we view life, the world and the men and women in the world! We have the narrow, limited human vision of things. We bind the eye and steel the heart against the true vision which God gives us in His Word. God says: "A world dead in trespasses and sins." We say: "A world so alive, and progressive, and good." God says: "There is none that doeth good, no not one." "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." We say: "What an excellent record man has written. How proud God ought to be of him." We view human life with complacency and satisfaction. We look into the faces of acquaintances, friends, loved ones, and smile and talk, and forget that within, oh, too often! there is the perishing soul. We live for time; we wear the eyeglasses which the present fits to our eyes and through which we see the world in roseate hues; we forget that it is not all of life to live or death to die. We forget and are indifferent while the whole world is a vast graveyard, with perishing, lost souls masquerading in the bright, attractive covering of the human life. Oh, for the vision that will help us to see as God sees: A lost world instead of the attractive world in which so much of our thought and desire and ambition are centered! A sin-ruined race, in spite of all the polish and veneer which man can cunningly devise. But we need a second vision. A vision not only of the world's need, but of the world's Saviour. What joy to the life saver when he sees the sinking man and is able to put forth the strong arm and drag him in safety from the hungry death-waters. What joy, what unspeakable joy, comes to the Christian whom God has placed as a life saver in the world, as he sees the perishing soul and is able to bring him safe to the rock Christ Jesus. There is never a case too hard for Jesus. Wait for the vision of the Christ who is mighty to save.

AND this is the fruition of the burden which comes with the double vision of the world's need, and the world's Saviour: First, the Christly love which seeks. Second, the Christly love which tells. Third, the Christly love which wants to die. Some burdens crush, while others become stepping stones to newer and better things. Paul's burden gave birth in his heart to a larger love, a deeper purpose, and fuller consecration. The burden for souls never leaves the heart bruised and discouraged, nay, rather with it comes the inflowing stream of Christ's presence. With the burden for souls there comes a sense of the love which could bring the Son of God all the way from Glory to this sin-cursed earth seeking lost man, which could make Him tell the blessed Gospel story with His matchless life, and which could bring Him gladly to the cross and the grave. We talk of the love of Christ. We say that we want it. But we never can know that love until the burden for souls fills our hearts with the yearning which will send us out into the highways and the hedges seeking the lost. We shall never know that love fully until the burden for souls fills our hearts with the message and unlocks the lips that it may be given forth. Nay, more, we can never know that love in all its blessed fullness until the burden for souls makes us cry out to our God in our yearning, and long to die if need be that souls may be saved. Have you the love that seeks? Have you the love that tells the glad message of salvation everywhere? Have you the love that would die in order that souls may be saved?

THE burden for souls rested so heavily upon Paul's heart that he had reached the superlative degree of Christly love. He felt as though he would gladly surrender his hope in Christ if thereby his brethren might be saved. Death that there may be life. It is the order established by God. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground, it abideth alone, but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit." This was the expression of Christ's love for the world. A dying that there might be life, a sacrifice that there might be a cleansing from sin. It is the law which must govern the Christian life if it is to be fruitful for the Master. The burden for souls must lead down into the grave of a dead self. We must be willing, yea anxious, to die in order that out of the grave of a dead self may spring the fruitful branch. Have you loved so as to go out and seek? Have you loved and then eagerly and gladly told the story? You must love yet more. The burden for souls must rest upon you so heavily that you will be willing to have self die with all its desires and ambitions and have only God's perfect will ruling in the life. Such consecration of self will bring new power into the life, and result in blessed fruitage of souls for the Master. God grant that the vision of the world lost in sin, and of the Christ, the Saviour of the world, may bring its burden for souls that shall have its fruition in Christlike love, which is eager to seek, bold to tell and willing to die, that souls may be saved.

PROTECTED MONOPOLY: "WHO SAID TARIFF REVISION?"

[By McCutcheon, in Chicago Daily Tribune.]

THE TARIFF PROBLEM FIRST

Serious Situation Which Republicans Should at Once Set About Relieving.

The president has not yet decided whether he will call an extra session of congress to revise the tariff. There is time enough for him to consider the question in all its aspects, and no one is disposed to crowd him. But we think, says the independent Indianapolis News, he should understand that he and his party cannot secure any tariff reform at all worth while without fighting for it. The thing cannot be done by consent. Therefore, the real question is how far he is willing to go in his effort to secure this great and needed reform. It is unfortunate that the leaders of the republican party have, of late years, had so little education on this important subject. They have assumed that things were all right, that the Dingley law was perfect, that the maintenance of the protective principle was the only thing to be thought of, and so they have "stood pat" and have shut their ears to the complaints of the people and refused to look into the question at all. This ignorance will prove a serious obstacle in the way of reform. And the time for education is short.

Nevertheless, even the dullest defender of the status quo must realize that the situation in New England is serious. The election of a democratic governor in Massachusetts in the face of a plurality of 100,000 for Mr. Roosevelt surely means something. Mr. Douglas made his campaign wholly on the tariff question. He urged in all his speeches the necessity for freer trade with Canada, and for a reduction of tariff duties. And republican Massachusetts answered his appeal. What is true of that state is true of other states along the Canadian border. The issue is, therefore, before the country. And really it is not hard to find many duties that ought to be greatly lowered, thus relieving the people of tax burdens, widening markets and increasing the revenue. We do not see how anyone can defend the present duties on steel rails and other steel products. We know that the trust is now getting practically the whole duty imposed on its products. For several years rails have been selling at the arbitrarily fixed price of $28 a ton, while they have been sold abroad at $19 and $20 a ton. Schwab has told us that they can be made for $12. This is cheaper than they can be made abroad. Thus the labor cost is less in this country than it is in Europe, and yet we maintain a duty of $7.84 a ton to cover the difference in labor cost, when, as a matter of fact, the difference is in our favor.

Here surely is one duty that ought to come off. There are many others that might be removed or reduced to the benefit of the people and of our industries. We need a wider command of raw materials. Lighter taxes on iron ore, much of which is owned by the steel trust; pig-iron, hides, cutlery, clothing, beef and cattle and wool would greatly relieve the people. The tariff, too, could be greatly simplified if there is any statesmanship competent to undertake the task. The present law, and this has been true of all our modern tariff laws, is so complex as to make its honest administration a matter of the greatest difficulty. The people expect reform. And if the president will consult them as well as the politicians, he will get much light on the question. Let him remember that they are not directly represented at Washington, and that the protected industries are very ably represented, both in congress and outside of it. The closer Mr. Roosevelt gets into touch with the people the more thoroughly will he be convinced that, in spite of the fact that he was elected by a great majority, they are not satisfied with the present tariff law. A wise and somewhat thorough reform will greatly strengthen the president and his party with the people.

CURRENT POLITICAL ITEMS.

—Now look out for the passage of the late Mark Hanna's pet ship subsidy bill.—Atlanta Constitution.

—If Mr. Roosevelt will enforce the civil service rules already made, we can do very well without the new ones.—St. Louis Republic.

—The Standard Oil company appears to have obtained the desired results by permitting the other trusts to furnish the money.—Rochester Herald.

—It is formally announced that the president will "seek advice of republican leaders." He will have much less difficulty in getting advice than he will in following it.—Washington Post (Ind.).

—The tariff revision discussion is now going on in Washington. But come to think of it, it has been going on there and elsewhere for some years, and without getting much farther, either.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

—There are indications at present that there will not be enough offices, even under the most satisfactory conditions of patronage, for all faithful republicans. Maybe this is a reason for wishing to retain the Philippines.—St. Louis Republic.

—"I made the fight solely on the proposition that we should have reciprocity, and that the trusts, which sell their products abroad cheaper than we can buy them here, should not be permitted to enjoy protection. I gave them practical examples of the working of the tariff."—Gov.-Elect W. L. Douglas, of Massachusetts.

—First at hand in this matter is the tariff question. There is no reason why the president should not open up this subject to congress and to the people in his message at the coming session, though it is not to be expected that any measure will be framed and presented for consideration before this congress expires.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce (Ind.).

Democracy Not Dead.

With democratic governors in Montana, Colorado, Massachusetts, Minnesota and with a compact and dauntless democratic organization in nearly every state in the union, we beg to remind our republican friends that the democracy will have considerable to do with the shaping of the destinies of the nation in the future as in the past, and that there is no immediate likelihood of the party of Jefferson and Jackson permitting the party of trusts, the combines and the carpet-baggers to run the affairs of the United States for all time.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

—There is no use for democrats to feel blue and disheartened. The democratic party is not dead. If it were the republic would not last long. It is the democratic party that holds in check republicanism and populism, and all the forces which work against democratic institutions. But for this restraining force the republic would soon become a monarchy, or something worse.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

POSTAL MATTERS.

Annual Report of Assistant Postmaster General.

At Close of the Year There Were 71,131 Offices, 265 First, 1,204 Second, 3,896 Third and 65,766 Fourth Class.

Washington, Dec. 3.—Extension of the rural free delivery service has resulted in an increase of 1,125 in the number of post offices discontinued during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1904, according to the annual report of J. L. Bristow, fourth assistant postmaster general, made public Friday. During the year there were 2,459 post offices established and 5,587 discontinued. There was a decrease of 158 in the number of offices established. The principal cause of the increase in discontinuances has been the extension of the rural free delivery service. The total number of discontinuances was 3,750 post offices, with a saving in salaries of postmasters aggregating $171,121. At the close of the fiscal year there were 71,131 post offices in the United States—265 first class, 1,204 second class, 3,896 third class and 65,766 fourth class.

Operation of rural mail delivery and the extension by private interests of rural telephone service has created a demand from patrons of rural routes for the delivery of small packages of merchandise on an order to local merchants by postal card, telephone or otherwise. The value of such packages is small and the present rate of one cent per ounce, the report says, is practically prohibitive. Mr. Bristow recommends that congress fix a rate of 3 cents per pound or any fractional part thereof on packages not exceeding five pounds, mailed at the distributing post office of any rural free delivery route. If this special rate were established, Mr. Bristow says, it would be a great convenience to patrons and become a source of revenue to the department.

It is estimated that $500,000 will be needed by the department to continue the establishment of rural routes as fast as they are favorably reported and approved for the remainder of the current fiscal year. It is likely that 1,200 routes will be reported within the next two months and with this rate the appropriation available will be exhausted about January 15, 1905. An appropriation of $3,000,000 for the establishment of new routes will be asked by the department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906.

Of the needs for the service, Mr. Bristow says: "There are now in operation 28,073 routes. It is estimated that approximately 2,000 additional routes can be established out of the appropriation now available, making 30,073, which will be in operation or ordered established by January 15, 1905. To maintain service on these routes during the fiscal year from July 1, 1905, to June 30, 1906, will require $21,360,000.

Frazier, accompanied by his wife, his staff and a party of Tennesseeans, arrived here Friday to participate in the launching of the United States armored cruiser Tennessee from Cramps shipyard at 11 o'clock Saturday morning. EVERY WALK IN LIFE.

A. A. Boyce, a farmer, living three and a half miles from Trenton, Mo., says: "A severe cold settled in my kidneys and developed so quickly that I was obliged to lay off work on account of the aching in my back and sides. For a time I was unable to walk at all, and every makeshift I tried and all the medicine I took had not the slightest effect. My back continued to grow weaker until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and I must say I was more than surprised and gratified to notice the back ache disappearing gradually until it finally stopped."

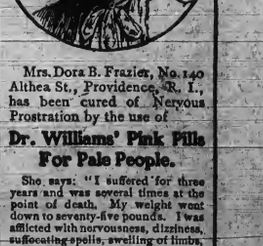
AN INVITING PROSPECT.

Will Canada in the next quarter of a century take the place of the United States as the great wheat exporting section of the western hemisphere? Everything points that way. In the opinion of experts the United States has reached high water mark as a wheat exporting country. The increasing population over there has reached the point when home consumption is becoming annually greater in proportion than the increase in wheat production. As a matter of fact wheat production is decreasing over there as the land becomes more valuable and by reason of the demand for other forms of produce for home consumption. It is said that the wheat crop this year is not more than 70 per cent. of the crop of 1901 and much below the crops of 1902 and 1903. It is estimated that this year the United States surplus for export will not be over 100,000,000, which is less than any year since 1878 with two exceptions. Not only is this the case, but a considerable quantity of the best Canadian wheat is being imported into Minnesota and also Chicago.

All this tends to keep the price of wheat near the dollar mark, and "dollar wheat" is the loadstone that will attract farmers to the Canadian Northwest, where land is cheap and can be farmed on a wholesale basis, particulars of which may be had from any agent of the Canadian Government. The reduction of American exports will have the double influence of increasing Canadian production and keeping up the price. It constitutes a roseate prospect for this country, and needs no exercise of optimistic enthusiasm to foresee the near expansion of the Dominion into the actual position of the "granary of the empire."

FLOATING FUNNYISMS.



"William, wake up!" she whispered. "I'm sure I heard a burglar downstairs. You'd better go down and see." "My goodness, woman!" he replied, sleepily, "what a low opinion you must have of me. I'm not in the habit of hobnobbing with burglars."

"What is love?" asked the sweet girl, who was looking for a chance to leap. "Love," replied the old bachelor, "is a kind of insanity that makes a man call a 200-pound female his little turtle dove."

"My memory annoys me greatly," remarked the newly-elected candidate. "Oh, John! Is it failing?" asked his life. "No, indeed. That's just the trouble. I can't help remembering all my ante-election promises."

STATE ODDS AND ENDS

ATTACKED HER CHILD.

With a Stool the [illegible] Fought a Wild Cat.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., Dec. 3.—Mrs. Laura Burkhart had a terrible battle with a wild cat in the upper part of Owsley county. Mrs. Burkhart and her three-year-old daughter were at a gap milking when the wild cat appeared. The child was sitting on the ground and the cat leaped for it. It sprang too high and the child's screams attracted the mother, who turned in time to see the cat crouching for a second spring. The mother attacked it with a milk stool, and, grabbing the child under her arm, fought the beast bravely.

Mrs. Burkhart is an athletic woman, and when she rained blow upon blow upon the cat's head it left her and attacked the cow, which ran into the woods. The cat then drank the milk in the pail, and the woman rushed to the house. Men hunted for the cat, but it had disappeared.

The dry weather, it is thought, rendered the cat ravenous from thirst. The woman's clothes were torn to shreds, but neither she nor the child was badly hurt.

GREYHOUND WORTH $10,000

Princess Maud, Who Has Run Mile in Less Than Two Minutes, Is Fastest in the World.

A $10,000 dog. Such is Princess Maud, the fleetest dog in the world, owned by Capt. Jay Thomas Vickery, who has a ranch in Oklahoma, where he keeps a string of dogs and [illegible] the inside of two minutes. Princess Maud bears the proud distinction of having run a mile in one minute and forty-nine seconds, which is the world's record.

Capt. Vickery is a greyhound fancier and expert. He owns the finest greyhounds in this country. On a large ranch in Oklahoma he trains his runners in contests with the swiftest jack rabbit of the plains.

Princess Maud is a modest canine, sticking close to the heels of her master as he walks through the streets. Except for the fact that she is trim and sleek looking she does not give the slightest idea of her value, which is placed by Capt. Vickery at $10,000. She is of a dark fawn color, with thin body and attenuated legs, and when standing assumes the slightly tilted forward position indicative of the runner.

Capt. Vickery is now in Washington, and as he walks from place to place with Princess Maud in his wake the dog attracts a great deal of attention. She has captivated the hearts of all dog lovers, and many of her admirers have expressed a desire that they might see her run.

ONLY THREE PROPOSED.

Warrensburg, N. Y., Maidens Are Slow in Taking Advantage of the Leap Year.

Statistics at the town clerk's office of Warrensburg, N. Y., go to show that the Warrensburg girls up to the present time have not been taking advantage of the leap year with that avidity which was expected of them. Since the year began there have been only three marriages in town following direct proposals made by the brides. In each case the young women popped the question and led their blushing bridegrooms to the altar within 30 days, so the Warrensburg News has been creditably informed by one of the grooms who seemed to be posted and made a clean breast of the whole affair.

That there have not been, therefore, more weddings in Warrensburg directly due to leap year may be from the fact that the girls had been waiting for Hallowe'en to help them cinch things. Now that this has passed there are unconfirmed rumors that there will soon be "something doing."

When he died it was found that the crown of another hat was carefully sewed in the interior of the hat, and between the two there was $125,000 in bank notes.

SERMON WAS A WINNER.

Such a Good One the Parson Was Requested by the Bishop for the Loan of It.

At a dinner to the archbishop of Canterbury in New York, relates the Buffalo Enquirer, Bishop Chauncey Breyster, of Connecticut, decried self-praise.

"In there anything tamer," he said, "than to hear a man praise himself—than to hear a judge praise a decision he has just made, or a surgeon praise an appendix operation he has performed, or a clergyman praise a sermon he has preached?

"Let me tell you about a certain self-praising clergyman.

"At a dinner similar to this one he began to talk of his own eloquence. He talked of it a long time. Finally he described a sermon wherewith he had raised enough money to build a magnificent new church.

"He said that this sermon had thrown the congregation into a transport of liberality. From all sides of the auditorium there had resounded announcements of subscriptions of $1,000, of $2,000, even of $5,000. Women had advanced to the altar and thrown in their watches, their rings, and their bracelets. One young woman had even—

"But here a distinguished bishop interrupted. He bent forward and tapped the speaker on the shoulder.

"'Could you lend me that sermon?' he whispered."

Greatest in the World.

Arlington, Ind., Dec. 5th (Special).—Mr. W. A. Hysong, the photographer, who moved here recently from Sopp, Ky., is firmly of the opinion that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the greatest Kidney Remedy the world has ever known.

"In the years 1901 and 1902," says Mr. Hysong, "and for some time before I was afflicted with Kidney Trouble. My joints were sore and stiff and I finally got so bad I could not turn in bed without assistance. In the Spring of 1903 I was induced, by a friend, to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after using one and one-half boxes I was and am still completely cured. Several of my neighbors, too, used Dodd's Kidney Pills, and in every case they did as recommended."

Cure the early symptoms of Kidney Disease, such as Backache, with Dodd's Kidney Pills, and you will never have Bright's Disease.

NO TONGUE CAN TELL

How I Suffered with Itching and Bleeding Eczema—Until Cured by Cuticura.

"No tongue can tell how I suffered for five years with a terribly painful, itching, and bleeding eczema, my body and face being covered with sores. Never in my life did I experience such awful suffering, and I longed for death, which I felt was near. I had tried doctors and medicines without success, but my mother insisted that I try Cuticura. I felt better after the first bath with Cuticura Soap and one application of Cuticura Ointment, and was soon entirely well. Any person having doubts about this wonderful cure may write to me. Mrs. Fairbanks tells how neglect of warning symptoms will soon prostrate a woman. She thinks woman's safeguard is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and neglect are the cause of untold female suffering, not only with the laws of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains, and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully, according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. Since I have been well I have been more careful, I have also advised a number of my sick friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they have never had reason to be sorry. Yours very truly, MRS. MAY FAIRBANKS, 216 South 7th St., Minneapolis, Minn." (Mrs. Fairbanks is one of the most successful and highest salaried travelling saleswomen in the West.)

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For over two years I suffered more than tongue can express with kidney and bladder trouble. My physician pronounced my trouble catarrh of the bladder, caused by displacement of the womb. I had a frequent desire to urinate, and it was very painful, and lumps of blood would pass with the urine. Also had backache very often.

"After writing to you, and receiving your reply to my letter, I followed your advice, and feel that you and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have cured me. The medicine drew my womb into its proper place, and then I was well. I never feel any pain now, and can do my housework with ease."—MRS. ALICE LAMON, Kincaid, Miss.

Section 8 of Order No. 739 of the Postmaster General says: "Rural boxes must not be used for more than one family, except in the case of a near relative, or those residing in the same house." How can a tenant have his mail put in his landlord's box?

We have been leader of society in this town for 10 or 12 years, being the only man with a white shirt and a dress coat, and the year 1905 will see us marching on in our accustomed place. Men may come and go but our position is too secure to be uprooted, even by a man wearing patent leather boots.

A tramp passed down the pike not long since, and stopped at the house of an elderly lady, and asked for something to eat. "Why is it," asked the lady, "that a strong man like you finds its necessary to beg?" "Because, madam," replied the tramp, who had made a study of human nature, "begging is the only profession in which a gentleman may address a beautiful lady without the formality of an introduction." A minute or two later he had his pedal extremities stowed away under the mahogany, and nothing in the culinary department was too good for him. That tramp was a natural born diplomat.

We don't deny meeting the Rabbit Hash correspondent in Rising Sun as he stated, but deny holding any conversation with him in Rising Sun in regard to my marriage. We did say to him that the report of my marriage was false, and explained how the report was started. Not a word was said about "sweet old maids," but we confess that if there had been, we would have certainly said "sweet old maids," because we do think them sweet. The denial of our marriage and the explanation of how the report started was made in his house, but as he was seen in close conversation with a cigar sign the day he was in Rising Sun, probably mistook it for Commissary.

Dec. 12.—James Beard, who lives on James Rogers' place near Belleview, went out hunting, last Saturday, equipped with a 23 caliber revolver and a shot gun. He found a rabbit "setting," and cocked his pistol to shoot it, about which time the rabbit jumped and ran. Beard then drew his shot gun and fired, still holding to the pistol. The rabbit was killed, and when he went to pick it up he discovered blood flowing from his left hand. He began to investigate and soon discovered that the pistol was discharged simultaneously with the shot gun, the ball taking effect in his left hand. Dr. Hopkins was called in and worked on the wound for some time but failed to locate and extract the ball. Mr. Beard was taken to Rising Sun, today, to see if the ball could be removed by the surgeons of that city. The wound had caused Mr. Beard considerable pain.

Ashburnham, Ontario, Testifies to the Good Qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Ashburnham, Ont., April 18, 1903.—I think it is only right that I should tell you what a wonderful effect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has produced. The day before Easter I was so distressed with a cold and cough that I did not think to be able to take any duties next day, as my voice was almost choked by the cough. The same day I received an order from you for a bottle of your Cough Remedy. I at once procured a sample bottle, and took about three doses of the medicine. To my great relief the cough and cold had completely disappeared and I was able to preach three times on Easter Day. I know that this rapid and effective cure was due to your Cough Remedy. I make this testimonial without solicitation, being thankful to have found such a godsent remedy.

Respectfully yours,

E. A. Langfeldt, M. A.,

The Warfare With Self

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

Copyrighted, 1904, by Louis Klopsch.

Chicago, Sunday, Dec. 11, 1904.

Text:—"Walk by the Spirit and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh. For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh; for these are contrary the one to the other; that ye may not do the things that ye would."—Gal. 5:16-17.

We have here the setting of a war drama. The opposing forces are seen drawn up in order for the battle. The sound of conflict is heard, and now one side and then the other is seen to yield. Uncertain is the issue and back and forth the strife is waged. Such is the picture which Paul draws in our text. The flesh warring against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh. The one at eternal enmity with the other. It is the inner conflict, the place where the most desperate warfare man may know is bitterly and relentlessly carried on. The heart is the battleground. The flesh, the physical life with all its natural desires and tendencies, is on one side with Self enthroned as ruler and captain. The Soul, with its capacity for God, is on the other with the Spirit enlisted as its captain. Between these two, the Self and the Soul, there are irreconcilable differences, for the one is contrary to the other. If Self rules supreme, the Soul suffers. If the Soul is to gain the supremacy, it must do so at the sacrifice of Self and the flesh. There cannot be any compromise, no alliance, no truce between the two. It must be conflict from start to finish, if the Soul is to develop and grow in the grace and knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. In the seventh chapter of Romans we see Paul waging the bitter warfare, and crying out as the powerful enemy, Self, deals hard blows and wins victory over the Soul: "Oh, wretched man, that I am! Who shall deliver me out of the body of this death?" But the victory comes as he learns to fight in Christ's strength, and to abide in His presence, for He exclaims, in answer to the question he has just propounded: "I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord." So then we have for our consideration, first, Self enthroned, and the Soul enslaved; second, the Soul's awakening; third, the Soul's enemy revealed; fourth, the conflict; and fifth, victory and its reward.

SELF Enthroned.—The natural man wants a king to rule over his life who will please and gratify the desires, the aspirations, the tendencies of the flesh. Man naturally covets freedom of action in all that pertains to this life. He wants no restrictions thrown about his life which will restrict his intercourse with the world, or indulgence in the pleasures, luxuries and ambitions of life. This desire of Self to rule manifested itself in the very beginning when Adam and Eve reached forth the hand and took of the fruit of the forbidden tree, and Self ever since that fateful day has aspired to kingship over the life and has struggled to maintain its sovereignty. The natural man has but one king, and that is Self, and the Soul is kept in bondage. He is given liberties only which will not endanger Self or restrict him in the realization and enjoyment of that which he desires. Self is a materialist. He refuses to believe anything except that which he can see, and feel and handle. He centers his joys and hopes and desires in this life, and bids the Soul join in the "eating, the drinking and the merrymaking, for tomorrow we die." Self is willing to concede everything else but the throne to the Soul. If it may but reign supreme Self is willing and anxious to gratify the longings and aspirations of the Soul. Self is a clever diplomat and he negotiates terms and dictates policies which seem to meet the higher demands of the Soul, but which do not in any way imperil Self's dominion over the life. Self wants to rule and Self does rule in some form or another, unless the Soul has been aroused to a sense of its rights, and its possibilities in Christ Jesus.

THE Soul's Awakening.—Every man has within himself, in the inner self which is called the Soul, a capacity for God. The multitude of religions which claim their followers throughout the world, from the remote regions where savagery reigns to the lands where civilization has wrought her highest arts, attest the fact that man is seeking after something to gratify and satisfy this yearning of the Soul. But capacity for God is not possession of God. Because I feel towards God, does not prove that I have God as an inner and satisfying portion. The Soul is kept in the dark even while it is longing for something which it has not. The Spirit of God is striving with man, trying to lead him to the light. The promise of Jesus was that "when He the Spirit of truth is come, He shall guide you into all the truth. He will convict the world in respect of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." The Spirit is the voice of God in the Soul seeking to turn man to God and make him throw off the yoke of Self. My friend, you have heard God's message; down deep in your heart you know that God wants you to surrender Self and let the Soul expand under the possession of God. But you will not! The convicting work of God's Spirit has been felt. You know what you ought to do, but Self argues with you. He draws before you a picture of all you will have to give up. He uses all the somber and dark hues he can find in the history who fear the truth that you will turn from the voice of God and the pleading of the Soul. Self fears in the presence of God. He wants not that God should rule over your life. He himself wants to be its only master. And how long is the struggle sometimes! How grievous is the process before man will yield and receive God's gift of eternal life. Some [illegible] fight no longer against God. Let God's work of grace be wrought in you! Let your Soul be awakened by the touch of the Spirit!

THE Soul's Enemy Revealed.—The dweller in the valley has a narrowed vision. He can see the familiar objects which surround his dwelling, but he cannot take in the extent of verdant fields and woodland which stretch off in the distance. He is too nearly on a level with that which he wishes to see. But let him clamber up the mountain side until he gains a vantage point way up above the fruitful and beautiful valley, and behold the whole scene is spread out before him like a great panorama. So it is with man. From man's level let him view man and his vision is limited. He can see man only in his nearer aspect. He cannot see him as God does. But let him rise on the wings of the quickened soul to the mountain top of God's presence, and he will then find a new picture spreading itself before him. It has been said that man's greatest enemy is self. But how few really realize or believe it. And yet it is true, and if man will only let God touch his eyes and open them so that he may see clearly, he will realize that the natural man is at enmity with God. He will begin to understand what is implied in our text when it says: 'For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; for these are contrary the one to the other." And until Self is revealed as the enemy of the Soul, it cannot be expected that man will seek to bring it into subjection. This is the reason so many Christians live on such a low sensual plane. This is the reason why they argue themselves into the belief that many worldly pleasures and indulgences are right. They have not yet sighted the enemy. They have not yet let God reveal to them that the thing that must be overcome first is the natural man and the desires of the flesh.

THE Conflict.—It is the duty of an army when at war to discover the enemy, and when discovered to engage the foe in battle. To refuse to give battle is traitorous and invites disaster. It means that the foe will dictate terms and bring the cowardly army into subjection. The Soul must give battle to the forces which would curtail its liberties and bring it into subjection. It need not know defeat. It may have glorious victory in Christ Jesus if it will fight in His name and with His strength. How strong the will of the flesh and the desires of the flesh are can only be realized as one struggles against them, and seeks to overcome them. The Christian who knows no struggle in his inner life, who makes no fight against the flesh, with its appetites and lusts, is living on a very low plane. The Soul is being ruled by Self. God demands a different attitude and condition from His children. We must fight, if we would reign. Conflict is the order of life for the Christian. He cannot escape it. From the moment that he accepts Jesus Christ as Saviour from sin, he must fight against sin in its manifold forms within and without. Paul in our text is not preaching a doctrine of asceticism. He does not mean to imply that every joy and pleasure which can be experienced in this life are sinful. He does not mean that the Christian is to be gloomy, and to frown upon every good thing in life. He does not mean this, for there is no good thing which God would withhold from His children, but he does mean that Self should not rule, that a higher desire and purpose should run the life than the mere fleshly desires and appetites. It must no longer be "what I want," but "what God wants for me." This brings the strife. Here is where the conflict begins. It is the flesh warring against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh.

THE Victory and Reward.—The secret of victory is revealed in the opening words of our text. The declaration that the "flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh," is preceded by the wise admonition to "Walk in the Spirit," followed by the blessed assurance that if we do, we "shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh." The Soul is to look to the Spirit for leadership, instead of Self. One of the essentials to a victorious army is the wise general who knows how to lead his army so as to avoid all the ambuscades and pitfalls of the enemy, and to select the vantage ground from which to give battle. The Spirit will lead unerringly. He knows the pitfalls, the dangers which lurk on every hand, and it is only as the Christian seeks to walk in the Spirit that he can hope to escape disaster and defeat. The victory is more than half won when we are marching obediently by the side of our Saviour. When we go our own way, when temptation leads us into the byways of sinful desire, then are we almost sure to fall before the enemy. We become an easy prey to the desires of the flesh. Self has his way, and the Soul is brought into subjection. But ours may be victory, if we will "walk in the Spirit," if we "through the Spirit will mortify the deeds of the body." And the reward is worth the conflict. The seven-fold reward may be ours as promised in the second and third chapters of Revelation, ending in the grand climax: "He that overcometh I will give to him to sit down with Me in My throne, as I also overcame, and sat down with My Father in His Throne"

DIFFERENCE IN REVISION.

The Tariff Situation as It Is To-Day and Some Twenty Years Ago.

Conditions political and economic relating to the tariff closely resemble the situation 22 years ago. The country had been for some time in the midst of great prosperity, commerce was directed greatest various tariff schedules were accumulating in large volume, particularly from the west, and the republican party, having recovered control of congress and won a presidential election, was inclined to be indulgent in the matter. So the tariff commission of 1883 was authorized, and the country was asked to behold what it had never seen before and has never seen since—the tariff revised and moderated "by its friends," says the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

What resulted is too well known to require recounting. Democrats in congress generally opposed the reference of the question to a commission on the ground that it was a scheme to delay and defeat revision. The truth probably is that the republican majority started out in good faith to revise and reduce, but it balked when the time came to act. The commission recommended only moderate reductions, but the republican congress refused to accept even a mild cut, and it was a question, when the job had been finished up, whether the tariff had not been left quite as high as before. Thus the commission device did result in defeating reductions, as the democrats had predicted. The country did indeed witness a tariff revision "by its friends," but it was the sort of revision the friends always give us—revision without reduction.

Only in one important particular does the situation to-day relative to tariff revision differ from that of 20 odd years ago. Then a large surplus revenue, disturbing to the money market and taxing the efforts of the secretary of the treasury to dispose of, was pouring into the government vaults, and this was a consideration in favor of tariff reduction which was given prominence in the discussions leading up to the appointment of a commission. And the existence of a surplus revenue has always figured prominently and primarily in tariff reductions. This was true of the compromise tariff of 1833, of the reductions of 1857 and 1872, and of the tariff reform agitation started by President Cleveland in 1887.

At the present moment, however, this most important factor in compelling considerations of tariff reduction is lacking. The treasury not many months ago was enjoying or suffering from a troublesome surplus revenue. But the last congress met the problem by increasing expenditures instead of reducing taxation, and now, as a consequence, the treasury is dealing with a deficit which exceeds $20,000,000 for the fiscal year to date. Reduce taxes when a policy of extravagance has imposed the need of more taxes? That will be the cry raised by the tariff extremists when the question is brought up in congress, and that it will prove of force and effect we can hardly doubt.

However, agitation for reduction, either direct or through reciprocity arrangements, has obtained too much headway in republican business circles to be ignored, and the president evidently recognizes the fact. What he will do remains to be seen. But the experience of 1883 must convince him that the plan of a commission will be excellent for purposes of delay and evasion, and for little else. Furthermore, a reference of the question to a regular session of congress would also be likely to bring to it scant attention of an immediate and practical nature. If, then, the president really "means business" in the matter, he will adopt the suggested plan of calling a special session next spring to deal with the subject especially. We shall see as to this; but meantime the republican friends of reduction through Canadian reciprocity or otherwise must recognize that the deficit producing extravagance of the last congress, evidently to be followed by the next congress, has robbed them of a powerful weapon; for the high tariff party will never consent to a reduction of revenues from customs to be made good by additional internal taxes.

POLICY OF THE PRESIDENT

Probable Attitude of the Republican Chief on the All-Important Tariff Question.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune gives a forecast in conspicuous type of what he believes to be the president's policy on the tariff, the trusts and other important problems during the coming four years. The president, he says, will make no suggestion of tariff revision to the present congress. His message to the last session of the Fifty-eighth congress will touch but lightly on the subject of tariff revision, and what he has to say will be much in the same vein as his reference to the subject in his message to the Fifty-seventh congress. In that message he said:

"There is a general acquiescence in our present tariff system as a national policy. The first requisite to our prosperity is the continuity and stability of this economic policy. Nothing could be more unwise than to disturb the business interests of the country by any general tariff change at this time. Doubt, apprehension, uncertainty are exactly what we must wish to avoid in the interest of our commercial and material well being. Our experience in the past has shown that sudden revisions of the tariff are apt to produce conditions closely approaching panic in the business world."

In regard to the Philippines the correspondent says the president expects to indorse the recommendations of Secretary Taft, and ask congress to reduce the tariff on Philippine sugar and tobacco imports to 25 per cent. of the Dingley rates and to place all other imports from the Philippines on the free list. Beyond this the president will not advise the present congress to attempt any tariff legislation.

But the correspondent states that the president regards some readjustment of existing schedules as essential to the prosperity of the nation, and adds:

"He does not construe the great republican majorities as meaning that the people want no change in the tariff schedules, but as indicating their confidence in the willingness and ability of the republican party to make such readjustment as may be deemed advisable. In this opinion he does not stand alone. Senator Aldrich, whose devotion to the protective policy has won for him the sobriquet of 'High Priest of Protection,' has expressed his belief that some changes of certain schedules by the next congress will become imperative. Other leaders of both houses of congress entertain the same views. Some of the closest representatives of the president during the campaign just closed have suggested, if not promised, a readjustment of some of the Dingley schedules."

In Washington, says the Utica (N. Y.) Observer, it is regarded as probable that a special session of the next congress will be called soon after March 4. Just what the programme will be cannot now be determined. The congress may simply convene, appoint finance and ways and means committees, authorize them to sit during recess, and then adjourn to meet again when the committees shall be ready to report; or the full body may remain in session until the work is completed.

Influential members of congress are already arriving in Washington, and many of them have already had consultations with the president. Among the advocates of revision who have called at the white house is Gov. Cummins of Iowa, the originator of the so-called "Iowa idea." Together with Senator Hansbrough, of South Dakota, he has been telling the president that what Eugene N. Foss, of Boston, said concerning the people of New England is also true of the people of the west and northwest, namely, that they want both revision and reciprocity.

VICTORY OF STAND-PATTERS

Republicans Who Were Bolstered Up by Trusts Are in the Ascendant.

Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, one of the three or four men who control the congress of the United States, says that "if the election means anything, it is a 'stand pat' victory." The Rhode Island senator has logic with him, says the Albany Argus. There was one political party which favored tariff revision, and one which favored "standing pat;" the latter won. The Chicago platform, the keynote speeches, the arguments on the stump and in the press were "stand pat" and "let well enough alone;" and the people have indorsed that policy, and elected the party which championed it.

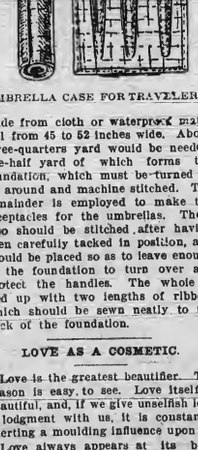
It is asserted that President Roosevelt is disposed to call an extra session, to consider the subject of tariff revision. But there is no authorized announcement from the white house. There is, however, a semi-official announcement that the republican national committee has an unexpended balance of $400,000, in the treasury. These large sums did not grow there; they were put there by trusts, combinations and monopolies whose profits will depend largely upon a continuance of the Dingley tariff rates and schedules, unreduced and unrevised.

That the president will reject the advice of Aldrich, Allison, Dalzell and all the seasoned republican veterans in congress, and turn against the men whose contributions financed the republican campaign fund, in order to vindicate the democratic platform contention—that tariff revision is necessary—seems likely only to the queer political seers of the New York "independent" press.

——That Missouri continues to be a democratic state is conclusively shown by the official figures of the vote on November 8, as thus far cast up by the secretary of state. Democrats remained at home by the thousand; that is the plain, simple and unvarnished story of the final tally sheet. The vote on governor is not conclusive, although its total is more than 40,000 short of that of four years ago. The figures on lieutenant governor, however, represent party alignment with the personal equation eliminated. The vote for Dockery in 1900 is taken as the standard of comparison.—St. Louis Republic.

MANNISH WAYS A MISTAKE.

Women Will Never Win Adoration from Men by Adopting Them.



Women are never more largely and gorgeously mistaken than when they think that they make a winning with men by trying to make imitation men of themselves. The fallacy that men pine for women to be little brothers to them has gained ground of late and found many adherents among women who affect masculine sports, discuss risque subjects, and endeavor to wipe out the sex line. Never was greater folly. It is woman's unlikeness to man, the difference of her point of view, that makes all her charms and lends piquancy to her society. If a man wanted the ideas of another man on a subject, he would seek one who had been born to the masculine estate, not one who has merely understudied the role.

Men like what we call the old-fashioned virtues in women, says the Chicago Tribune. It is the fashion now for women to be blase and cynical, but there is no man so hardened that he does not shudder away from a hard woman. He may never put his foot inside of a church, but he wants a woman to be pious. He may disbelieve in everything in heaven and earth, but he wants a woman to have a childlike faith in everything, and no matter how much he laughs at her for her credulity, he loves her the better for it. He may judge the world mercilessly, but he wants a woman to be full of tender and unreasoning sympathy and pity. No man ever loved a woman who did not cry, or who was not tender to little children, or who would not give to a beggar and investigate his needs afterwards. The girl who thinks it smart to sneer at domesticity and declares that she will never debase her talents by learning to cook or sew, who hates children and mocks at religion, no matter how brilliant or beautiful she is, does not attract men.

USEFUL UMBRELLA CASE.

A Very Handy and Economical Article for Every Traveler to Have.

An umbrella will last twice as long if used with care and properly treated. Although it of course looks much neater to carry when folded, when put aside it should be undone to prevent the folds from cracking. When traveling, however, both parasols and umbrellas should be rolled up and packed in a case to prevent their getting rubbed or soiled. Our illustration shows one which is designed to be made from cloth or waterproof material from 45 to 52 inches wide. About three-quarters yard would be needed, one-half yard of which forms the foundation, which must be turned in all around and machine stitched. The remainder is employed to make the receptacles for the umbrellas. These also should be stitched after having been carefully tacked in position, and should be placed so as to leave enough of the foundation to turn over and protect the handles. The whole is tied up with two lengths of ribbon which should be sewn neatly to the back of the foundation.

LOVE AS A COSMETIC.

Love is the greatest beautifier. The reason is easy to see. Love itself is beautiful, and, if we give unselfish love a lodgment with us, it is constantly exerting a moulding influence upon us.

Love always appears at its best. When it goes wooing, it always chooses the most becoming attire and the most captivating adornments. So love, when it gets possession of a human body, proceeds to mould the face of that body into the most attractive form, for love always seeks to clothe itself in the most attractive garb.

There is no masseur like love to work miracles in a homely face. There is no facial specialist who can begin to do as much to make a plain young man or woman attractive, to overcome deformity or hide blemishes, as the magicians Love can do.—Christian Endeavor World.

CARING FOR THE HAIR.

If Done Systematically It Is by No Means a Laborious Task for the Woman.

When you have finished your housework and are ready to sit down at your sewing or darning, or perhaps to soak the magazine, you very naturally do not want to waste the precious and piecious moments of the day struggling over your appearance. You haven't time for everything, you argue, and you must get the mending done or you must read and improve your mind a little, or you must finish a piece of fancy work. Well, do it; do any or all of the things you want to do or ought to do, but first choose a sunny corner, by an open window, and, sitting there with the sunlight flittering in on your back, let down your locks to the winds. Let them blow and play about your shoulders. Give them chance at the air and sunlight, just as you would give your flowers that chance to breathe and to draw in life. The divine Sarah Bernhardt never confines her locks when she is in private. All day long when she is at home they fly to the sun and winds and air, untouched by a hairpin or ribbon. That is why, even as a grandmother, she still has golden tresses instead of iron gray wisps of hair.

Nothing is so good for the scalp and the hair itself as a daily sun and air bath, and nothing is so comforting or less trouble.

Usually the little housekeeper is too poor or too frugal to patronize the hairdresser, or to indulge in a shampoo at a dollar or half a dollar at one of the hairdressing establishments. And so, in an irregular, off hand sort of way, she "washes" her hair when it is "dirty" or "sticky." For this "wash" she uses any soap that may happen to be about the house, rinses quickly and dries her hair over the radiator. Such treatment will kill the finest hair in a few years.

You should decide upon a regular interval for shampooing your hair, and you should "shampoo" it. If you have very dry hair, do not wash it oftener than every three weeks, and you might let it go for four weeks with prudence. If your hair is oily, you may indulge in a shampoo every two weeks, but not oftener. Some girls, during the rage for fluffy hair, were in the habit of washing their hair, once a week or oftener, a process which took all the natural life and oil out of the finest locks and left them dry, hard, dead, and ready to fall out at the first sign of ill health. Use for your shampoo a good tar soap or a plain castile soap—nothing else except warm water. Do not make the bath too hot, and do not put ammonia in it. To attempt to burn your hair out in this way is a fatal mistake. Scrub thoroughly, rubbing the scalp well and washing the hair as you would a piece of cloth. Above all, rinse the hair thoroughly in warm water, and be sure that every particle of the soap is removed, so that the pores are free to breathe. Dry the hair in the air and the sun. Fan it, if you like, and rub it with the towel, but avoid the life-killing, hot air from the radiator or the gas stove, if you do not want to rot and ruin the best part of your locks.

Nearly half of your life is spent in bed, and thus nearly half of your life your hair is in tight pigtails and curl papers. This is unfortunate for many reasons. First of all, it keeps the scalp from the air and is not good for the roots of the hair. Secondly, it would drive the most devoted man to the other woman or the uttermost parts of the earth. Take quite as much pains as you would for a party. Do not attempt to put it up conventionally, but dress it picturesquely. One of the prettiest night arrangements is the Marguerite fashion of two plaits down the back, loosely woven and gracefully parted.

KITCHEN DON'TS.

Don't use knives for scraping the table and pots.

Don't crumple up your dish towels. Rinse and hang them in the sun.

Don't black a stove while it is hot. It takes more blacking and less polish.

Don't put damp towels and napkins in the hamper. Dry them first or they will mildew.

Don't put egg dishes into hot water—it makes the egg adhere. Soak the dishes first in cold water.

Don't put tin pans on the stove to dry. They become heated, the solder loosens and they soon leak.

Don't pour boiling water over china packed in a pan. It will crack by the sudden contraction and expansion.

Don't put a greasy spoon on the table. It leaves a stain which requires time to erase. Put it in a saucer.

Don't litter up the kitchen when getting a meal, because it will take hours to clean up after the meal is over.

Don't pour boiling water and soap on greasy spots. Moisten the spots first with a cold saturated solution of soda, then scrub them with the grain of the wood, using cold soapsuds.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS

FUMIGATING SEED GRAIN.

Box in Which It May Be Treated to Fumes of Carbon Bisulphide to Kill Insects.

The great damage to the Canada field pea seed by the pea weevil led to experiments by the Ontario college for a cheap and effective method of combating the evil. The box shown below is the result of these experiments. The peas are placed in this box and fumigated with bisulphate of carbon. This style of box has been in use at the station for seven years; it is five feet long, three feet wide and three feet deep, and is capable of holding 30 bushels of peas.

FUMIGATING BOX.

Their method of treatment is given as follows:

Immediately after threshing, the peas were put into cotton and jute bags. As soon as 30 bushels of peas were threshed they were placed in a fumigation box for treatment. One pound of carbon bisulphide was poured out into three flat pans, which were placed on the top of the peas; the cover was then put on the box and weighted with heavy stones. After 48 hours the cover was removed and the box ventilated. The pans had become dry, as the liquid had changed into a gas, which, being much heavier than air, had sunk down amongs the peas, penetrating them and killing the weevils.

The quantity of carbon bisulphide used by us was larger than that usually recommended, as a pound or a pound and a half is generally considered sufficient for 100 bushels of peas, but we wished to err on the safe side. Carbon bisulphide may be purchased in small quantities from any druggist at about 30 cents per pound, or 40 cents per pint. For larger quantities better rates can be given by the druggist. The gas, or vapor, which comes from carbon bisulphide is not only combustible, but it is very explosive when mixed with air. Great care should, therefore be taken to treat the peas in the daytime only, for a light or a flame of any kind brought near the liquid may cause a serious explosion; and smoking near it should be positively prohibited. Moreover, the vapor should not be inhaled, as it is very injurious, even a small portion causing headache, giddiness and nausea.

The treatment with carbon bisulphide should be made in boxes, barrels, or "bughouses," located some distance from the insured buildings on the farm. With the strict observance of the preceding precautions, no one should hesitate to use the carbon bisulphide. As a matter of fact, says the Prairie Farmer, we have never heard of any bad results following its use in the treatment of peas. When pure it will not injure or stain the finest goods. The commercial liquid has an acrid taste, and an odor like that of rotten eggs. The vapor is more than 2½ times as heavy as air. Any tight box or barrel may be used for this purpose and the principal of fumigation may be extended to any kind of seed grain or other articles that are attacked by any kind of insects.

POULTRY IN THE ORCHARD

The Combination Is Good on a Small But Not on a Large Scale.

It is frequently asserted that orcharding and poultry raising go together. This perhaps is true on a small scale, but we can hardly conceive of a great commercial orchard comprising hundreds of acres of land being made also a poultry range. In such a case the combination would be overdone, as the shade from the trees, being constant, would militate against the health of the fowls. On a small scale the combination is a happy one. The bugs and worms are eaten by the fowls and the grass forms a handy adjunct to the feeding operations. The grass is not wanted anyway in the orchard and if the poultry can keep it down so much the better. It will then not be necessary to even run the weeder over the ground to keep the weeds from becoming a nuisance.

The plum orchard is a very good kind of orchard in which to keep poultry, as the limbs of the trees do not shut off too much sun from the birds. We have seen poultry yards of small size, in each one of which was a single plum tree growing and thriving. There is no reason why trees in such locations should not prove to be very fruitful. They are certainly sure of not becoming grass-bound.—Farmers' Review.

Much labor and expense may be saved by planning ahead of time.

THE VENTILATED STABLE.

It Is the Only Healthful Place in Which to Keep Live Stock—Some Suggestions.

No one attempts to deny the importance of ventilation in the stable. The removal of foul gases and a constant supply of fresh air are just as necessary to the thrift of cattle as food; and yet, the best means of bringing this about remains, to a great extent, an unsolved problem.

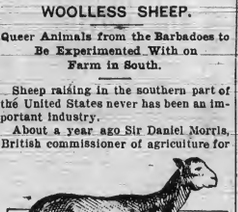
The requirements, says A. P. Ketchen, in Orange Judd Farmer, of a good system of ventilation are: A constant change of air in the stable, the introduction and distribution of fresh air without drafts, the liberation of the fresh air at the window near the heads of the cattle in such a manner that they may breathe it before it is diluted with foul gases, the removal of foul air without condensation and dripping.

To provide for the fresh air inlet, the floor of the feeding alley may be elevated 12 inches above the level of the stalls. The inlet may consist of a ten-inch tile, or a wooden box, about ten inches square, running under the floor the whole length of the feeding alley. This will admit enough fresh air for 15 cattle. If more are to be supplied, a conduit, placed on each side of the feeding alley, will be generally sufficient.

The main inlet is tapped opposite each pair of cattle by the distributing pipes. These lead into the mangers, and are placed close against the parting blocks, their open ends being prevented from plugging with dirt by a leather flap, or some other device.

The foul air is carried off by means of ventilating shafts, leading from the ceiling of the stable out through the roof. Most farmers now run the purlin post straight from the floor to the purlin. Beside these posts is a very convenient place for the ventilating flues, they are out of the way, and they are not so readily chilled as when placed against the side of the barn. Excessive chilling of these foul air outlets not only reduces the connection current, but condenses moisture, causing it to drip.

These foul air outlets should be of good size and should extend well up beyond the ridge of the barn. If they are not carried far enough above the roof, the current will often be in the wrong direction, and instead of acting as outlets, the wind will sometimes force a strong draft of cold air down into the backs of the cattle, just as a chimney that is too short will sometimes cause a stove to smoke.



By this method the fresh air is admitted, as in a furnace, below the heating area. It is distributed evenly and without drafts, and is liberated at the heads of the cattle, giving them a chance to use it before it has been diluted with the poisonous gases of the stable. As it is heated by inhalation and by the heat radiating from the bodies of the animals, convection currents are sent up toward the ceiling, and out through the foul air shafts. This system is automatic in its action; the more stock in the stable, the stronger the convection current.

WINDOW GARDEN FERNS.

Care and Interest Alone Essential to Grow Ferns in the House.

Of all the green things that condecend to live with us in our furnace-heated, gas-lighted houses, perhaps none adapt themselves more readily to conditions far removed from nature than ferns, says a writer in Country Life in America. It is astonishing how many seemingly "immutable laws" can be discreetly disregarded, if the love for growing things is sufficiently strong to "make a way." "Shade, moisture, and a mild temperature," the books warn us, "are essentials of success in growing ferns." As a matter of fact, fern boxes have given satisfaction for years under the most trying conditions, and the only secret of success is to be interested in ferns. Sooner or later the peculiar beauty of ferns takes hold of one. "Nature made ferns for pure leaves," said Thoreau.

Diversify.

Diversify! Plan to raise at least fruits and vegetables enough for home use. Special farming, or one crop farming, is well enough in its place, but we must not depend too much upon it. What do you think about it?

FOR HEALTH AND COMFORT

Variety of Simple Remedies for Occasional Small Ailments and Imperfections.

A raw onion eaten just before retiring is excellent for insomnia.

If the hands are rubbed on a stick of celery after peeling onions the smell will be entirely removed.

To purify the breath after eating onions eat a little sugar, coffee beans or parsley moistened with sugar.

Everything that goes out of a sickroom should be disinfected before it goes. This applies to the doctor and nurses as well as to the soiled linen.

When the hands have become soft and shrunken by using soda and hot water rub them with common salt and it will help to make them smooth again.

For whooping cough make a palatable sirup by slicing onions fine and after sprinkling plentifully with brown sugar allow the onions to stand between hot plates under a press until all the juice is forced out.

A simple beautifier that few women appreciate is the taking of fruit juices. As much as three glasses a day of the freshly pressed juice of some fruit will have a marked effect on the system and the complexion.

A lemon bath is considered a daily necessity in the West Indies. Three or four limes or lemons are cut into the water and allowed to lie for half an hour, so that the juice may be extracted. Such a bath gives to the skin a delightful sense of freshness and cleanliness.

The old-fashioned remedy of tansy and buttermilk that our grandmothers used is again coming into favor. If the green tansy can be got put a handful of the leaves in a quart of buttermilk. Where the dried tansy is used steep an ounce of the leaves in a quart of hot water. After the water cools add a pint of buttermilk.

AND THE EDITOR WON.

As Was Usual, According to Mark Twain, in Cases of This Kind.

A friend of Mark Twain says that the humorist recently told him of the troubles experienced by a certain literateur with whom Mark is well acquainted.

It appears, relates the New York Herald, that this writer not long ago sent a story to a Boston publisher, and that the tale was shortly thereafter returned, together with the following note:

"Dear Blank:—Really you should not have sent this to me, knowing as you do that I do not care for stories of a political nature. I believe something was said to you before in this connection."

The author replied as follows:

"Dear Mr. Publisher:—Why you should undertake to conduct a publishing business merely to suit your personal likes and dislikes is a matter beyond the comprehention of yours truly, ——."

Whereupon the publisher got back at the brash author in these words:

"My Dear Blank—"How an individual who pretends to be an author of note can spell comprehension with a "i" is a puzzle to yours sincerely, ——."

As is usual in such cases, adds Mark Twain, the editor came out best man.

Stuffed Cabbage.

Scald the cabbage until the bones lose their crispness. Open the heart to the very center. Have nearly a cupful of rice; add a cupful of chopped meat, and season with salt and pepper. Put a teaspoonful of this mixture in the center of the cabbage; fold over the first little leaves, then add another layer of the mixture and fold over the second leaves, and so on. Tie in a piece of cheesecloth and throw in boiling water (with a little salt), simmer gently one hour, remove the cheesecloth, drain dish and pour over a pint of cream sauce or drain butter sauce.—Boston Budget.

Good Tomato Dish.

Baked tomatoes, stuffed with boiled or steamed corn, cut from the ears and highly seasoned, are seasonable just now. Sprinkle the tops with fine bread crumbs and dot with bits of butter before placing in the oven. They are especially good with roast beef or with beefsteak.—N. Y. Post.

HOTEL FOR WORKING GIRLS

Prominent New York Financiers to Combine Philanthropy and Business.

A hotel for working girls and working women will soon be built in New York city if the plans [illegible] consideration are carried out. Philanthropy and business will be combined in the running of the hotel. Plans have been submitted by an architect involving the expenditure of $300,000, but several well-known men interested in the project think that there will be no difficulty in raising whatever money is necessary, because assistance has been offered by men prominent in the financial world. The hotel probably will be in the neighborhood of the large department stores on the West side, where many girls and women are employed. Their board at the hotel will be about $3 or $4 a week. They will have the use of the hotel laundry when they wish to do up their collars, handkerchiefs and cuffs and such light articles. There will be a room with sewing machines at their service when they want to do mending. A number of small reception rooms will be on the first floor, where the girls may receive friends. Nothing will be said to the guests about religion or their family affairs. If the girls are out of employment at any time the management will try to tide them over until they get work.

FED HIS SQUASH ON MILK.

When Opened This Wonderful Vegetable Contained Several Pounds of the Finest Butter.

Most every boy on a farm knows how to fix up squash by feeding them milk so that they will grow to prodigious size, but a Unadilla (N. Y.) youth has smashed all records, if the statements of his friends are to be accredited. The Unadilla youth determined to produce a prize squash that would make all other prize squashes ever raised look like marbles in comparison.

Accordingly he clipped the end of the vine and immersed it in sweet milk. In time the vine took as much as a quart of milk a day. The squash grew beyond all expectations, and was eventually exhibited at the Morris fair, and it easily won a premium of ten dollars.

But the most surprising part of the story is yet to come, according to the narrator, whose reputation for veracity has never been questioned. The squash was cut the other day, and it is alleged that it contained seven pounds and fourteen ounces of fine, rich butter, equal if not superior to any made last year at the creamery. It is to be greatly regretted that the squash was seedless.

"DEAD," BUT STILL ALIVE

Lovers Certified as Having Committed Suicide Reappear and Many Complications Follow.

Two lovers who eloped together from Charleroi, Belgium, some time ago and were supposed to have committed suicide, have been found alive at Lyons, France, where they were living under an assumed name.

Soon after their disappearance the French papers announced that their dead bodies had been found at Lyons, and the father of the girl journeyed to the town and identified the corpses as those of the fugitives.

They have now returned home, and their parents have forgiven them.

But before they can be married their death certificates, says the Paris Matin, will have to be officially annulled, as legally they have ceased to exist.

"GIMLETS" BORED THEM.

Book of Conceited Author Lacked Popularity with the Reading Public.

Though Robert W. Chambers is a popular author, he will rarely talk about his books, says a literary exchange.

"I hate literary ——— it," he said the other day. "If an architect builds a good house, his friends, on account of it, don't regard him as a god, and he doesn't regard himself as a god. The same with an engineer. If he builds a good bridge it is in the day's work, and that is all there is about it. But if a man writes a good book, why, then there must be genius in him, and before this genius he himself, as well as all the world, must bow down. Rot.

"Literary conceit is distasteful to me," Mr. Chambers said, "and I like to see it taken down. It was well taken down in the case of a New York man recently. He has written a novel, 'Gimlets,' and the public libraries have put this book on their shelves. The man called at one of the libraries to find out how his work was going with the public. He hoped to have his vanity tickled a little.

"Is 'Gimlets' in?" he said to the librarian.

"It never was out," was the reply."

Reads Like a Miracle.

Moravia, N. Y., Dec. 12th.—(Special)—Bordering on the miraculous is the case of Mrs. Benj. Wilson, of this place. Suffering from Sugar Diabetes, she wasted away till from weighing 200 lbs. she barely tipped the scales at 130 lbs. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her. Speaking of her cure her husband says:

"My wife suffered everything from Sugar Diabetes. She was sick four years and doctored with two doctors, but received no benefit. She had so much pain all over her that she could not rest day or night. The doctor said that she could not live.

"Then an advertisement led me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and they helped her right from the first. Five boxes of them cured her. Dodd's Kidney Pills were a God-Sent remedy to us and we recommend them to all suffering from Kidney Disease."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure all Kidney Diseases, including Bright's Disease, and all kidney aches, including Rheumatism.

It is said that Gov. Beckham is inclined to convene the legislature in special session to consider location for the new State buildings.

The court of appeals has decided that the act appropriating $15,000 annually for the support of the Kentucky Children's Home Society, is constitutional.

The statistics at the census department, Washington, shows that women live longer than men, although there are more men than women in the country.

The number of pensioners on the roll at the close of the fiscal year ended June 30, 1904, was 994,762 according to the report of the Commissioner of Pensions.

A number of merchants and cottton planters of Courtland, Lawrence county, Alabama, have suggested that 1,000,000 bales of cotton be burned to reduce the surplus. They agree to furnish their pro rata share of the cotton to be destroyed to start the movoment.

Mr. M. H. Haggard brought to the Times office a funny head of cabbage with a second head starting to grow from the roots. The theory is that it was too dry for the cabbage to develop above ground and that the little moisture in the soil started a new and unusual growth at the roots.—Georgetown Times.

At the meeting held by the Burley Tobaceo Growers' Association a few days ago in Lexington it was stated that after next Saturday the Association would begin buying tobacco at the stipulated price, which means that the Association has succeeded and that the fight against the tobacco combine is on.

Gov. Vardeman, of Mississippi, mistook the temper of his people when he wrote in answer to President Franeis' letter informing him that President Roosevelt admired the Mississippi State building at the St. Louis fair. The people of Mississippi were humiliated at Vardeman's letter, and were not slow in letting him know he had made a great mistake in offering the President an insult.

The Mayor of Cincinnati has declared war on gambling in his jurisdiction, and if he is successful it is said that the heads of some of the departments of the city goverument will be put out of business, as several of them are deriving most of their revenue from gambling houses they are operating. The sporting element has been feeling pretty secure in Cincinnati for several years, and the Mayor's sudden determination to close the gambling houses came as a very great surprise.

It is intimated that Congress will be called upon in the near future to consider a bill that contemplates an increase of salaries from President down. The salaries of the President, United States Senators and Congressmen need no increase, and it is generally believed that just as good men could be secured to fill these offices at half the salaries they are now drawing. Fat salaries beget extravagance on the part of those who receive them, and as the tendency of the country is toward extravagance along all lines, any attempt to encourage it in the high officials ought to be called down.

There has existed, and still exists to some extent, a false sentiment that labor is degrading or belittling. The contrary is true. An ideal condition of society can come only when every member of it recognizes that he is bound to exercise whatever skill or strength or faculty he possesses to its full capacity, not selfishly or for the sake of gain merely, but for the benefit of all. And there should be no restriction on anyone, either legal or social or through association, in regard to his labor or its fruits. If by patient application or natural endowment a man possesses more skill than his fellow or if he chooses to be more industrious he is entitled to the full benefit of it.

Official returns, completed in the office of the Secretary of State show that the electors of all political parties on the ballot in the November election received 435,565 votes, the total number of voters who participated in the election. Of this total vote the first Democratic elector received 215,170, and the last Republican elector received 203,277, a majority for the Democrats of 11,893 over the Republicans. The Prohibitionists came next in the number of votes received, their first elector receiving 6,609 votes. The People's Party followed with 2,511 votes in the State, while the Socialists received 3,602 votes. The first elector on the Social-Labor ticket received 596 votes.

Ordinarily after Thanksgiving turkey takes a drop and the rise in the price at Christmas is never so much as to bring the cost up to the same figure it stood at on the great November holiday. This year, according to all indications turkey will "come as high" on Christmas as on Thanksgiving. Prices are "stiff" already and the demand is big. Turkey raising in the South has come to be quite an important business, and during the part few years many Southern farmers have given up all branches of agricultural endeavor to devote themselves to turkey raising. This season a change in the system of paying for the birds has resulted in the farmer getting his money on the weight instead of by the head, as in past years, which makes it to his interest to raise heavier fowls.

It has been demonstrated that the turkey is a fine destroyer of the boll weevil, the tobacco worm and the tomato worm. Thsy get fat on that sort of diet and keep so with a bit of grain thrown in once in a while and attention to their sleeping quarters. The boll weevil gets busy in the spring and so do the young turkeys. The tomato worms are about the fields at the time the young birds are most zealous in satisfying an appetite that has no bounds. The boll weevil and the worms go into hibernation in the fall just about the time that there is a demand for fat turkeys that can't be satiated. By raising turkeys the farmer gets assistance in keeping down the boll weevil and the tomato worms, which are so destructive. Turkey raising is now one of the most profitable occupations of the Southern farmer.—Ex.

Wall street may be depressed, and speculators may rise and fall. The labor question, with capital and labor so widely apart, is a serious one, but with a fine wheat crop assured, with every indication of a great corn crop, and with cotton promising a record-breaking yield, the country is girding up its loins for another prosperous season.

And this prosperity will come, not from politicians or speculators but from the toil of the man behind the plow, whose labor, rewarded by a bounteous yield, will create a great traffic for the railroads factory and mill, bringing work at a fair wage to millions who will thus be able to spend money not only for the necessaries, but the luxuries of life.

Thus is prosperity's endless chain set moving, and we may fear no prolonged panic, let the conditions be what they may in speculative circles, as long as America's farmers are rewarded some fifty and some hundredfold, by God, who said that by the sweat of his labor shall a man live.

In the strenuous modern life the man is to be congratulated who has the opportunity to earn his living on the farm, untroubled by labor strikes, undismayed by combination of capital. As long as the world lasts, when men must be fed and clothed, and no trust can be made strong enough to permanently depress the prices of farm products below the cost of production. This fact makes the farmer's lot a happy one, and his position becomes more and more independent with the growth of cities, whose toiling millions look to the farm for food and clothing.

Senator Platt, of New York, introduced a bill providing for a reduction of the congressional representation of several Southern States on the ground that many cltizens of those States are deprived of their right to vote. The States which would be affected if the bill becomes a law are Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia and would lessen the membership in the House by nineteen.

CURES STOMACH TROUBLES

THE body gets its life from food properly digested. Healthy digestion means pure blood for the body, but stomach troubles arise from carelessness in eating and stomach disorders upset the entire system. Improperly masticated food sours on the stomach, causing distressing pains, belching and nausea. When over-eating is persisted in the stomach becomes weakened and worn out and dyspepsia claims the victim.

Thedford's Black-Draught cures dyspepsia. It frees the stomach and bowels of congested matter and gives the stomach new life. The stomach is quickly invigorated and the natural stimulation results in a good appetite, with the power to thoroughly digest food.

You can build up your stomach with this mild and natural remedy. Try Thedford's Black-Draught today. You can buy a package from your dealer for 25c. If he does not keep it, send the money to The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., and a package will be mailed you.

My article in the RECORDER certainly must have been misread by my friend Mr. Hall, as he has answered it with an accusation of abuse. I do not believe in one business man abusing another without cause and my relations with Mr. Hall have always been friendly, and I have proof that on several occasions I have sent customers to his shop when I was too busy to shave them. I have never, and do not expect to, cut prices in competion and ask him to name a time and place where we can write an agreement adjusting a price list and do a friendly business as all men should. An evangelist in a little town was trying to give his hearers an idea of the length of time those must suffer the end of whose journey is the terminus of the Broad Road. "My brethren, if a little bird were to dip his beak in the Atlantic ocean, gather up a drop of water and then hop across the continent, not fly, but hop its way, inch by inch, until it reached the broad Pacific, and there deposit its little drop of water, walk back again, dip his beak in the Atlantic, and continue this operation until it had emptied the Atlantic into the Pacific, my brethren it wouldn't yet be sun up in hell." Some shuddered in their seats at the awful word picture, while others of the more zealous brethren cried, "Amen!"

TO INCREASE SALARIES

Estimates For Diplomatic and Consular Service.

Buenos Ayres Is One of the Most Expensive, If Not the Most Expensive Capitals in the World To Live In.

Washington, Dec. 10.—In the estimate for the diplomatic and consular service forwarded to congress by Secretary Hay, through the treasury department, recommendations are made for increases in the salaries of a large number of officials in the service. It is recommended that the salary of the minister to Argentine be increased $2,000, that of the minister resident to Liberia $8,500, and that provision be made for a minister to Roumania and Servia and one for Greece and Montenegro and for a consular agent at Bulgaria. Increased salaries are recommended for the secretaries of legation to Turkey and Switzerland. A third secretary is proposed for the legation to Italy and Austria and new consulates at the following places at the salaries named: Alexandria, $2,500; Belgrade, Servia, $3,000; Bucharest, Roumania, $3,000; Carisbad, Austria, $2,000; Sandokan, Brith, North Borneo, $3,000, and a consulate general at Teheran, Persia, at $3,000. An increased allowance of $2,000 for bringing home criminals is asked, also $50,000 for carrying on the work of delimiting the boundary line between the United States and Canada.

In recommending the increase for the minister to Argentine, Mr. Hay submits a letter written from Buenos Ayres by Mr. Barrett, while minister to that country, saying:

"After being here five days and pricing a hundred things from house rent down to a collar, I am convinced that this is one of the most expensive, if not the most expensive capitals in the world."

Houses that rent for $250 a month in Washington, he said, are held at $350 there. He quoted prices of a list of articles as obtained at a department store in Buenos Ayres, among which the prices of linen shirts are given at $44 to $66 gold per dozen. Mr. Barrett said he paid $110 for a dozen that proved very inferior. Among other articles mentioned and prices were rubber boots, $13 to $35 gold, derby hats $6.38, silk hats $13.20, with other things in proportion. Increases were recommended in the salaries of a large number of consulates. Increases of $20,000 in the aggregate in allowance for clerk hire is recommended for 39 consular offices.

SHORT PAID LETTERS.

Many of Them Sent From the United States to Great Britain.

Washington, Dec. 10.—The British government has notified this country that a larger percentage of short paid letters reaching land from the United States than from any other country. Many of these letters are refused by the persons to whom they are addressed because of the amount of extra charges at destination, double the amount of the deficiency being required on delivery. The domestic postage rate is two cents an ounce, while the foreign postage is five cents for a half ounce. Carelessness in noting these rates is the cause of most of the trouble.

FOR INSUBORDINATION.

Money Order Clerk in New York Post Office Suspended.

New York, Dec. 10.—Waldo W. Valentine, a clerk in the money order department of the New York post office, has been suspended for insubordination. In consequence, the postmaster general, it is understood, will have a test case before him shortly, as the claim is made that Valentine's refusal to work more than eight hours a day was the basis for his suspension and the preferring of charges against him. Valentine, the post office officials say, does not come under the law which makes eight hours the day's work of a letter carrier.

HIDEOUS CRIME.

An Entire Family Murdered and the Dwelling Set on Fire.

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 9.—A special from Edgefield, S. C., says: A most hideous crime occurred at Trenton on Wednesday night, equal in horror to the State's [illegible] of the generally accepted theory be true that the victims were murdered before the house was fired. At 5 o'clock Thursday morning the residence of B. B. Hughes, centrally located in the town, was discovered to be on fire. Neighbors rushed to the scene, but the fire had progressed so far that entrance to the house was impossible. As soon as the fire had died down searchers found the charred and almost unrecognizable bodies of the entire family, consisting of Mr. Hughes, his wife Eva and two young daughters, Emmie, aged 19, and Hattie, 14 years of age. Mr. Hughes' body lay just below where had been situated the door leading from his room to the hall with a bullet hole through his head. A pistol with one empty chamber lay nearby. Part of his charred clothes were on his person, showing that he was dressed at the time he met death. The body of his wife was on the bed springs while those of the young ladies were similarly situated.

The skulls of these three were crushed as if hit by an ax or some blunt instrument. The bodies occupied a most natural position with nothing to indicate a struggle, showing that they had been killed in sleep.

A coroner's jury was impaneled but as yet no testimony has been taken, it being thought best to await further developments. It was said that three tracks were discovered leading from the field up to the rear of the house. The county bloodhounds were secured and put on the trail, but this has availed nothing. One theory is that the house was entered for the purpose of robbery.

Excitement runs high, but nothing rash will be done. Upon the request of Solicitor Thurmond, Gov. Heyward has offered a reward for the apprehension of the guilty parties.

RUSSIAN WARSHIPS.

All Cruisers and Battleships at Port Arthur Destroyed.

Only Torpedo Boat Destroyers Are Left Intact—Japanese Will Now Turn Their Attention to Them and the Transports.

London, Dec. 9.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent before Port Arthur telegraphs that all of the Russian battleships and cruisers, together with the gunboats Gilliak and Fusadneck, were sunk or destroyed and that only the torpedo boat destroyers remain intact.

According to special dispatches from Tokio and Shanghai giving unofficial reports, the crews of all the Russian war vessels in the harbor of Port Arthur were landed and apparently no effort was made to move the vessels. The Japanese will now turn their attention to the torpedo boat destroyers and when these have been destroyed the guns will be directed against steamers and transports in the harbor.

The same correspondent states that Russians at Port Arthur on December 7, resumed mine clearing operations, presumably to enable the torpedo boat destroyers to attempt to escape and join the Baltic squadron.

London, Dec. 10.—The Daily Telegraph's Tien-Tsin correspondent reports that Gen. Oku, after a three days' artillery engagement, drove the Russians on Sunday out of the small forty island of Gushan, in the river, ten miles north of Liao Yang. The Russians, it is added, abandoned a quantity of supplies and several guns and retired to a position eight miles northwest from whence they heavily bombarded the Japanese, setting fire, on Tuesday, to kerosene storehouses and causing a great conflagration which did not cease till Wednesday. The Japanese are still gallantly holding the island with a handful of men. Their casualties, it is alleged, number 5,000.

According to the Morning Post's Shanghai dispatches the Port Arthur forces, with the exception of those manning the forts, have already retreated to Laotie mountain.

WILL BE VIGOROUSLY PRESSED.

Enlargement of the Powers of Interstate Commerce Commission.

Washington, Dec. 10.—Enlargement of powers of the inter-state commerce commission is one of the questions which will be pressed vigorously at the present session of congress. It can be said that in the mind of President Roosevelt no problem more important than this to all the people of the country is likely to engage the attention of congress this winter. In conference with members of both the senate and the house of representatives the president has emphasized the arguments he advanced in his message in favor of an extension of the powers of the inter-state commerce commission.

THE FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Second Session.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Senate—The senate was in session for more than two hours Tuesday and in addition to listening to the reading of the president's message received a preliminary report from the merchant marine commission, witnessed the induction of Senators Knox and Crane into office and in executive session referred the presidential nominations to the proper committees. The reading of the commissions of the two new senators attracted more attention than usual in such cases on account of their prominence, and senators generally did not fail to note the peculiar wording of Gov. Pennypacker's communication, wherein conferred the office of senator upon Mr. Knox, employing him to hold it with all its emoluments and privileges until the next meeting of the legislature of the state "if he shall so long behave himself well."

House.—After listening to the reading of the president's annual message Tuesday the house adjourned until Wednesday. During the first ten minutes of the session, two minor routine matters were disposed of. Representative Hill (Ct.) Tuesday introduced a bill providing for the redemption of United States treasury notes known as silver certificates in gold coin and directing the secretary of the treasury to set apart $150,000,000 in gold and bullion for the purpose. The act makes it the duty of the secretary of the treasury to maintain gold reserve corresponding to not less than 35 per cent. of all United States notes in circulation. For the debt incurred by the redemption of the notes, the secretary of the treasury is to issue bonds of $50 or any multiple bearing interest at 3 per cent.

Washington, Dec. 8.—Senate.—The senate Wednesday reached a decision to vote on the Philippine civil government bill providing for the construction of railroads in the islands on the 15th instant, and in addition transacted considerable other business. Senator Platt (N. Y.) created something of a stir by introducing a bill providing for a reduction of the congressional representation of the southern states on the ground that many of the citizens of those states are deprived of their right to vote and Mr. Scott plunged the senate into an exceptionally early debate by attempting to secure the passage of the bill granting pensions to the telegraph operators of the civil war. A large number of bills and joint resolutions were introduced and many petitions were presented. The discussion of the time for voting on the Philippine bill brought out the fact that there is a general understanding that the Christmas holiday recess will begin on the 19th instant. Senator Proctor introduced a bill providing for the repeal of the law which "prohibits the sale of beer in any post exchange or canteen at posts located in states where such sale is not prohibited by the law of the state." For the erection in the District of Columbia of a monument to Benjamin Franklin, Senator Hale introduced a bill providing for an appropriation of $100,000.

House.—A number of bills were introduced Wednesday, but no action of general importance was taken.

Washington, Dec. 9.—Senate.—The senate held only a short session on Thursday and adjourned until Monday. An attempt to secure consideration of the pure food bill was defeated by a demand of Mr. Aldrich that the bill be read at length, which brought an objection from Tillman, who did not want the time consumed. Mr. Tillman brought the case of William D. Crum, the colored man nominated for collector of Charleston, S. C., into prominence by asking for a report from the committee on judiciary as to the status of recess appointments.

House.—The annual fight on the civil service commission was begun in the house Thursday during consideration of the legislative appropriation bill. The opposition came from Messrs. Bartlett (Ga.), Hepburn (Ia.) and Grosvenor (O.). Mr. Hepburn moved to strike out the entire appropriation for the commission and its force of clerks at the same time denouncing the civil service as not having improved since the days of the spoils system, but on the contrary, as growing less and less efficient.

Washington, Dec. 10.—House.—The house Friday passed the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill practically as it came from the committee and adjourned until Monday. The civil service commission provisions disposed of, there was no long debate on any item Friday. Throughout the session the policy retrenchment held full sway and all attempts to increase salaries failed. The house passed a resolution to adjourn on December 21 until January 4, 1905, for the usual Christmas holiday. Adjourned until Monday.

DIPLOMATS AND THE CABINET.

The President Expects All to Send in Their Resignations.

Washington, Dec. 10.—That there may be changes in the diplomatic service and possibly in the cabinet, is evident from a statement made by a high official of the state department Friday replying to an inquiry in which he said that the president expects all the members of his cabinet and all ambassadors and ministers to send in their resignations between now and the 4th of March next. No official announcement of this expectation has been made nor is one deemed necessary.

The Pure Food Bill.

Washington, Dec. 10.—When the senate meets on Monday Senator Hepburn, during the morning hour, will move for unanimous consent to take up the pure food bill. It I said an agreement has been reached consider the measure.

Miss Hapgood tells how she escaped an awful operation by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for four years with what the doctors called Salpingitis (inflammation of the fallopian tubes and ovaritis), which is a most distressing and painful ailment, affecting all the surrounding parts, undermining the constitution, and sapping the life forces. If you had seen me a year ago, before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and had noticed the sunken eyes, sallow complexion, and general emaciated condition, and compared that person with me as I am today, robust, hearty and well, you would not wonder that I feel thankful to you and your wonderful medicine, which restored me to new life and health in five months, and saved me from an awful operation."—MISS IRENE HAPGOOD, 1022 Sandwich St. Windsor, Ont.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Ovaritis or inflammation of the ovaries or fallopian tubes which adjoin the ovaries may result from sudden stopping of the monthly flow, from inflammation of the womb, and many other causes. The slightest indication of trouble with the ovaries, indicated by dull throbbing pain in the side, accompanied by heat and shooting pains, should claim your instant attention. It will not cure itself, and a hospital operation, with all its terrors, may easily result from neglect.

FLOCKING INTO CANADA

IMMIGRATION FROM DAKOTA AND ADJOINING STATES.

Major Edwards, United States Consul-General at Montreal, Describes the Movement as Due to Scarcity of Land.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—Major Allison Edwards, United States Consul-General, who returned to-day from a visit to his home at Fargo, North Dakota, said in an interview: "The proper way to describe the manner in which the people of North Dakota are coming over into Western Canada is to say they are coming over in droves. Among the people there did not seem to be any thought of there being a boundary line at all. It is simply a question," added the major, "of there not being any more land in North Dakota and the surrounding States, and the people are flocking to Canada to get good farms. Naturally the number that will come over will increase all the time, and I may say the people you are getting are the best people in the west. They are well supplied with money and are well acquainted with the conditions under which they will have to work." The agents of the Government located at different points in the United States are prepared to give the fullest information regarding homestead and other lands.

THE POST OFFICE.

Annual Report of Postmaster General Robert J. Wynne.

Economy and Strict Accountability Have Been Enforced in All [illegible] as of the Service Says the Report.

Washington, Dec. 12.—The annual report of Postmaster General Robert J. Wynne was made public Sunday. It records a year of most successful administration.

Postal revenues have increased. Salutary changes in the classification of the mails have been carried out greatly to the benefit of the service. Amendments to regulations facilitating the handling of mercantile packages in bulk have been put into effect. At home and abroad postal facilities have been extended. Exchange of money orders with foreign countries has been simplified and cheapened. Parcels-post conventions were extended to European countries as an experiment with Germany five years ago. They have been extended to Japan and the British colony of Hong-Kong to meet changes of trade conditions in the far east; also to Norway.

Economy and strict accountability have been enforced in all branches of the service. While the so-called deficit of $8,779,492—that is to say, the excess of expenditures over receipts—is greater by $4,219,447 than for the fiscal year 1903, it must be borne in mind that the expenditure authorized for the extension and maintenance of the rural free delivery service during the past fiscal year was $4,902,237 greater than the preceding year.

For facility of reference the chief recommendations contained in this report requiring action of congress to give them effect are here summarized:

That proper legislation be enacted to acquire the title of block No. 324 in the city of Washington, for the purpose of erecting an annex to the post office department building.

An amendment to existing law so as to provide for the termination of official bonds of post office officials.

That third and fourth class mail matter be consolidated at the rate of postage now paid on third class mail matter—1 cent for each 2 ounces.

That consideration be given to the recommendation that congress fix a rate of 3 cents per pound, or any fractional part thereof, on packages not exceeding 5 pounds mailed at the distributing post office of any rural free delivery route for delivery to a patron on said route. This to apply only to packages deposited at the local post office for delivery to patrons on routes emanating from that office, and not to mail transmitted from one office to another.

That the inter-state commerce law be amended to prohibit telegraph and express companies, or any of their employes, from aiding and abetting in the green-goods or lottery swindles or any other scheme carried on partly by mail and partly by common carrier, in violation of the postal laws.

That the office of the assistant attorney general for the post office department be made presidential, and the salary attached thereto increased to $5,000 per annum.

That the appropriation of $5,000, provided for the publication of the opinions of the assistant attorney general for the post office department, be increased to $15,000.

That congress consider the propriety of granting an annuity to railway post office clerks who are permanently disabled in the line of duty.

To provide penalties for the sending of dangerous or destructive objects or matter in the mails.

That penalty be provided for the use of counterfeit postmarking stamps for the improper certification of pension vouchers or for any other purpose.

That the establishment or maintenance of private letter boxes without authorization of the post office department be prohibited.

THE LATE ELECTION.

Roosevelt Polled Largest Vote Ever Given For a President.

New York, Dec. 12.—A canvass by the New York Times of the popular vote at the last presidential election is complete except as to one county in Tennessee and four counties in Michigan, for which estimates are given, shows that President Roosevelt defeated Judge Parker by 2,246,169. He polled the largest vote ever given for a president of the United States, 7,640,560. This is more than 400,000 in excess of the vote cast for McKinley in 1900.

The total vote is given as 13,534,119 and that for each of the presidential candidates is given as follows: Roosevelt, rep., 7,640,560; Parker, dem., 5,094,391; Debs, soc., 392,857; Swallow, pro., 248,411; Watson, pop., 124,381; Corregan, S. L., 33,519.

The electoral vote will be 336 for Roosevelt and 140 for Parker.

STORM AT SEA.

Terrible Experience of Sailors—Several Lost Their Lives.

Highland Light, Mass., Dec. 12.—Four of the 20 members of the crew of the Boston fishing schooner Fish Hawk lost their lives Saturday night after deserting their vessel which had struck and was pounding heavily on Peaked Hill bars at the north end of Cape Cod. Five others, including Capt. Bly, who followed their four companions over the side, had a severe six hours tussle against a freezing sea and gale in a small dory, but managed to reach Provincetown harbor. The deaths and suffering would have been avoided had all stayed by their vessel, which had a miraculous escape and four hours later was safely anchored in Provincetown harbor.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 12.—The three-masted schooner Montana, Capt. Boyce, from New York for Charleston, S. C., with a cargo of salt (or probably coal), stranded at 11 p. m. Saturday night at Pea Island, N. C., life saving station, 50 miles north of Capt Hatteras, during a heavy northerly gale. Within 20 minutes after the vessel stranded she was so full of water that the crew, consisting of Capt. Boyce and six men, were forced to take to the rigging, where they remained until 2 p. m. Sunday, when six of the seven men were rescued by crews of Pea Island, New Inlet and Bodies island life saving stations. One man, Henry Edwards, was frozen to death and was lashed in the rigging in such a manner that he could not be reached and his body is still aboard the ship, hanging in the rigging, head downward.

The rescued crew are now at the Pea Island life saving station. Great difficulty was experienced in landing the crew owing to the fact that the vessel had sunk and a heavy sea was running at the time. The freezing weather hampered the work of rescue and the seamen were so overcome by exposure and exhaustion that only two of the men in the rigging were able to assist in hauling the whip line aboard the vessel.

New York, Dec. 12.—With her bow stove in, the marine telegraph disabled and forward windlass twisted, the Belgravia, of the Hamburg-American line, arrived from Cuxhaven Sunday with tales of a six-hour experience in a hurricane that threw 1,200 of her 1,870 steerage passengers into a panic December 6. The 1,200 Polish and Russian refugees were sent here by London societies. According to Capt. Magin, on Tuesday afternoon the Belgravia ran into a hurricane, the force of which could not be measured by the wind registering gage. Capt. Magin estimated that at its height there was a wind velocity of 120 miles an hour.

A great wave swept over the bow of the vessel at midnight of the 6th, tearing out the shield, demolishing the marine telegraph, tearing away the starboard hawse port forward and smashing the windlass. It was then that the fear below decks, which had been continuous, arose to panic.

New York, Dec. 12.—Bringing reports of heavy seas and long continued stormy weather, the ocean liners that were detained outside the bar by Saturday's snow storm came into port Sunday morning. There were eight steamers, including the New York, the Lucania, the Hanover and the Belgravia in this storm-bound fleet, and delayed on board them were 521 cabin passengers and 4,934 steerage passengers.

The Lucania had a tempestuous voyage of six days, six hours and 58 minutes from Queenstowns, and was then delayed outside the bar 16 hours.

Kansas City, Dec. 12.—A monument over the grave of Jim Bridger, the famous guide and explorer who discovered Great Salt Lake and Yellowstone park, and who opened the overland trail, was dedicated in Mount Washington cemetery Sunday. It was erected by Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, of New York, the engineer, who located the Union Pacific railroad, and who followed the route advised by Bridger. The monument is a massive block of rough hewn gray granite with the head of the scout in bas relief and a chronicle of his most noteworthy achievements. Gen. Dodge was unable to participate in the excrcises owing to sickness, but the address he had prepared, an affectionate eulogy of the old plainsman, was read, and a great-granddaughter of Bridger unveiled the stone.

AT LEAST SHE OUGHT TO HAVE A CARNEGIE MEDAL.

Perhaps Andrew Would Not Begrudge Her This.

WILL STAY IN JAIL.

Mrs. Chadwick's Lawyers Deem It Not Advisable to Get Bail.

Should She Be Held For the Federal Grand Jury, One of the Greatest Legal Battles in Years Will Follow.

New York, Dec. 9.—Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick Thursday night occupied one of the scantily furnished cells in the Tombs. After a fruitless search all day for $15,000 bail, her attorneys gave up the fight Thursday night, and Philip Carpenter, her chief counsel, stood in the corridor of the Federal building at 9 o'clock when United States Marshal Henkel threw open the double doors of his office and led the woman out on the way to prison.

To add to her cup of woe, it was learned Thursday night that a charge of forgery would very likely be made against the woman in Ohio, based on the Carnegie notes and other papers given as securities for loans.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 9.—County Prosecuting Attorney Keeler received this message, signed "Andrew Carnegie," Thursday:

"Never signed such notes. Have no notes out. Have not issued a note in many years. Hope you can arrange to execute affidavit here."

San Francisco, Dec. 9.—Mrs. Alice M. York, who resides at 1030 Geary street, claims to be Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick's sister, and she states that Mrs. Chadwick is identical with Mme. Devere, who served a term in the Ohio penitenelary for forgery. Mrs. York, who is a widow with two daughters, came here 18 months ago from Cleveland.

New York, Dec. 10.—After a day full of disagreement with her counsel as to whether she should waive examination and go to Cleveland, Mrs. Chadwick finally consented to remain another night in the Tombs, but expressed the hope that she might leave there Saturday.

He also declined to discuss the report from Cleveland to the effect that the securities which have been held by Iri Reynolds for Mrs. Chadwick were valueless. Mr. Carpenter was asked to make a statement regarding the nature of the securities in view of the fact that the report said that while their face value was $5,000,000, the actual value was nothing. He was also asked to explain the method by which his client had induced Mr. Reynolds and others to accept the alleged worthless papers at their face value. His only reply was, "I have absolutely nothing whatever to say in regard to the matter."

Cleveland, O., Dec. 10.—After hearing two witnesses in the Chadwick case the grand jury adjourned Friday afternoon until Monday morning. The witnesses Friday were L. T. Whitney, a director, and A. B. Spear, cashier of the Citizens' National bank of Oberlin. At the end of the hearing Prosecutor Keeler said the testimony gave him jurisdiction in the alleged forgery case because the notes were negotiated in this county. Friday's hearing was brief because of the non-arrival of witnesses, the most important of which was C. T. Beckwith, president of the Citizens' National bank, who was unable to be present because of illness. Prosecutor Keeler hopes that he will be able to appear Monday. Another important witness expected Monday is Receiver Lyon, of the Oberlin bank.

New York, Dec. 12.—From present indications it is extremely unlikely that any attempt will be made to obtain bail for Mrs. Chadwick, who has been in the Tombs since last Thursday night, on a charge of aiding and abetting bank officials in the embezzlement of $12,500. She was held under $15,000 bail. A person, who is in a position to know the various moves in the Chadwick case, in an interview said, Sunday:

"Despite all reports to the contrary, no active efforts have been made to obtain bail for Mrs. Chadwick in this city. There are plenty of people here who would sign her bond if asked, but the fact is, it is not deemed advisable for Mrs. Chadwick to leave the city prison at present. If she were released on bail the government could demand 24 hours in which to examine her surety. Meanwhile the government attorneys could telegraph the Cleveland authorities and before the 24 hours had expired could have additional charges sent here, so that it would be necessary to procure new bail.

"This proceedure could be carried out as long as the government officials thought they had charges. Again, there might come a conflict in authority. A county grand jury might find an indictment against Mrs. Chadwick and then the matter of extradition would come up in a different light from any yet suggested."

Cleveland, O., Dec. 12.—According to the most accurate estimate of the estate of Mrs. Chadwick that is possible, before the receiver has investigated her assets and reported his findings to the court, her creditors as a whole will receive about one and one-half mills on the dollar. What lends additional interest to this showing, from the creditors' standpoint, is that one man, Iri Reynolds, will receive the whole of the assets visible at the present time. There may be funds in reserve somewhere, as there may be additional creditors who have not yet announced that Mrs. Chadwick is indebted to them, but it is not expected by bankers and attorneys of this city, who have the greatest knowledge of her affairs that any more large loans will be developed.

The extent of her operations is now believed to be approximately as follows:

Secured from Citizens' National bank of Oberlin, and various sources in and about Lorain county, Ohio, $500,000.

Borrowed from Herbert D. Newton, $190,000.

Borrowed from business men in Pittsburg, $500,000.

Total, $1,190,000.

Against this stands security of known value on one note amounting to $1,800, which is held by Iri Reynolds.

The amount of money received by Mrs. Chadwick in Pittsburg may run as high as $800,000, but it is believed that a portion of this sum is a bonus promised by her for an original loan of at least $500,000. Her creditor there figures that she is indebted to him for the larger amount, while she has admitted that she owes $500,000.

Secretary Iri Reynolds, of the Wade Park bank, declared Sunday night that his implicit belief in the statements made to him by Mrs. Chadwick in which she declared herself to be the daughter of Andrew Carnegie, was the impelling cause of his financial dealing with her.

"She told me," said Mr. Reynolds, "that she was the illegitimate daughter of Andrew Carnegie, and I believed her. I never doubted her story until on the occasion of my last visit to New York, when Mr. Squire came to me and declared that all the securities she had given me as the notes of Andrew Carnegie were worthless. It was only then that I doubted her. Before that I had refused to say anything about her or her affairs because I deemed it my duty to protect her in the story of her birth as she had give it to me."

INTERESTING STATE NEWS

MARCUM DAMAGE CASE.

A Motion to Continue the Trial Was Overruled.

Winchester, Ky., Dec. 9.—After some delay caused by the effort of the defense to obtain a continuance a jury was secured in the Marcum damage case Thursday. The widow of James B. Marcum is suing Judge James Hargis, Alex P. Hargis, Sheriff Ed Callahan and B. F. French, all of Breathitt county, for $100,000 damages on account of their alleged complicity in the assassination of her husband.

When the case was called an attempt was made by the defense to secure a continuance on the ground that Judge Hargis, although present, was too ill to stand trial. The motion was overruled. The remainder of the day was occupied in the selection of the jury. Before adjourning court Judge Benton issued attachments for Mose Feltner, Sam Fields and Ruck Cottongame, three important witnesses for the plaintiff. Mrs. Marcum, in an affidavit has sworn that these witnesses were intimidated and enticed away to prevent their appearance in her behalf.

Winchester, Ky., Dec. 10.—As a result of the defense's motion Thursday for a continuance on account of the illness of Judge James Hargis, one of the defendants, Judge Benton Friday passed the $100,000 Marcum damage case until Monday. All the jurors are farmers, and all are democrats except two. Nothing has been heard from the missing witnesses, Fields, Feltner and Cottongane, whom Mrs. Marcum alleges were bribed and enticed away.

APPELLATE COURT.

It Affirms the Judgment Against the American Book Co.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 8.—The legislative act appropriating $15,000 a year to the Kentucky Children's Home society, was held by the court of appeals Wednesday to be constitutional. The attorney general had held that it was unconstitutional, and the state auditor refusing to pay the amount, suit was brought to settle the question.

The court affirmed the judgment of the Mason circuit court for $10,000 and 10 per cent. damages in the case of the American Book Co. vs. Wells. The company had given bond for $10,000 not to sell school books in Mason county at a higher rate than the same books were sold in other states. It was proved on trial that the books were sold in Ohio for a less amount than was charged the Mason county children, so the bond was declared forfeited.

The court reversed the case of W. W. Yates vs. the city of Covington. Yates sued for damages for injuries received from a fall on a defective crossing. The court gives him a new trial on the ground that testimony as to previous falls and accidents at the same crossing should have been admitted by the judge.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Judge Lassing and deputy sheriff Hume arrived from Walton about 10 a. m. Monday, to start the December term of the Boone circuit court. Very few people braved the elements to come to town that morning except those who had been summoned as grand jurors, and when the Judge's gavel fell and sheriff Allphin proceeded to open court there was a small crowd in the court room. Nothing was done Monday except to organize the grand jury and call over the old docket. The grand jury is composed as follows:

The official canvass of the vote in Pima county reveals the fact that Chas. O. Rouse is the only democrat not submerged by the Republican tidal wave which swept over that county on the 8th of November. His victory was due to his attractive personality, unimpeachable character and unquestionable fitness for the position he sought, a combination of vote-winning qualities that are invincible. The victor is a son of Judge Owen T. Rouse, is a graduate of the University of Arizona and one of the most successful young business men in Tucson. The Blade tips its editorial hat to Charlie and congratulates the voters of Pima on their good judgment.—Blade, Florence, Arizona.

Mr. Rouse is a son of Thomas Rouse, a native of this county. He visited this county, last winter, and made many friends during a brief stay.

The local Veterinary Association held a very interesting meeting last Saturday night. Dr. L. H. Crisler, who stands at the head of the profession in this county, was to have delivered the principal address, but professional duties forbid his presence. The meeting was called to order by ex-county Judge C. C. Roberts, who stated that in the absence of Dr. Crisler the proceedings of the meeting were bound to lose much of their interest. He then introduced the subject which the society was to discuss, saying it was commonly known as Hollow Horn. O. P. Conner was the first speaker. He introduced his remarks by saying that Hollow Horn was unknown to the writers of veterinary text books, but declared that there is such a disease, many cases of which he had seen and treated successfully by boring a hole in the animal's horns and filling the cavities with turpentine. Judge Roberts then took the stand and endorsed all that Mr. Conner had said and reported a remarkable case which he treated. He said several years ago one of his cows had gone into a decline, having been indisposed several days before he took her case in hand. Having made a thorough examination he discovered she was afflicted with Hollow Horn. He secured a half inch bit with which he bored her horns and poured into the cavity of each a quart of linseed oil and then plugged the holes he had made. This was all done before he discovered that he had used oil instead of the standard medicine, turpentine. However, the cow recovered and they began using her milk, which was unfit for use it having a well defined flavor of the oil, and it was many weeks before the milk returned to its normal condition. He advises against the use of oil instead of turpentine when treating the disease. James A Duncan was the next speaker, and is a firm believer that cattle have hollow horn and some times hollow tails. He said he owned a cow which had hollow horn. He bored her horns and put turpentine in them. In a few hours the cow tried to get up, raising her fore quarters first which was unnatural, a cow always raising her hind quarters first. It occurred to him that she might have hollow tail also, which an examination proved to be the case. He split the tail and pored turpentine into the cavity and in a few hours she got up in the proper manner, and recovered in a short time.

The meeting decided that the sure way to stamp out the disease is to dehorn cattle and then bob their tails.

At the next meeting the question to be considered is: Can a cow lose her cud?

GAMES FOR CHRISTMAS TIME.

BACK to the old farm home rush children and grandchildren for the Christmas time. Truly it is the merriest season of all the year, when brothers and sisters and cousins gather at grandma's for the holidays. They come from city and village and country, and grandfather meets the trains and takes each party as it arrives out to the farm in the great bob-sled, behind his best team, and that is the first pleasure of the Christmas outing, or, rather, the second, as the anticipation has been the first.

The cousins, many of them, are strangers, or practically so to each other, and to make the family party a success they must be entertained in a way that will get them thoroughly acquainted, and grandmother and grandfather, as hostess and host, must provide entertainment of a sort that will accomplish this. At the same time the entertainment must recall the old home days to the elders, so what is more appropriate than the old farm games that are ever new. There must be something for every minute of the waking hours to prevent the formation of cliques that would breed antagonisms among the various sets of cousins, and there must be enough of variety to keep all interested.

Grandfather takes hold of the arrangements for the out-door games. Above all things, there must be a hitching party, for the children from the city know none of its pleasures. Again the big bob-sled comes into play, and into its commodious box are tucked all the wee mites of the party, with an abundance of hay and warm comforters. Behind the big sled are hitched several small hand sleds, the smallest one of all being at the extreme end of the line, and onto these crowd the boys and girls, and oftentimes some of their parents, who have not forgotten the joys of such a frolic. Then away they go, up hill and down over all sorts of roads and around sharp corners. And at the sharp corners is where the greatest fun comes in, for, with the horses going at a good gallop, the small sled at the end of the string is almost sure to upset and spill its occupants into the drifts beside the road. To be sure, all will want the honor and excitement of riding on that last sled, and to avoid controversy grandfather must have arranged a schedule so as to give each one a chance at it, and must try to be impartial in the spilling of them into the snow drifts.

THE FUN OF A HITCHING PARTY.

Another amusement that grandfather can take charge of might be called a fox hunt, only there is no fox, and the trail must be marked by bits of paper scattered along. If the snow is deep it is not practical to make the trail too long, or into the deep drifts, but should follow marked paths, but when the snow is not deep it may go anywhere about the farm. The hunters must follow the trail by the bits of scattered paper, and at the goal there should be a little prize for the winner, though not one of sufficient value to make the less fortunate ones feel badly at not having won.

Of course grandfather and grandmother will have little presents for all the children, and it adds to the interest to have a Christmas tree for them, but not one of the ordinary sort that is set up in the parlor. Instead, if the weather is not too severe, it should be out of doors, and any orchard or shade tree that is not too high may serve as the regulation evergreen. If night is chosen as the time for the Christmas tree festivities, a few lanterns may serve the purpose of candles, and the children should climb the ladder in search of their own presents. Of course the boys, as the better climbers, should be made to climb the higher limbs for their presents.

For grandmother's part, inside the house there are many games in which all can engage. The games should be simple, so that they may be readily understood. The old-fashioned country games are by far the best for such an occasion.

Blindman's buff needs no explanation, and is a jolly way in which to pass an hour's time, but cannot be used too long, or the children will tire of it. Another game that is less noisy is blindman's wand, in which the parties playing form a circle about the one who is blindfolded. The blindfolded one has a cane or small stick, and after the others have circled about him to the accompaniment of any well known song, he points his wand at one in the circle and imitates the noise made by some animal. The one pointed to must repeat the noise, disguising his voice so that he may not be known. Three times may the test be repeated, imitating a different animal each time. If at the end of the three tests the blindfolded one is still undecided as to who he is pointing to he may run his wand over him and find out in that way, if possible. If he guesses who it is places are changed and the game begins over again.

Christmas candles sound Christmasy, and will be remembered by the elders as one of the pleasures of long ago. A lighted candle is placed upon a small table, when one person is blindfolded and stationed with his back to the candle, and close to it. He is then to take four steps forward, turn around three times and return and blow out the candle. Simple as the game is, it will afford amusement for an hour on Christmas eve.

If grandfather wishes to provide something especially for the boys, and has a big barn, he can get up a series of races, at which the girls will be interested spectators. A three-legged race, in which the legs of two contestants are tied together, will be exceedingly funny, especially to the onlookers. Another is a sack race, in which the contestants are encased from the waist down, or, if the sacks are long enough, from the neck down. Thus prepared, they are given a certain distance to go, and are prepared to cover the distance in any way they can quickest, as, for example, jumping or rolling. A potato race, or an egg race, is yet another game which will furnish great amusement. In these there is laid out on the barn floor a row of potatoes or eggs for each contestant, and these must be carried one at a time and deposited in a basket or box. In case of eggs being used the breaking of one of them loses the race. The boys will also enjoy a pig race. For the purpose a pig for each boy should be released in a room in the barn, and the boys be given each a designated pig to catch. It may be hard on the pigs, but it will be great sport for the boys and the audience.

Christmas night in the house is the gayest time of all the holiday season. Grandmother has prepared for it, and the last trace of embarrassment has worn away from the shyest of the youngsters. "Bob apple" is a good beginning for the evening. Place a number of apples in a bowl of water and let each have a try at catching one of them by the stem with their teeth. Wet faces and soiled dresses will be fully compensated for in the amount of fun that is had. Later, a hunt through grandomther's garret will provide the necessaries for Christmas mummers, in which old Father Christmas leads the revellers, composed of such characters as Dame Plum Pudding, Sir Loin of Beef, Miss Pumpkin Pie, etc. Charades and shadow shows follow in rapid succession, and then, as a climax, comes a Virginia reel, in which old and young participate. Then the singing of a Christmas carol, and the happy guests are off to bed and pleasant dreams.

When grandfather's big sled carries them back to the trains that are to distribute them to their far-away homes they will vote this the merriest Christmas of all they have had, and grandfather and grandmother will wish that Christmas might last throughout all the year.

A Costly Experiment.

Crawford—Instead of buying you a Christmas present, why don't you have your wife make you something with her own hands?

Crabshaw—Can't afford it. She once made me a one-dollar-forty-nine-cent smoking jacket, and the materials she bought cost me the least part of a ten-spot.—Judge.

The Stable or the Inn?

Christmas Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Elson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Dec. 18, 1904.

Text: "And she brought forth her first-born son; and she wrapped Him in swaddling clothes and laid Him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn."—Luke 2:7.

WE GO back to that first Christmas night for the inspiration for our Christmas message. The centuries that have come and gone since that night when God's Son came to earth to dwell among men have witnessed the marvelous spread of the Gospel, and the almost universal recognition among the progressive and enlightened nations of the earth of the fact of Jesus' advent into the world as a vicarious mission. We speak of the Christian nations, and mean those nations which have been dominated by the enlightened spirit of righteousness and truth of which Jesus was the expression and exponent. The mustard seed has grown to be the great tree, spreading its branches everywhere, and the nations—the birds of the air—have found lodgment therein. To-day the Christmas bells ring round the earth, and peal forth their message of joy and good cheer, even though the notes of its truest message often are not heard. A large part of the world to-day has its Christmas, but has it the Christ? It celebrates the crowning event of the ages, but does it appreciate all that that celebration should mean? Is it the stable where the Christ has been given place and welcome? or is it the inn crowded, and busy, and resting in ease and comfort with no place or provision made for the Christ? Our text suggests contrasts so sharp and painful that we cannot but be impressed by them as we meditate thereon. The stable and the inn. The one for the beast, the other for man. The one poor and cheerless and comfortless, the other fitted at least with the common comforts and conveniences which could minister to the needs of man. The one the only place where the Son of God could find shelter, the other the place which was so crowded and filled that it shut out the Christ.

THE fact that Christmas, the anniversary of the birth of Christ, is celebrated is not enough. One may share in all the activities and pleasures of the day, and still be an inmate of the inn, and a stranger to the true significance of the birth in the stable. One may hear the wonderful Divine mystery whereby the Son of God left Heaven and became flesh through the operation of the Holy Spirit, and still be blind to the Divine light that filled the stable recesses. Think you not that the inn was astir next day with the news of the events which had transpired in the stable? Think you not that every one was talking of the Babe in the manger, of the story of the shepherds and their visit in the early morning? Ere the morning's sun had climbed the Bethlehem hills and gilded the distant mountain heights with its golden splendor, I feel sure that the mighty secret of that stable became known not only to all in the inn, but to all in the little village of Bethlehem. And so to-day the story of the birth of the Christ is known and rehearsed among men, they celebrate the event with eagerness and joy, and still the Christ is absent, kept out by the crowded condition of the inn. The news of the birth of Jesus has reached the inn and it freely joins in the celebration of the event, but the stable where room is found for Jesus is the place where the true celebration is held. You may be content with the festivities of the inn, and never care to enter into the deeper joys of the stable where Jesus is. As of old, it is the question of the stable or the inn. Where are you content to celebrate the Christmas festival? I verily believe the saddest day in Heaven is Christmas day, because as the angelic hosts look upon earth they behold all manner of revelry and festivities in the name of Jesus, while the One Whose birthday it is is shut out. No place for Him in the inn. There is too much going on. There are too many plans laid. There are too many other friends to be entertained. And so it is the inn instead of the stable. The Christ is shut out!

SOME one has told the story of a lady who, one Christmas eve, was walking in the beautiful city of Berlin. She stopped to look at the large store window, where was laid out in elaborate display the scene of the lowly stable at Bethlehem. Before the window stood two little girls, their faces beaming with pleasure, while they talked to another little girl between them, and around whom they had their arms. This dear child was quite blind, and to her poor sightless eyes the pretty window told no story. But the loving little friends told the blind child of the rude stable, the hay, the cows and the sheep, the sweet mother beside the manger in which the Christ-child was sleeping, the open door through which the wondering shepherds were coming and the bright star above which shed a soft light over all. The little blind girl listened with absorbed interest, drinking in every detail of the window decoration as it was described, and reproducing it in her mind's eye, until her face lit up with a joyful smile, and, clasping her hands together in rapture, she exclaimed, again and again: "Ah! that is beautiful!" And ah! how many there are who, like the little blind girl before the show window in Berlin, where the scene of Jesus' birth was depicted, stand beholding the Christmas celebration and yet because of blindness of heart they do not see and realize its hidden beauty and meaning! Ah! how we would love to throw our arms about such and try and tell them all the wonderful story of God's love and God's gift! How we long to bring such to open the heart and make room for the Christ Who has come into the world to seek and to save the lost! Why stay in the inn, away from the Christ, when we may enter into His very presence and realize, as did the shepherds that night, that "unto US is born in the city of David, a Saviour, Which is Christ the Lord?" Between the experience of the inn and the stable there is the same difference as that which marked the blind girl and her little friends. God grant that you may be as willing and as eager to hear the message as the blind child was!

WHAT is the message of the stable? What is the message of the inn? One stands for cooperation with God, the other rejection and indifference to His claims. One becomes the recipient of blessing, and the medium of exalted service, while the other in its selfishness loses both blessing and the privilege of service. The characteristics of the stable and the inn are still to be marked in the world to-day. There are those who are willing to receive the Christ, and who thus become instruments in God's hands of great service and blessing. On the other hand, there are those who typify the inn and refuse the Christ admittance, and maintain an attitude of supreme indifference to His claims upon them. At the glad Christmas time what more fitting occasion on which to consider this supreme question? With you and me it is either the stable or the inn. There is no neutral ground. The Christ child, the Christmas gift of God to men, comes to every heart and seeks for admission. Shall the rejection of the inn, or the welcome of the stable, mark our attitude?

"'Tis not enough that Christ was born
Beneath the star that shone,
And earth was set that morn
Within a golden zone.
He must be born within the heart
Before He finds His throne;
And bring the day of love and good,
The reign of Christ-like brotherhood."

THE stable typifies open-hearted reception of the Christ, willing surrender of the best we have to the Christ, and acceptable service rendered for the Christ. The first essential need is the making room for Jesus. The crowded condition of the inn may find its counterpart in our lives where the cares and activities of this life would crowd out the claims of God upon us, and make us prone to turn the Christ away with the excuse that there is no room, that we are busy providing for the present guests who have found lodgment with us. To reject Christ does not require that we show open enmity and hatred towards Him. Christ was not driven from the door of that inn at Bethlehem in cruel hatred. It was enough that Mary and Joseph should be told, perhaps ever so politely and regretfully, that there was no room. It served the same purpose of shutting out the Christ, and so with you and me. We may know of no bitter opposition or hatred ruling in the heart which keeps the Christ out. All that is necessary is to be so filled and crowded with other things as to lead us to turn Him politely away, and say: "Some day, when we are not so pressed for room and time, we will be glad to welcome you." But Jesus does not wait on such invitation. The opportunity of sheltering the Christ came to the inn but once, and that opportunity lost was lost forever, and so it may be with you. Jesus comes at this Christmas time. He seeks for room and shelter in your heart. Will you not make place for Him there at once, even though every other thing has to be turned out and given up?

AND once within, let the Saviour have the best the place affords. The manger was not much. It was a rude, rough place, and yet as it was surrendered it became the cradle of the new-born King. What you have may seem mean and poor and unusable. But if it is surrendered to the Christ, He will find use for it. He will glorify and honor it with His presence. He will make it the medium of blessing to others. If that humble manger had had the power of speech and had the spirit of some who have admitted the Christ to their lives and hearts, I imagine I can hear it speaking on this wise: "I would so like to do something for this Christ. Oh, if I were only like the bed, or even the cot, of the well-appointed inn, how gladly I would serve Him! Oh! if I only had the comfort of its ample frame, or the warmth of its rugs and blankets! But I have nothing but this rack of rough boards before which the cattle stand. I have nothing but this fodder which surely I cannot offer to Him." But the manger was there. It was willing to be used. And Mary laid the Christ therein, and it became transformed with a glory such as never shone round the throne of earthly king. And so it may be with you and me. The most unlikely possession may become resplendent and glorious with the Divine presence. But if with the narrow vision of the inn we turn the Christ away, we may keep all the crowding guests which this world can give, but we lose Heaven's gift and the star of hope rises not over our habitation. Which shall it be, the stable or the inn? Let the prayer of the poet be the breathings of our heart. With the soul yearning which Christ alone can satisfy let us cry:

"O, holy Child of Bethlehem,
Descend to us, we pray;
Cast out our sin and enter in,
Be born in us to-day.
We hear the Christmas angels
The great glad-tidings tell;
Oh, come to us, abide with us,
Our Lord Emmanuel."

A VILLAGE CHRISTMAS

By FRANK WALCOTT HUTT.

The wind calls down from a snowy hill,
A white vale answers in wintry glee;
The gray sky hovers forlorn and still,
And girds the night in its mystery,
But in the village streets far below,
The lights of Christmas are all aglow.

'Tis Christmas eve. There's a world of song
Beneath the roofs of the little town;
And Merry Heart leads the Christmas throng
And Thankful Heart to a feast sits down;
And Kindly Heart at the homestead door,
Gives, as of old, to his brother poor.

'Twas in a village long years ago,
In Bethlehem that the Christ-child came.
What greater boon could His love bestow,
Dear village homes, of whatever name?
Ah, very fair is the long highway
To village places on Christmas Day.

SCAPEGOAT.

"Why should they tell us there is a Santa Claus, if there isn't?"

"Folks want some one to lay the blame on if you don't get the presents you wanted."—Chicago Daily Tribune.

The Story of the Christ-Child

as told by Saint Luke.

And there were shepherds in the same country abiding in the field and keeping watch by night over their flock.

And an angel of the Lord stood by them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Be not afraid; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all the people, for there is born to you this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

And this is the sign unto you; Ye shall find a babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, and lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest and on earth Peace among men in whom He is well pleased.

And it came to pass when the angels went away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing that is come to pass which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And they came with haste and found Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in the manger.

And when they had seen it they made known concerning this Child the saying which was told them.

And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the Shepherds.

HER GLIMPSE INTO THE PALACE BEAUTIFUL.

"She lighted another match, and then she found herself sitting under a beautiful Christmas tree. It was larger and more beautifully decorated than the one she had seen through the glass door at the rich merchant's. Thousands of tapers were burning upon the green branches, and colored pictures, like those she had seen in the show-windows, looked down upon it all. The little one stretched out her hand toward them, and the match went out."—From Andersen's "Little Match Seller."

A Christmas Game.

"Christmas candles" is a good old-time game. A lighted candle is placed upon a table. The player is blindfolded and stationed with his back to the candle, about a foot from it. He is then told to take three steps forward, turn around three times, then to walk four steps toward the candle and blow it out. His attempt to do so will probably be as amusing to the audience as disconcerting to himself.—Country Life in America.

His Surprise.

Mamma—What did you say, Johnny, when Uncle Hunks gave you a dollar for a Christmas present?

Johnny—Huh! I didn't say anything—I fell dead.—Judge.

THE EXAMINATION OF THE MONTHS

BY MARGARET JOHNSON

(Reprinted from the Woman's Home Companion, by Permission.)

The New Year raised her slender hand
For all the months to pass.
The prettiest little schoolma'am she
That ever looked into a glass,
Or waited, frowning anxiously,
To hear a little class.

"My dears," she said, "good Father Time,
Our well-beloved trustee,
Has come to visit us to-day,
And much would like to hear you say
Your lessons, just to see
If you have well-instructed been,
As little Months should be."
March nudged September; August sighed,
And April hid her face and cried,
The timid little creature!
"I'm sure you'll do your very best.
Come, January; then the rest
May follow," said the teacher.

Then out spoke Jan., a forward lad,
Wrapped in his muffler's scarlet plaid;
A perfect lesson, too, he had,
Correct from A to izzard;
How many snowballs to a pound?
Where best and longest slides are found?
How skating may be easiest learned?
And when a new leaf should be turned?
And how to make a blizzard?
Then, very proud, he took his place,

NOVEMBER AND FEBRUARY.

And August came, with glowing face,
And such a pretty dress on!

She, blushing, tried to tell how high
The mountains are that touch the sky;
How wide the fields, how deep the sea,
The lineage of every bumblebee;
Where four-leaved clovers—deary me!
She yawned until she could not see;
So warm, and, oh, so sleepy she!
How could she say her lesson?
Back, nodding to her seat she crept,
And drooped her curly head and slept.

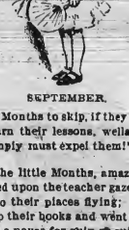
Then, with a little bashful pause,
Sweet April came, and cried because
She couldn't quite remember
How many days to her belong,
Or where the bluebird learned his song!
December prompted, which was wrong;
But he was grieved, the gentle lad,
To see his little playmate sad;

And in her place, quite trim and neat,
With braided hair and slippered feet,
Came studious young September.
She knew her lesson like a book,
And said it off with serious look.
'Twas all of sunshine, cloud and haze,
And golden hours and shortening days,
And sheaves of gathered knowledge;
She spoke in French, of course, with ease,
In Hebrew and in Japanese,
In Spanish, Dutch and Portuguese;

MAY AND JUNE.

And "ologies" and "ographies"—
As much as any college
She seemed to know; but, bold and spry,
Ere she had done, with flashing eye
And martial air, out stepped July,
And pompously began to try
To say the "Declaration."
Before the opening words were out
He stopped and gave a sudden shout,
Flung up his cap into the air,
And yelled till 'twas enough to scare
Old Time himself; and from her chair
The teacher sprang with startled stare
And frown of consternation.

The little Months, delighted, clapped;
The Year for order sternly rapped,
And when the room was still once more,
Called out the children as before,



Alas, their wits were scattered!
They quite forgot they were at school;
They could set say a single rule,
Nor seemed to think it mattered.

And thick, the leaves came fluttering down;
And March chewed gum, I grieve to say,
And whistled in the rudest way;
And little rosy June and May
Just laughed and dimpled and looked sweet,
And danced about on airy feet,
And could not tell where daisies grew,
Or why the violets' eyes are blue!

AUGUST.

November bit an apple red,
And vowed, although he cocked his head
With manner brisk and perky
(You'll scarce believe me, but 'tis so),
What pie might be he did not know,
And never heard of turkey!
Then little Feb. began to jeer,
But though behind his rosy ear
A nice quill pen he carried,
He could not make a rhyme for "dove,"
Or spell a little word like "love;"
And while perplexed he tarried,
Last in the line December came,
And could not tell Kriss Kringle's name,
Or even—really 'twas a shame!—
The mission of a stocking!
The teacher turned away, a tear
Upon her cheek; did ever Year
Know anything so shocking!
"Alas, dear Father Time!" she cried,
"I fear you're scarcely satisfied!
But, as I hope you've noted,
The children are so young! And then
I must remind you once again,
They've all just been promoted,
And are not used as yet, you see,
In this new century class to be.
I'm sure they'll study harder now!"
"And if they don't"—upon his brow
A frown—"why, I can tell them,"
Said Father Time, "they'll have to go!
We cannot be disgraced, you know.
And though, of course, 'twill sadly mar
The beauty of our Calendar

SEPTEMBER.

So many Months to skip, if they Can't learn their lessons, welladay,
We simply must expel them!"

At this the little Months, amazed,
Wide-eyed upon the teacher gazed;
Then to their places flying;
Picked up their books and went to work,
With not a pause for quip or quirk;
Their fingers in their ears, that so
No sound might reach them, to and fro
They rocked and buzzed until the room
Was like an orchard full of bloom
And thick with bees. The teacher smiled,
And Father Time was much beguiled—
He laughed instead of sighing;
And off they went and shut the door,
And left the little Months once more
To learn their tasks unruly;
And there they rocked and buzzed until,
For aught I know, they're buzzing still.
I hope they are, for, truly,
If they should fail again I fear
It would so grieve the little Year;
She'd be a very blue Year;
And as for us—for you and me—
With half the little Months in doubt
Just as to what they were about,
And all the holidays left out,
As you can very plainly see,
My little dears, 'twould hardly be
A very Happy New Year!

Christmas Charm.

The chief charm of Christmas is its simplicity. It is a festival that appeals to everyone, because everyone can understand it. A genuine fellowship pervades our common life—a fellowship whose source is our common share in the gift of the world's greatest life, which was given to the whole world.—A. R. Kimball.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL NOTABLES

The late bishop of Southwell, Dr. Ridding, was regarded as the finest Greek scholar on the Episcopal bench, but was noted for his carelessness in the use of English.

Rev. Francis Aidian Gasquet, president of the English Benedictines, who is visiting this country for the first time, is at present at Notre Dame, Ind. He has written many books, including "Henry VIII. and the English Monasteries," and "The Eve of the Reformation."

Mrs. A. R. McFarland, of Alva, Okla., was the first American missionary to Alaska, whither she went some 30 years ago as a representative of the Presbyterian church. It is thought she was also the first American woman to go there in any capacity. Mrs. McFarland remained in Alaska until her health gave way, some time ago. She has now returned to Oklahoma.

Rev. L. M. Foster, of Charles City, Ia., a retired minister of the Congregational church, is a unique character. His mother was a second cousin of Lucien, Jerome and Napoleon Bonaparte, and they were cousins of King Louis XIV. One of his ancestors was sentenced for marrying outside of the royal family, but when Louis XIV. became king he was reprieved and his sentence changed to banishment to America, and this is how Mr. Foster's branch of the Bonaparte family came to this country.

WAYS OF OTHER PEOPLES.

No person under 16 years of age is permitted to enter a theater or tavern in Heligoland.

In Japan no woman is ashamed of her age, but she tells it out in the arrangement of her hair, so that all the world may know it.

A traveler in the African wastes says that nearly all the natives show a great aversion to solitude, even in broad daylight. This aversion is due to their superstitious terrors.

All well-educated Spanish women are taught from their earliest years to handle the sword, and as a result they are noted for their admirable figures and easy walk.

Lancashire agricultural laborers credit certain of their fellows with power to cast good and evil spells. At Dunstable men carry a live snail in a pill box to ward off toothache, eat stewed earthworms as a cure for jaundice and fried mouse for whooping-cough and cherish all the old superstitions as to the dead which made Merrie England sad.

FOOTWEAR FINDINGS.

It is wiser, both for economy and comfort, to wear alternately two pair of shoes rather than wear one pair all the time.

When patent leather shows signs of cracking take the shoes at once to a good shoe dealer and have them oiled to prevent further damage.

When shoes are wet do not put them too near the heat or they will stiffen and crack. Turn them rather on one side in a dry but not warm place.

Remember that shoes too tightly laced retard the circulation, and in this case even the thickest leather will not prevent the feet from being cold.

It should be remembered that the feet spread with exercise, and this fact should be taken into consideration when seated comfortably at the dealer's trying on new shoes.

JEST AND JOLLITY.

A green grocer is one who trusts dead-beat customers.

Silk-lined gowns interest a woman more than silver-lined clouds.

The man who goes to law may be sure that his lawyer will get justice.

FROM SCIENTIFIC SOURCES.

The reason of the sun assuming such a deep red color on a misty day is owing to the fact that fog permits the passage of red rays more easily than those of any other color.

Miss Mary A. Booth, of Springfield, Mass., is well known in the scientific world. She inherited her love for science from her father, and is one of the few women admitted to the Royal Microscopical Society of London.

Sir Joseph Dalton Hooker, the greatest living botanist, has just passed his eighty-seventh birthday. He was the lifelong friend of Huxley. Some of his most interesting work has been the result of his studies in Utah, Colorado, California and the Rockies.

Remarkable fireproofing properties are credited oxide of titanium by an English dyer. Flannelette treated with it could not be made to burst into flame, and other textiles are claimed to be made equally resistant, while it cannot be removed by dyeing, boiling or washing.

In 1878 something happened on Jupiter which caused a red blotch to appear in his southern hemisphere, near one of the great belts that cross his disk like huge bands of colored clouds. It was 30,000 miles long and 8,000 miles broad, yet, after all, only a little patch on the mighty disk! It has remained ever since, sometimes brightening to almost the crimson hue of fire, and sometimes fading nearly to invisibility, yet always, even when faintest, certifying its presence and its power by keeping the area originally covered by it clear of all other objects.

Mrs. Anderson, a prominent society woman of Jacksonville, Fla., daughter of Recorder of Deeds, West, who witnessed her signature to the following letter, praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—There are but few wives and mothers who have not at times endured agonies and such pain as only women know. I wish such women knew the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a remarkable medicine, different in action from any I ever knew and thoroughly reliable.

"I have seen cases where women doctored for years without permanent benefit, who were cured in less than three months after taking your Vegetable Compound, while others who were chronic and incurable came out cured, happy, and in perfect health after a thorough treatment with this medicine. I have never used it myself without gaining great benefit. A few doses restores my strength and appetite, and tones up the entire system. Your medicine has been tried and found true, hence I fully endorse it."—MRS. R. A. ANDERSON, 225 Washington St., Jacksonville, Fla.

Mrs. Reed, 2425 E. Cumberland St., Philadelphia, Pa., says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and tell you the good I have received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I have been a great sufferer with female trouble, trying different doctors and medicines with no benefit. Two years ago I went under an operation, and it left me in a very weak condition. I had stomach trouble, backache, headache, palpitation of the heart, and was very nervous; in fact, I ached all over. I find yours is the only medicine that reaches such troubles, and would cheerfully recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all suffering women."

When women are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

The experience and testimony of some of the most noted women of America go to prove, beyond a question, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all such trouble at once by removing the cause and restoring the organs to a healthy and normal condition. If in doubt, write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass, as thousands do. Her advice is free and helpful.

No other medicine for women in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Refuse to buy any substitute.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness.

Human society is like a foot ball game; the best of it is in the inequality of the players; if all were equal there would be no fun. The only difference is that foot ball is played fair.

One of our young ladies said to our old bachelor friend, Wm. Slayback: "Mr. Slayback, what is a summer girl?" William replied, "a summer girl is a rack to stretch shirtwaists; inside is a receptacle for lobster salad and ice-cream, while on the outside is an attachment for diamond rings."

There are now 15 boxes from Burlington to Commissary; from Commissary to Berkshire school house, 18—a distance of 9 miles from Burlington. From Berkshire's school house to Burlington there are only 18 boxes. It is 33 to 18 and about the same difference in numbers of mail getters. Little Flora Terrill is the guest of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Dickerson.

Miss Virginia Conner spent last Saturday and Sunday with Miss Katharine Cleek in Erlanger.

Mrs. Dr. Terrill, of Anderson, Indiana, is here for a short stay with Mrs. Elizabeth Piney, before going to Memphis, Tennessee.

Miss Imo Neal, who visited here often, was married at her home in Covington, last Wednesday, to Mr. Vardie Filson, of Corinth.

Coleman Lassing came home from Danville, where he is attending school, to spend the holidays with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Lassing.

The people of this community are preparing for an Xmas tree next Saturday evening at the town hall, and all are invited to help and to put presents on the tree.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Tanner was the scene of a quiet but a pretty wedding at high noon, Wednesday, December 14th, when their daughter, Harriet, was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Walter Chambers, of Columbus, Indiana. At the appointed hour, under the strains of Mendelsohn's Wedding March, Miss Cecil Tanner, a much younger sister of the bride, acting as flower girl, led the way to the altar, where, in the midst of the immediate family and friends, Dr. S. M. Adams, in a most solemn and impressive manner, united them in bouds of holy matrimony. The bride, neatly attired in a going away gown, of blue broad cloth, the groom, in the conventional black, made a handsome couple. Following the ceremony they with all the guests were served to a delicious wedding breakfast, after which, 'mid tender parental benedictions and good wishes from all present, they immediately departed for their newly furnished home at Columbus.

Those who are indebted to me must come forward and settle at once, as all my business at this place must be closed up by next Saturday night.

M. J. CROUCH.

GASBURG.

Dec. 19.—Hunters report quails very scarce.

Jake Bruner and family have moved to Petersburg.

Several nice droves of turkeys remain unsold here.

Ennis Nixon had a good work horse to die suddenly the other day.

On account of the scarcity of corn, hogs have been sold off very closely.

There will be about the usual moving in the spring among the tenants.

Now is the winter of our discontent but how about the small boy with his sled.

Miss Lizzie Parker bought a fine saddle horse from a party in Aurora, recently.

Capt. J. D. Parker, son and daughter, have gone to Southern California to spend the winter.

Everybody is hauling water from Peak's Branch, which furnishes a bouutiful supply, clear and nice.

Our road superintendent is doing some excellent and much needed work ou the road near Woolper bridge.

Frank Lawe, who formerly lived here but now of Republic, Kan., pulled down $10 of the Enquirer money.

Several persons who wished to sign the Tobacco Growers' Combine were uot called on by those soliciting signers.

The river has been blocked with ice at Aurora for several days, but is open at Lawrenceburg, and ferrying is going on there as usual.

It is reported here that Mrs. Frank Hartman, sr., who went from here to Tacoma, Washington, died rather suddenly a short time ago of heart trouble.

Gasburg has the oldest and the newest house in the county. A house has just been completed along side of the old Mosby house that was built in 1796

John Swaney has returned from Ill., where he spent a couple of months hueking corn. He reports the yield from 50 to 60 bushels per acre and of fine quality.

Miss Euuie Willis, who has been visiting her friend, Miss Georgia Parker, is fast gaining fame as a poetess If some of her recent effusions could be published in the RECORDER they would create a sensation among her many friends.

This season has been very similar to the season of 1851. No rain fell here to amount to anything from July until the holidays, when a moderate rain fell, but not enough to raise the river much, which closed early in January and remained closed until the latter days of February.

Wine of Cardui Cured Her.

213 South Prior Street, ATLANTA, GA., March 21, 1903.

I suffered for four months with extreme nervousness and lassitude. I had a sinking feeling in my stomach which no medicine seemed to relieve, and losing my appetite I became weak and lost my vitality. In three weeks I lost fourteen pounds of flesh and felt that I must find speedy relief to regain my health. Having heard Wine of Cardui praised by several of my friends, I sent for a bottle and was certainly very pleased with the results. Within three days my appetite returned and my stomach troubled me no more. I could digest my food without difficulty and the nervousness gradually diminished. Nature performed her functions without difficulty and I am once more a happy and well woman.

Local News.

Next Sunday is Christmas.

The river blocked at Aurora last Wednesday.

This week started in with three snows on the ground.

So far the weather has been of the most approved kind.

Two four inch snows are a pretty good starter for winter.

The snow came from the south last Friday night and Saturday.

Not much sleighing last week, although the roads were very slick.

The school children will have a Christmas tree at the school house.

Strive Ever has money to loan, while Wait a Bit is always paying interest.

Try Red Hill Bourbon, at Rosenberg's, Lawrenceburg, Ind. $1.75 per gallon. 4t

Sleigh bells were out in full force last Sunday, it being a delightful day for sleighing.

The appeal in what was known as the Dog Leg road case was dismissed in the circuit court.

Walton Graded School will give quite an interesting entertainment on the evening of the 23d inst.

Water grows scarcer day by day. Many have been melting snow to make water for domestic purposes.

The eagle which has been seen on Woolper several times recently, was after D. M. Snyder's turkeys a few days ago.

Mrs. Nancy Kennedy, aged 93, died at her home in Covington, last week. Her father was about the first settler in Covington.

No injuries reported as the result of falls so far this winter, although everybody has been given an excellent chance to take a tumble.

The jury for the trial of James Gillespie of Rising Sun, was completed last Wednesday. Of the 12 men two are residents of Rising Sun.

The Lawrenceburg Register ran a double header, last week. The load of advertising it carried certainly justified sending out a double-header.

Some of the Burlington thermometers got badly rattled last week, and one or two mornings represented the temperature 8 to 10 below zero.

Sufferers from sciatica should not hesitate to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm. The prompt relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. For sale by all Druggists.

The Odd-Fellows' lodge at Florence will give a big ball and supper at its lodge building in Florence on the 29th inst., beginning at 7 p. m. Supper, 25; dancing, 50 cents. Everybody is invited.

The cleaning of wells in midwinter is a rare thing, but owing to the scarcity of water some of that kind of work was done here in the last few days seeking to increase the supply of water.

Members of Burlington Lodge No. 264, F. & A. M., will meet at their hall in Burlington, on the 27th inst., for the payment of dues and the annual election of officers.

N. E. RIDDELL, Sec.

Coasting parties were out several times last week, and had fun in bunches and clusters. It never gets too cold for that kind of amusement, and there was never a generation of young people who did not indulge in it.

On the farm, as elsewhere, uniformity among the fowls is desirable. For this reason in a majority of cases one breed is sufficient. If more than one is kept they will mix and lose their individuality and plumage.

Blacksmiths were a very busy set of mechanics last week. Some of them kept the anvil ringing until a late hour of several nights. It is an ill will that blows nobody good, and slick roads always make the sons of Vulcan happy.

The corn train has brought a considerable lot of nice corn during the last month from Indiana, opposite McVille. The corn growers over there know about how much to cultivate each year to supply the demand of their Kentucky buyers.

Grover and Cleveland Snyder went hunting with their ferret, one day last week, and the first sink hole in which it found a rabbit, it proceeded to make a feast of it, and then curled itself up and went to sleep, and the boys had to dig him out.

Having just had a fire, the publishers of the Farmers' & Mechanics' Almanac will not be able to get out a 1905 issue, I take this means of letting my friends understand why they do not hear from me as heretofore. Respectfully,

M. G. BLANTON.

The Walton Graded School will give an entertainment on the evening of the 23d inst., consisting of instrumental music, recitations; two plays "Katharine Porter Entertains," and "A Lady's Note." The school has taken great pains preparing for the event, which will be enjoyed by all who attend. Admission, 15 cents.

A Frightened Horse.

Running like mad down the street dumping the occupants, or a hundred other accidents, are every day occurrences. It behooves everybody to have a reliable salve handy and there's none as good as Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Burns, Cuts, Sores, Eczema and Piles, disappear quickly under its soothing effect. 25c, at all Druggists.

W. W. Grimsley phoned the RECORDER from the mouth of Big Bone, early last Friday morning, that the river was gorged at that point, but a steamboat was making its way slowly through the gorge, something he had never before seen, notwithstanding his long sojourn on the river. When he first discovered the steamer in the midst of the ice field he supposed it was on skates.

The Queen and Crescent Route will in a few days begin the work of double-tracking the bridge immediately south of Ludlow, and which overlooks the Lagoon. When finished it will be the first double-track bridge on the Cincinnati Southern. The improvement will be the beginning of work on the road, which will practically mean the double tracking of the entire system between Cincinnati and Chattanooga.

The Lawrenceburg Lumber Co., one of the large and very reliable firms in that city writes the RECORDER thus:

"Will say that we are well pleased with the business Boone county people have seen fit to give us, and hope that we merit their continued patronage in the year 1905. We wish them a happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year."

Mr. B. R. Johnson, who married a daughter of Elijah Parker, of this county, is the popular secretary of the firm.

The wonderful insect killing capacity of the toad is known in a general way to the enlightened few, says Country Life In America. An imported colony of toads may be the salvation of a flower garden. Many gardeners give their children a cent apiece for every cutworm destroyed. From May 1 to Aug. 1 a toad may destroy 2,160 cut worms, which it would cost $21.60 to destroy by hand. English gardeners are said to pay as much as $25 a hundred for toads for colonizing purposes.

To Mr. George Thomas (Commissary) is due the greater part of the credit of the rural mail route from Burlington which has become immensely popular with its patrons. While many were saying that the route would never be established, he never lost faith nor became dis couraged, but, on the contrary, claimed that it would finally be a go, and, sure enough it was, and many years hence, when many of the doubting Thomases will be dead and forgotten, he will be remembered as the father of the rural mail service in Boone county.

Arthur (Podge) Alloway, the well known base ball pitcher, whose home is in Petersburg, this county, was in town last Wednesday, attending circuit court. He is wintering well and will be in the pink of condition for diamond work when the season opens in the spring. He has not signed a contract yet and has his choice between Colorado Springs, Colo., and Columbus, Ohio, the latter place being rather his preference. He says heretofore he has had to go where sent, but he is now a free man and will sign the contract that carries the best pay. Hope he will get a good place.

The RECORDER is certainly very sorry that it mistook an invitation received at this office as one intended for a public announcement of the marriage of Miss Jennie Smith, the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Smith, of Walton, to Mr. W. B. Noell, a popular young man of Walton, on the 21st inst. Such annoying occurrences lay in wait for us all along the path of life and there seems no way in which to avoid them, but this one will in nowise detract from the pleasures of life to which the amiable bride is entitled. May Mr. and Mrs. Noell live to a good old age and the announcement of their golden and diamond weddings be made through the columns of the RECORDER is the wish of the editor.

Personal Mention.

Rev. Early and wife left for Tyler, Texas, yesterday. He will be gone 15 or 20 days.

Mrs. Sarah Riley returned one day last week from a pleasant visit with Erlanger friends.

E. L. Helm's, Petersburg's popular barber, spent one day last week attending the Boone circuit court.

Miss Mary Ann Thompson left Monday morning to Fortress Monroe, Virginia, to spend the winter with relatives.

Tim Westbay, who has been hustling for Early & Daniel, of Covington, for some time, was in Burlington, last Thursday. Tim is making them a useful man.

The delta of the Tigris and the Euphrates, now partially a desert and partially a swamp, contains over 5,000,000 acres of land. Perhaps no region of all the regions of the earth is more favored by nature for the production of cereals. It is claimed that wheat in its wild, uncultivated state has it. Some in the semiarid regions, and that from here it has been transported to every quarter of the globe.

Had a person said six months ago that water would be as scarce here at this time as it is, people would at once have said that they and stock could not exist under such circumstances. It goes to show that humanity does not know with what it can put up with until confronted by the necessity.

A Costly Mistake.

Blunders are sometimes very expensive. Occasionally life itself is the price of a mistake, but you'll never be wrong if you take Dr. King's New Life Pills for Dyspepsia Dizziness, Headache, Liver or Bowel troubles. They are gentle yet thorough. 25c at all Druggists.

Last week Chas. Westbay and John Baldon invested a considerable block of their surplus in a ferret with which to clean up the rabbit crop in these digings. They used their exterminator one day with great success, but worked it so hard that its demise was announced in the next 24 hours.

LATER.—Since the above was put in type Westbay & Baldon have bought another ferret which has caused them considerable anxiety and one or two dig-outs. They left it stopped in a sink hole Monday night after waiting several hours for it to come out. As it did not show up Monday morning they have decided to starve it out. It is said when Baldon & Westbay start hunting now they look like they are starting to Panama to work on the canal.

Dr. L. H. Crisler is the champion rabbit shot in this part of the county, but only last week was the honor conceded to him. On that occasion he found a rabbit setting. Having fully satisfied himself that it was a rabbit he went home and got his revolver and called his neighbor Elmer Beall to his assistance with a double barrol shot gun that he might kill the rabbit in case he failed with the pistol. Returning to the rabbit they took their positions, and the doctor opened fire with his revolver, all the chambers of which were emptied without apparently disturbing the rabbit. Elmer Beall then opened on the rabbit with his shot gun and exhausted an abundant supply of shells but with no better effect than the doctor had. After a lengthy consultation they decided to kick the rabbit out of its nest, but when they got in kicking distance they discovered that they had been shooting at a clod of dirt nicely covered by weeds and grass. Each swore the other to secrecy, but murder will out. "By grannies they beat me, sah," says Harrison Minor.

Union, Dec. 17.—A meeting of the Tobacco Growers of Boone county was called to order by L. H. Voshell. L. B. Dickerson was elected Secretary. Motion was made and seconded that the Board of Control be elected by the raising of hands, which was carried, and resulted in the election of Joe Cleek, of Beaver; John Aylor, of Union, and R. L. Huey, of Big Bone.

The newly elected board made the following arrangements as to the districting of the county.

First District—Petersburg, Bullittsville, Bellevue and Constance—Scott Chambers, John H. Smith and N. S. Walton.

Second District—Florence, Union, Burlington and Rabbit Hash—L. E. Thompson, Lucien Clore, and L. H. Voshell.

Third District—Beaver Lick, Big Bone, Verona and Walton—J. O. Griffith, Marshall Whitson and George Powers.

These constitute the Executive Committee for the county.

HOT WATER AND STEAM

Gasket on Battleship Massachusetts' Boiler Blew Out.

Three Men in a Closed Room Were Scalded to Death and Four Others, Including Lieut. C. Cole, Were Terribly Injured.

Philadelphia, Dec. 16.—Caught in a trap and helpless to save themselves, three men lost their lives and four others, including William C. Cole, was terribly scalded Thursday by a rush of steam from boiling water in the fire room of the battleship Massachusetts, lying at the League Island navy yard.

The dead are: Edward Bub, married, boilermaker and civilian; Andrew Hamilton, married, boilermaker and civilian; Charles Ritzel, boilermaker's helper and civilian.

Injured: Lieut. William C. Cole, U. S. N., assistant chief engineer of the Massachusetts, scalded about the head and body; taken to naval hospital. William Anderson, ship's boiler [illegible] scalded. James Wilson, boilermaker's helper and civilian employe, scalded. Joseph A. Duran, boilermaker's helper and civilian, scalded.

The accident was caused by the giving way of a gasket or rubber washer on a boiler on the starboard side of the ship. The Massachusetts has been at the navy yard for some time undergoing extensive repairs, particularly to the boilers and machinery.

The first to enter the firehole was Lieut. Cole. Without hesitating at becoming scalded by the hot water and steam, he entered quickly and dragged the men from the place to the door, where they were taken in charge by others. Bub and Hamilton were dead when found and Ritzel died a few minutes after being taken on deck.

"FRENZIED FINANCE."

Application For an Indictment Against Thomas W. Lawson.

New York, Dec. 17.—An application for an indictment of Thomas W. Lawson and for the showing of the books of the Amalgamated Copper Co. was made at the district attorney's office Friday by Henry Wellington Wack, who lives most of the time in London. Mr. Wack is a member of the National Bar association of this country and of the Royal Geographical Society of London.

Accompanied by his lawyer, Charles M. Beattie, Mr. Wack called at the office of District Attorney Jerome and left there his formal application that Mr. Lawson be indicted.

Mr. Wack says that he owns outright 1,000 shares of Amalgamated, and that it was worth when he came here a few weeks ago $81,730.

As a result of Mr. Lawson's acts, Mr. Wack asserted, his stocks fell to 59 and he suffered a loss of approximately $21,000. Mr. Wack asks that a demand be made on the Amalgamated Co. for its books, to ascertain just what its stock is worth, and if Lawson's declaration proves false, he wants him indicted under chapter 435 of the code, third sub-division, which provides that any person who knowingly circulates a false rumor, statement or intelligence against a stock is punishable by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than three years, or both.

PAUL KRUGER'S FUNERAL.

Fully 1,200 Persons Followed the Remains to the Last Resting Place.

At the hall speeches of eulogy were delivered by Gens. Louis Botha, Schalkburger and Christian Dewet. Gen. Botha read a letter from Mr. Kruger exhorting them to preserve the Boer national spirit. The reading of this letter created a profound impression.

The procession to the cemetery was composed of fully 1,200 persons, while the route through which it passed was thronged with people. Flags were half masted, bells were tolled and under government orders minute guns were fired at the military post. Around the grave where Mr. Kruger was laid beside his wife were, gathered near relatives, Boer leaders and many prominent personages, including Sir Richard Solomon, representing the British government.

ARBITRATION FAVORED

Mass Meeting Held in New York to Ratify Treaties Signed.

A Resolution Was Passed Favoring the Extension By the Government of the United States of the Principle of Arbitration.

New York, Dec. 17.—A mass meeting, called to urge the prompt ratification of the arbitration treaties recently signed by the state department with several of the leading foreign powers, was held Friday night at Carnegie hall, under the auspices of the New York executive committee of the American conference on international arbitration. There was a large attendance and the speakers were repeatedly applauded.

John Crosby Brown, in an opening address, expressed regret at the absence of Andrew Carnegie, who was to have opened the meeting, but who, he said, could not be present.

Mayor George B. McClellan presided and was the first speaker.

M. Linn Bruce, lieutenant-governor-elect, spoke against deciding differences between nations by war and was followed by Archbishop Ireland.

While the archbishop was speaking he was interrupted by a man who cried, "Give somebody else a chance." The archbishop immediately sat down. The audience hooted the man who had shouted and ushers tried to find him, but failed. Then the audience applauded until Archbishop Ireland resumed his speech.

Letters from Grover Cleveland, Carl Schurz and John Mitchell were read. Letters from Andrew Carnegie and Gen. Nelson A. Miles were also read, after which Bishop Henry C. Potter was introduced and spoke briefly. In conclusion he said:

"I hope that the resolutions which this noble meeting shall pass to-night may have in them a fine note of ringing comment and that senators of the United States will understand that it is the mind of the intelligent people in this great metropolis that war shall cease."

The following resolution was passed:

Whereas, The method of settling international disputes and difficulties by arbitration rather than by force is in accord with the highest prospects of reason and humanity; and,

Whereas, The civilized nations of the world have, by jointly establishing the permanent court at The Hague, recognized the moral obligation which rests upon them to avoid the horrors of war by the submission of their controversies to judicial determination, and,

Whereas, The government of the United States which for the past half century has been foremost in the actual resort to arbitration, has negotiated and is negotiating treaties with various powers making compulsory upon the contracting nations the reference of disputes of a certain nature to the international court at The Hague; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the citizens of New York, in mass meeting assembled, favor the extension by the government of the United States of the principle of arbitration to all questions which can not otherwise be brought to a pacific determination.

THE FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Second Session.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Senate.—The senate, which under the constitution is made the trial court in impeachment cases, Wednesday received official notice of the determination of the house of representatives to present impeachment charges against Hon. Charles Swayne, federal judge in the northern district of Florida. The matter was brought to the senate's attention by a house committee and the senate appointed a committee to prepare the details of the proposed trial. The senate considered the Philippine government bill and the pure food bill. Mr. Foraker presented a tariff amendment to the Philippine bill, but on complaint of Mr. Dubois and other senators that this provision had not been contemplated when the senate entered into an agreement to vote on the bill next Friday, it was withdrawn. A number of semi-public bills were passed.

House.—Further action on the impeachment proceedings against Judge Charles Swayne, of the northern district of Florida, was taken in the house Wednesday by the appointment of the committee of seven provided for by a resolution adopted Tuesday to draft the charges for presentation to the senate and by the reception of the report of the committee of five to notify the senate of the impeachment, who announced that they had performed their duty and that the senate had responded that "Order shall be taken." The urgent deficiency bill and several other bills of a public nature were passed.

Washington, Dec. 16.—Senate.—The senate spent practically the entire day discussing the Philippine administrative bill. A number of amendments were suggested and debated, among them being provisions relating to railroad bonds, mining locations and tariff rates. Under unanimous agreement the vote on the bill will be taken Friday and the disposal of all amendments will occur at the same time. A formal order to enter on the Swayne impeachment proceedings was adopted but it did not fix a day for beginning the work.

House.—Discussion of the bill "To improve currency conditions" was resumed in the house Thursday, but throughout the session its advancement was beset with obstructive tactics by the democrats, led by Mr. Williams (Miss.), the minority leader. The democrats mustered sufficient strength to force Speaker Cannon to break a tie in order that the bill be taken up, the democrats assuming their attitude of antagonism because Mr. Hill (Ct.), in charge of the bill, refused to postpone its further consideration in consequence of the illness of Mr. Bartlett (Ga.), leader of the opposition. The house made little progress on the measure.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Senate.—The senate Friday, by a vote of 44 to 23, passed the Philippine civil government bill. The final vote was preceded by the presentation of many amendments and a general discussion of them, as well as of the provisions of the bill. The discussion was confined quite generally to the merits of the measure. Mr. McCumber was the only republican who voted with the democrats against the final passage of the bill. The most notable change made during the day was the lowering of the rate of interest on railroad bonds to be guaranteed by the Philippine government from 5 to 4 per cent. The bill as passed exempts from taxation all bonds issued by the Philippine and Porto Rican governments; authorizes the Philippine government to incur a bonded indebtedness of $5,000,000 for improvements at 4½ per cent. interest; authorizes the Philippine government to guarantee the payment of interest on railroad bonds at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum; provides for the administration of the immigration laws by the Philippine authorities; establishes a system for the location and patenting of mineral, coal and saline lands; fixes the metric system for the islands and gives the civil governor the title of governor general.

House.—Friday's session of the house was given over almost exclusively to consideration of bills on the private calendar, a dozen or more being passed. The senate amendments to the urgent deficiency bill were agreed to, and adjournment taken until Monday.

SECRETARY TAFT.

Will Make Effort to Secure Tariff Legislation For the Philippines.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Secretary Taft will make an effort to secure from the present congress tariff legislation for the Philippines along the lines recommended in his annual report of the president. He expects to act promptly in the matter and will have a conference with Chairman Payne, of the ways and means committee, as to his further course in the matter.

The secretary is very much gratified over the favorable action of the senate Friday on the Philippine civil government bill. While there were some provisions adopted of a more conservative character than he thought necessary, yet he expressed himself as satisfied with the measure and will make an effort to have it adopted by the house as it passed the senate. With this object in view he will seek to have the amended bill acted on by the house without reference to a conference committee.

RIGHT NOT RECOGNIZED.

Son of Busy Traveling Man Indignant at Familiarity of Scarce Parent.

The story of the hard worked newspaper man who devoted so much of his time to his work that he did not recognize the youngest member of his family when he met the youngster unexpectedly is not without its parallel. In this case, says the New York Press, it was the baby, who, not having sufficient opportunity to become acquainted with his proud parent, made a remark which led to resolves of reformation.

A traveling man naturally gets home but once in each week, sometimes drawing a two-week trip, and in other cases being away from his home for even a longer period. He usually tries to dash in home for Sunday, and on one of these dashes, in a certain home, the young man of the family having acquired that title some four years previously, was very bad, indeed, and finally forced the father to administer the merited, though mild, punishment. The injured youngster immediately made a wild dash for his mother, wailing at the top of his voice: "Mother, mother, moth-e-r; that man that comes here on Sunday has been spanking me."

HAD FINE EYE FOR HAIRS.

Professor of Natural History Was Too Keen for Mischievous Students.

An eminent naturalist who holds—and fills, as well—a chair in a university, announced to the members of his class one morning that he had something of unusual interest to show them, relates Youth's Companion.

"I have here, gentlemen," he said, "some hairs from the skin of a young crested seal, and we will proceed to study their peculiarities."

Unfolding the small piece of paper that contained them, he spread the hairs out on a sheet of white cardboard and turned to get his microscope, which was on a desk behind him.

While his back was turned a roguish student quickly swept the hairs off the desk into his hand, and substituted others very closely resembling them.

"Young gentlemen," said the professor, severely, a moment later, as he glanced at the sheet of cardboard, "there has been some underground work here. These are mole hairs."

They never attempted to fool the professor again.

Doing Great Work.

Florisant, Mo., Dec. 19th.—(Special.)—That Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing a great work in curing the more terrible forms of Kidney Disease, such as Bright's Disease, Dropsy and Diabetes, everybody knows. But it must also be noted that they are doing a still greater work in wiping out thousands of cases of the earlier stages of Kidney Disease. Take for instance Mrs. Peter Barteau, of this place. She says:—

"I have been subject to pains in my back and knees for about three years, but since I have been taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I have been entirely cured."

Others here tell similiar stories. In fact, in this part of Missouri there are scores of people who have cured the early symptoms of Kidney Disease with Dodd's Kidney Pills. The use of the great American Kidney Remedy thus saved not only the lives of Kidney Disease victims, but thousands of other Americans from years of sufferings.

TWO YEARS OF AGONY.

One Cake of Cuticura Soap and One Box of Cuticura Cured Baby's Awful Humor.

"When my sister was eighteen months old a humor broke out on her shoulders, extending clear across the back. For two years it caused her intense suffering. It would scab over and then crack open and a watery matter ooze from it. Then the scabs would fall off and it would be raw for a time. We had several different doctors and tried everything we could think of, but without effecting a cure. Then we got one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment, which cured her completely and without a scar or blemish. (Signed) Lillie Chase Walker, 5 Tremont St., Woodfords, Me."

PLEADED NOT GUILTY.

Mrs. Chadwick, Beckwith and Spear Arraigned in Cleveland.

The Woman Refused to Give Bail and the Two Oberlin Bank Officials Were Released on $25,000 Bond Each.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 16.—Mrs. Chadwick's first day in the county jail here, since her arrival from New York, was a busy one for her. She received several visits from her attorneys, held long conferences with them, conversed with newspaper men and for 15 minutes stood face to face with President Beckwith, of the Oberlin bank, who has come to such great trouble through his financial transactions with her. The meeting was dramatic.

The aged banker had been for hours before the county grand jury, went to the office of Sheriff Barry Thursday afternoon and asked if he might see Mrs. Chadwick. The sheriff readily consented and Mrs. Chadwick was sent for to meet him. Accompanied by Mrs. Beckwith, who, owing to her husband's ill health, is always by his side, the aged banker made his way slowly and feebly up the long flights of iron stairs leading to Mrs. Chadwick's cell.

After some general conversation Mr. Beckwith referred to their business relations by saying: "Mrs. Chadwick, you have ruined me, but I'm not so sure yet you are a fraud. I have stood by you to my last dollar, and I do think now that the time has come for you to make known everything in relation to this thing." Beckwith's voice betrayed deep emotion as he spoke, and he leaned heavily on the arm of his wife, who was almost compelled to support him so great was his physical weakness. Mrs. Chadwick did not reply directly to the words of Mr. Beckwith, but her manner and the look on her face were not conciliatory. Seeing that she would not answer, Mr. Beckwith went on: "I have always told you that I did not like it because you changed your lawyers so often. Why don't you get a good one and stick to him?"

"Well," said Mrs. Chadwick, "I have reasons for that."

Mr. and Mrs. Beckwith then both said they hoped the matters connected with the Chadwick affair would be eventually straightened out. The interview then closed. Mrs. Chadwick thanked him for calling, shook hands with Mr. and Mrs. Beckwith and said she would be pleased to have them call again.

Mrs. Chadwick Thursday afternoon retained the attorney who is to conduct her defense when she is called for trial in the federal court. He is J. P. Dawley, one of the leading criminal lawyers of Cleveland. Sheldon Q. Kerruish will assist Mr. Dawley.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 17.—Mrs. Chadwick will, from now until the time of her trial or arraignment in court, be rigidly excluded from all visitors, and even her son and nurse will be denied permission to see her except on the written order of United States Marshal Chandler.

Receiver Loeser has been trying for several days to arrange the time at which he would summon Mrs. Chadwick into the bankruptcy court, but her attorneys will oppose this, and will object to any questions being put to her before she is called for trial. Any attempt to have her answer questions that may prejudice her case will be opposed, and it was asserted with confidence by one of them that nothing more will be done in the case until March.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 19.—Mrs. Chadwick was arraigned before Judge Wing, of the United States district court, Saturday afternoon, pleaded not guilty to every charge brought against her, declined to give bail and was remanded to jail to await trial.

President Beckwith and Cashier Spear, of the Citizens' National bank of Oberlin, were arraigned at the same time and pleaded not guilty. They were allowed to depart after furnishing bonds, each to the amount of $25,000, an increase of $15,000 over the value of the bond they had previously given.

Mrs. Chadwick Sunday spent her first Sunday in jail. She now has a companion in the jail, a young woman, detained for examination as to her sanity. The woman seemed much interested in Mrs. Chadwick and the two conversed quite freely.

THE COLORADO ELECTION.

Legislature Will Be Asked to Declare Gov. Peabody Elected.

Denver, Col., Dec. 19.—Alva Adams, democratic candidate for governor, has lost 1,182 of his plurality of 3,275 in this county by the action of the supreme court in ordering the election commission to eliminate five precincts from the returns. His plurality in the state still stands at about 10,000.

By the supreme court orders, the democrats lose three senators who were apparently elected in this city, and the republicans gain control of both branches of the legislature with a majority of 30 on joint ballot. They are planning to submit to the legislature evidence of frauds in Denver and ask that body to declare Gov. Peabody elected.

The explosions are the result of a fight that has been waged for some time against the pipe line company, which is a foreign corporation, by the farmers of this section, who resent the piping of the gas to Missouri.

HIGH HILL BATTLE.

In Ferocity it Was the Most Remarkable in the Siege.

Port Arthur's War-Hardened Veterans Shuddered at the Sight of the Slaughtered Japanese—Hand-to-Hand Fighting.

Chefoo, Dec. 19.—For ferocity and sustained desperation on both sides, the struggle for the possession of High hill probably was the most remarkable in the history of the siege of Port Arthur—a siege noted for slaughter. This statement is based on an interview which a press correspondent had with Commander Mizzenoff, executive officer of the battleship Poltava.

Commander Mizzenoff, who was wounded in the leg during the battle of High hill, said:

"Since the Japanese, on the 28th (month not mentioned) began their attack on High hill, which they call 203 Metre hill, the fighting has been continuous. The steep and sandy sides of the hill were streaked and dotted with snow when the Japanese began the battle, which was destined to furnish so many deeds of heroism that they became commonplace. There was so much slaughter that even Port Arthur's war hardened veterans shuddered at the sight.

"Japanese were compelled to clamber up the slopes of the hill, in many cases without firing, in the face of one of the most murderous deluges ever poured from rifles and machine guns. I was there, and it seemed to me that flesh and blood would be unable to stand our fire for a minute.

"The enemy went down in squads and companies, but always there were others grimly coming forward. Their bravery was beyond praise, as was that of our men. Some times the fighting was hand-to-hand, with the muzzles of the rifles at the breasts of the contestants, the bayonets being used as swords.

"The sides of the hill were strewn with bodies and the snow was crimsoned with the blood of the wounded, some of whom had crawled into it, seeking in its coldness surcease for their dying agonies.

"Eventually, as in similar instances which were to follow, we retired, leaving the work of driving the enemy from the summit to resistless guns of the neighboring forts, notably those of Liaoti mountain.

"The second and third assaults were replicas of the first, although the second was the most ferocious, being nearly all hand-to-hand fighting in which mercy was neither asked nor given.

"A remarkable incident occurred in the third assault as the Russians, still facing the enemy, retreated. A Japanese standard-bearer, holding his flag aloft, climbed the pinnacle and fell dead clutching the colors. In his tracks another arose with the colors, only to fall instantly with a dozen wounds in his body. Six others followed and met the same fate. At last when the ninth man appeared a Russian officer exclaimed: 'Don't shoot that fellow with the flag, it will be planted anyhow.'

"The Japanese adopted a curious expedient which assisted them greatly in the third assault. They had prepared huge piles of wood, coal and cornstalks which they ignited, the wind being in the faces of the Russians. The resultant fire was immense and the flames and smoke compelled the Russians to retire.

"The red glare from this fire disclosed a ghastly picture more infernal than ever dreamed by Dante.

"The assaults thus far had cost the Japanese easily 12,000 men, while our own were under 2,000. The sides of the hill were literally covered with dead and wounded. The trenches were rivulets of blood and every visible spot was dyed crimson.

"'We might retake the hill,' said Gen. Stoessel, 'but the hill is not of sufficient importance to us to justify further sacrifice.'

"Scarcely an officer participating in the battle of High hill escaped unhurt and the proportion of young officers killed was very high.

"Since then numerous small engagements have been waged, but the responsibility for keeping the Japanese from occupying the hill in force or from mounting guns thereon, has been left mainly to the shrapnel fire from other forts."

GALES IN THE EAST.

Most Violent That Have Occurred for Years Raged for Hours.

New York, Dec. 19.—The snow storm and gale which struck the coast Saturday and continued till the early hours Sunday morning was the most violent that has occurred for several years. Reports from the New Jersey and New England coast and from incoming steamers tell of furious gales and many disasters.

At Vineyard Haven over 15 schooners, anchored in the harbor, were blown ashore early Sunday and several others were damaged in collisions. Off the Bay Head, N. J., life saving station, the schooner Lizzie H. Drayton, bound for Providence from Baltimore, went ashore, the crew being rescued by the life savers.

The Cunarder, Umbria, and the American liner St. Paul, both of which arrived Sunday, reported heavy weather and adverse gales during the whole passage.

The Anchor line steamer Astoria, bound for Glasgow, went ashore Sunday in the lower bay, but later floated without injury and proceeded.

In the river and harbor traffic was at a standstill. So heavy was the snowfall that lights could not be seen on the river a boat's length ahead and 40 boats and other craft proceeded at a diminished headway. No accidents of any moment were reported.

In the city the snow which began Saturday afternoon fell almost without intermission until early Sunday morning, by which time eight inches had fallen. There was little interruption of traffic, 13,000 snow shovelers and 4,000 teams being set to work as soon as the snow ceased falling to clean off the principal thoroughfares. In the afternoon the weather cleared and with the coming of bright sunshine Central park and the speedway were thronged with sleighs.

By the burning of the Starin line steamer Glen Island in Long Island sound Saturday nine lives were lost and property roughly estimated at $250,000 was destroyed.

That more lives were not sacrificed undoubtedly was due to the personal courage of the officers and crew and the excellent discipline maintained when a horrible death for all seemed almost a certainty.

Early Suaday morning the wreck of the ill-fated Glen Island was found with only the smokestack visible, near Hempstead Harbor, L. I. The general manager of the Starin transportation line has sent divers to the wreck and will spare no effort to find the bodies of the seven members of the crew and two passengers who perished in the burning steamer.

YOUNG WOMAN'S BODY FOUND.

Was Without Clothing and Features Burned Beyond Recognition.

Colorado Springs, Col., Dec. 19.—Without a vestige of clothing, her features burned beyond recognition, the body of a young woman was found Sunday on the west slope of Cutler mountain. The hands were clinched as though she had died in agony. The well manicured nails and the glossy condition of the tightly coiled hair, which the flames had failed to harm, prove the young woman to have been of the better class.

The case is shrouded in the deepest mystery. No one has been reported missing and strangers have been few in this especial district. There are indications that the girl died of poison and a post-mortem examination will be made.

BOILER GASKET BLEW OFF.

One Man Scalded to Death and Four Seriously Injured.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—Arthur Kerr, of Buffalo, was scalded to death and four of his fellow workmen were seriously injured here Sunday, when a defective gasket on the boiler of the steamer Bethlehem blew off, allowing the steam and hot water to flood the engine room where the men were at work. Kerr was a fireman on the steamer. The injured: John McEarl, badly scalded about legs and hands; Peter O'Toole, scalded about limbs and body; Stanley Rogers, badly scalded; J. L. Walker, engineer, burned about face, arms and legs.

THE BIG DAMAGE SUIT.

Henry Noble Testified That He Saw White Fire the Shot.

Winchester, Ky., Dec. 15.—In the trial of the Marcum damage case, the examination of Capt. B. J. Ewen was finished Wednesday morning and Henry Noble was called. He is county superintendent of Thackett county and was a clerk for Hargis Bros. for ten years. He heard the shooting when Marcum was killed and rushed out. He saw Tom White go in at a side door, fire a shot into the prostrate body, put his pistol under his coat and walked leisurely back to the Hargis store. Witness viewed the dead body of Marcum. Went back to the store, where he found White, Callahan and James Hargis, and heard White ask what Hargis and Callahan were going to do about that money.

Buck Cottongane testified that French saw him in Leslie county and told him that Marcum was meddlesome and the Hargises would have to have him killed and that when the Hargises found people in their way they managed to get rid of them. The conversation took place near where Nick Combs and Joe Eversole, the first victims of the French Eversole feud, were killed, and French told witness he could get money for the same kind of work that was done at that place.

Charles Anderson, a student at Jackson academy, said he saw Marcum when killed and that he looked up and saw James Hargis at an up-stairs window of his storé with a gun in his hands. Saw two others whom he could not recognize. Over the objection of the defense, Ruck Cottongane said defendant, French, offered Mose Feltner $1,000 to leave and take away other witnesses, and afterward Feltner did so, and seemed to have plenty of money.

Winchester, Ky., Dec. 16.—Hezekiah Combs, of Morgan county, saw the dead body of Marcum and described the location and nature of the wounds. John Bays, a Cincinnati commercial traveler, was a clerk in the store of Hargis Bros. at the time of the killing. He testified to the location of James Hargis and Tom White at the time and immediately after. He knew that James Hargis and Marcum were not friendly.

Kelly Kash heard a conversation between Jett, White and Mrs. Mary Johnston shortly after the killing, but he was not allowed to tell the nature of it. The jury was sent out and the plaintiffs avowed that they would prove that Alex Hargis grew very angry because Kash, as an attorney, wrote a power of attorney for Henry Hearst to accept bond for Mose Feltner when the latter was under indictment for the murder, but the court excluded this testimony.

Judge Benton decided that anything in the furtherance of a conspiracy or that tended to establish a conspiracy might be shown by testimony. D. D. Hurst, father of Mrs. Marcum and postmaster of Jackson, saw Marcum as he lay on the courthouse floor, but the sight made him sick and he went out. He met Curt Jett at the door and the latter said the murder of Marcum could not be ascribed to him. For quite a while before his death Marcum seldom went out without his child in his arms or his wife or his sister by his side. Before Marcum's death Alex Hargis told witness that Marcum had made public charges against him which he must publicly retract.

Mrs. Ruck Cottongane told that French saw her since she came here and told her that D. Y. Combs was here to kill her husband and Sam Fields and that they had better leave, which they did. Mrs. Mahala Hord, sister of Marcum, said that two years ago Alex Hargis came to her home and cursed her and the whole Marcum family.

Winchester, Ky., Dec. 17.—John L. Noble, or "Rat Ankle," as he is called, was the first witness Friday morning. He saw Jett and White just before Marcum was killed. White came across the street in the direction of the back door of the courthouse. He saw White motion to Jett and the latter follow him. Immediately after the second shot he saw White run across the street to Hargis Bros.' store. For a few weeks previous to the killing Jett bonded with witness and Alex Hargis paid his board. Marcum's residence was near and Marcum was at home, but did not go out much. He knew that Jett carried a pistol. Witness saw several in the house with Curt Jett, among them Elbert Hargis, Alex Hargis, Bill Britton, now under indictment for killing James Cockrell. Britton and the Hargises were related. The witness was present at a consultation held at Hargis' store in which were present B. F. French, James Hargis, Ben Golden and John B. O'Neill, at which the location of Jett and White immediately after the killing was discussed. Witness saw Jett at one point, but Hargis insisted that he be located at another.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Hon. Bert Simmons, of Covington, came out last Friday and presided as special judge in the case of Laura F. Gaines against A. G. Gaines and others, children of the late John William Gaines by his two former wives. Previous to Mr. Gaines' marriage to his last wife, who was Miss Laura F. Leach, he had had his life insured in the Hartford Mutual Life Insurance Company, made payable to his estate. After he and Mrs. Laura F. (Leach) Gaines had been married a few years, he had the policy made payable to his children. Mrs. Gaines' contention is that she as Mr. Gaines' wife had a vested right in the policy, which could not be changed without her consent, which she says was not given, and therefore she is entitled to one-half of the $5,000 policy. Castleman and Gaunt represent the widow, and Dickerson and Glore, the children. The law in the case was argued last Friday by Gaunt and Dickerson, and Judge Simmons took it under advisement until next Friday, when he will rule on it.

The trustee of the jury fund filed his report last Friday, showing that he had not collected a cent of fines or forfeitures since the August term of the court. It being the first blank report he ever made, although he has been trustee for about 24 years.

The grand jury found 35 indictments, 18 of which were against the Standard Oil Company for peddling without a license and four against the North Kentucky Agricultural Association for permitting gambling on its grounds.

The grand and petit jurors were paid immediately upon their discharge, the trustee of the jury fund advancing the money in order that such could be the case. The grand jury was in session four days and returned 35 indictments, much the largest batch that has been reported to the Boone circuit court in many years.

The petit jurors were paid for four days services and finally discharged before noon last Friday.

The grand jury made the following written report:

"We, your grand jury, beg leave to file the final report:

"We have been in session four days, have examined 30 witnesses, and returned 35 indictments.

"We have examined the court house, jail, county infirmary, and pest house, and report them to be in good order and well kept. It is recommended by this jury that a fire-proof door be put in the county clerk's office between the two rooms also more shelf room in same office. A hat and coat rack is needed in the grand jury room. The jail is in need of certain repairs, a hole in the floor, and a crack in the east wall extending from the foundation to the top. These repairs should be made immediately. Having completed our work we desire to adjourn. Respectfully,

J. L. RILEY, Foreman.

The present term of circuit court does not resemble to any great extent those of 35 years ago when the business kept here for a week or two such legal giants as John W. Stevenson, Humphrey Marshall, John G. Carisle, James O'Hara, John F. Fisk, James Pryor, Harvey Myers and others.

RECTOR OF ST. LUKE'S,

Ashburnham, Ontario, Testifies to the Good Qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Ashburnham, Ont., April 18, 1903.—I think it is only right that I should tell you what a wonderful effect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has produced. The day before Easter I was so distressed with a cold and cough that I did not think to be able to take any duties the next day, as my voice was almost choked by the cough. The same day I received an order from you for a bottle of your Cough Remedy. I at once procured a sample bottle, and took about three doses of the medicine. To my great relief the cough and cold had completely disappeared and I was able to preach three times on Easter Day. I know that this rapid and effective cure was due to your Cough Remedy. I make this testimonial without solicitation, being thankful to have found such a Godsent remedy.

Respectfully yours,
E. A. LANGFELDT, M. A.,
Rector of St. Luke's Church.

James Sleet, of Hume, had a steel trap set for a mink, and was very much surprised by catching a big eagle. After some difficulty Jim extricated it from the trap without getting seriously hurt. He took it home and put it in the old blacksmith shop and fastened it, as he thought, with a chain, by buckling a leather hame string around its leg, which his eagleship cut off with its beak in about the same length of time it would have taken a man to have done so with a sharp knife. Luckily, however, he had closed the door so he recaptured it and put it in a box, where it was well contented until a dog came in sight, when it would get angry and anxious for a scrap. It measured 7 feet from tip to tip, and its claws was 3 inches long. Jim took it to the city a few days since and sold it for $6, and learned later he could have easily gotten several dollars more.

COMMISSARY.

Dec. 24—A happy Christmas to all correspondents and readers of the RECORDER.

Elbert Kelly had a wood sawing last Thursday.

Will Arnold and Jesse Louden killed their hogs Thursday.

W. T. Ryle and wife were shopping in Rising Sun, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Walton went to Cincinnati visiting, Tuesday, and returned Thursday.

James Botts and wife, and Mrs. Lou Scott were guests of W. T. Ryle and wife, last Friday.

It will soon be here again, the same old thing—just as in years of yore. We will write it 1905 instead of 1904.

Mrs. Wood Sullivan, who has been quite sick the past week, is improving and able to be up part of the time.

Miss Martha Randall, who is being taught privately by Miss Stella Ryle, is progressing nicely in her school work.

We are glad to report Dr. Williamson, of near Belleview, who has been sick for some time, is able to be out a little.

Rabbit Hash, here's our hand. We have turned over leaf, and will not only strive to make our writeups better, but the best and most interesting of any. We suggest another improvement, that of writing nice and plain.

We will wager there is not a rural carrier in the State that makes a better showing in a frame than our Willie. He is making quite a favorable impression among the ladies and is as good a shortstop in the mall service as in a game of base ball.

Bullittsville, we don't suppose any of your old maids care a penny whether we are married or single, dead or alive, but we do think we have as much right to starve a woman to death as some others. You would better not hit a man when he is down unless sure of your ability to keep him down.

RECTOR OF ST. LUKE'S,

Ashburnham, Ontario, Testifies to the Good Qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Ashburnham, Ont., April 18, 1903.—I think it is only right that I should tell you what a wonderful effect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has produced. The day before Easter I was so distressed with a cold and cough that I did not think to be able to take any duties the next day, as my voice was almost choked by the cough. The same day I received an order from you for a bottle of your Cough Remedy. I at once procured a sample bottle, and took about three doses of the medicine. To my great relief the cough and cold had completely disappeared and I was able to preach three times on Easter Day. I know that this rapid and effective cure was due to your Cough Remedy. I make this testimonial without solicitation, being thankful to have found such a Godsent remedy.

Respectfully yours,
F. A. LANGFELDT, M. A.,
Rector of St. Luke's Church.

A New Year's Call.

By Manda L. Crocker.

"THINGS are seldom, if ever, just what they seem," modified Belle Farnsworth after her favorite author, "and people, never!"

Turning slowly around before the long mirror she noted the faultless reflection of the new [illegible]-made suit, but her thoughts were otherwise occupied.

"One must be positively hypocritical sometimes, I find," she continued, more leniently. "Now, for instance, I am to circulate, as the politician says, among the people of Hanover Square this afternoon, wishing them the joys of the New Year as if life was simply reflected Paradise. But the truth is, the cobwebs are thick in my sky and I have not the ambition to emulate the example of the old woman who went heavenward with her broom.

"O, if it were only cobwebs," she added, bitterly, "that obscured my sun, I would not hesitate to try the sweeping process; but—it's more!"

Miss Farnsworth had been delegated by her society to make New Year calls in her neighborhood and she had consented.

Anything was preferable to mope at home with Aunt Roxy on this especial day; the day she died—not the prosaic old auntie, but she, Miss Isabelle Farnsworth—for ever since she and Allan Druer had broken faith three years ago, she had considered herself "dead."

And he might as well be, for had he not left Cliff Point that very day, "forever," he vowed? And so far he had grimly kept his word.

With a sympathetic glance at the suspiciously solemn face in the glass, Miss Farnsworth adjusted the badge of the King's Daughters on the gray lappel and went thoughtfully downstairs. The blithe young year reflected his joyousness on all the faces she met and, in spite of herself Belle began to speculate happily. But the anniversary which "followed" came suddenly abreast of her as she mounted the steps of a pretentious brown stone cottage on the corner, for the fifth and last call.

Lost for the moment in the unusually pleasant musing, her fingers sought the bell-pull unconsciously.

Her first call had been on "snobs," as Aunt Roxy would have said. They had bowed her in and bowed her out in dressed-up icicle fashion, with a patronizing smirk that would have done credit to the king's fool.

Another call revealed a fat roly-poly lady who giggled continuously while she displayed her cheap diamonds and entertained the plain tailor-made gown condescendingly.

But the fourth call: Well! it would always be a bright spot on the anniversary. A little old lady in soft, velvety costume drew her to a sunny corner where an invalid daughter lay smiling a genuine "Happy New Year" in her welcome. As the thin fingers closed over the caller's hand a long silent chord somewhere in the dead heart vibrated in harmony with the greeting; and Miss Farnsworth concluded that she was not a walking mummy after all.

Far from it; the King's Daughter felt like shutting herself in with these other daughters of the king for the rest of the day. But she meant to go back, for they had most cordially invited her.

"I SIMPLY CANNOT."

Yes; and her fingers closed mechanically over the silver knob of the brown stone cottage, but—she did not ring!

A painful awakening ran over her, oringing up at her "dead" (?) heart with a desperate grip.

"I cannot do it," she said, staring hard at the handsomely-lettered plate; "I simply cannot; it is impossible!"

She could have manufactured a dozen plausible reasons for the omission, but she could not go beyond that gold and blue lettered plate gleaming above the bell handle. Putting her hands out blindly she turned back to the seven broad stone steps, the way of escape.

Had she followed him, or had he followed her to North Adams?

If he had followed her was it because he still cared? Or was he married to another and she stumbling on to the fact in this cruel manner? She could settle the whole matter by turning back; but that were impossible to-day, at least.

Across the clear sunny air of the New Year's day came the old familiar words: "I shall always carry your image in my heart, Belle; no matter what has come between us." Like a mysterious revelation came a response from the inner sanctuary and she knew that Allan Druer had hidden more than the "image;" it was her very life, and that was why she was "dead."

For a moment it came to her that he was still true to the "image" and that there might be a blessed resurrection in North Adams.

An answering impulse went to her heart like old wine and she hurried homeward dazed with the possible outcome of the call she did not make.

Some one looked from an upper window in the brown stone cottage as Miss Farnsworth fairly flew out into the street; carelessly glancing at first, then scrutinizing the supple figure in gray.

The next minute he was out on the pavement, but the tailor-made gown had vanished around the corner.

Quickening his pace he saw the girl ascending the steps of a humble cottage, third from the angle.

"Making New Year calls?" he cogitated, "but she did not ring at the Druers'. No wonder; poor little girl!"

Instead of waiting to be received, however, he noticed that she went right in and closed the door behind her unceremoniously. Miss Farnsworth was at home.

Aunt Roxy was snoozing in her easy chair near the fire, when Belle peeped into the parlor, so retreating on tiptoe she went upstairs with a far-away look in her shining eyes.

"I believe I am alive!" she excialmed, triumphantly, to the dimples in the mirror, "and I am sure he has the image still intact."

Removing her wraps the new old Miss Farnsworth settled herself before the cheery grate in a contented little heap to dream over again those first treasured chapters before the misunderstanding folded them in.

"Turn backward, turn backward, O, Time, in your flight!"

Writing material and a heap of unanswered greetings lay on the desk at her elbow, and the pen bristled in its rack with impatient waiting; still Miss Belle dreamed on.

"Here's a letter for you, Niece Farnsworth." Aunt Roxy had tolled upstairs and pushed open the door as she spoke. There were no preliminaries with the blunt old lady and she omitted the common courtesy of tapping on the panel, as useless, "seeing it was only Belle."

"Not by the postman," queried the girl, a rose color suffusing her anxious face; but luckily the old auntie did not notice the signal of the heart.

"No; a boy brought it a moment ago. Some business of the society, I presume," and Aunt Roxy waddled downstairs to her cozy corner again without even a suspicion of the purport of the message that could not wait to put in its appearance in the conventional way.

Hurriedly opening the cream-tinted envelope with its gold and blue monogram on the corner, Belle thanked Heaven for once that her aunt's eyesight was none of the best; then she read: "Dearest, I saw you to-day. The old love is warm in my heart; and I want your forgiveness, and the old-time confidence. Am hungry for your presence—would have starved to death long ago had it not been for the image. Am coming to see you this evening; going to make a New Year's call. Allan."

"Things are better than they have seemed for a long time," again modified Miss Farnsworth, folding the gold and blue monogram over her delighted heart, "and people aren't so bad after all!"

That night as the happy stars looked down over the rim of the new cycle and winked at some millions of crisp resolutions going up to the Recording Angel, Belle Farnsworth, very much alive, watched her lover out of sight around the corner, humming softly in her old-fashioned way.

"One is not obliged to be hypocritical after all, I find," she whispered to the beaming cupid hovering near, "and my New Year calls turned out lovely in spite of everything."

THE WISDOM OF JOHNNY.

"Johnny," said his father, "what good resolve are you going to make for the new year?"

"Well, I'm not goin' to fight with Tommy Jones any more," replied Johnny.

"I'm glad to hear that," said the father; "but how did you come to make that resolve?"

"'Cause I always get licked," was the answer.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

REVISION OF THE TARIFF.

Not Much Likelihood of Reform Under Rule of the Republican Party.

Evidently the standpatters are beginning to make themselves felt. For it is now said that the president has decided that there shall be no extra session next spring, while the question of summoning congress in the fall prior to the meeting of the regular session is to be held in abeyance. We should say that, if the matter is postponed till the regular session next December, the outlook for tariff reform, or revision, or adjustment, is not encouraging, says the Indianapolis News (Ind.). For a law enacted then would go into effect in the midst of a congressional campaign, and that is a contingency which members will be most desirous to avoid. The experiment was tried with the McKinley and Wilson bills, and it did not work well. The agitation in behalf of the Mills bill, which was being considered by the house at the time when the national democratic convention of 1888 was in session, caused a good deal of trouble. So it seems to us that the campaign of the standpatters has for its first object the preventing of an extra session of congress immediately on the adjournment of the present session.

That object has apparently been accomplished. The present tariff is safe for almost a year, at any rate. Of course, the tariff cannot thus be taken out of politics—rather it will gain new prominence. But those who feel that inaction is safer than any action that has been proposed, will no doubt congratulate themselves at the turn which affairs have taken. While those who are fattening off the present exorbitant duties will rejoice with exceeding great joy. We are not at all surprised that the republicans should be somewhat embarrassed in dealing with this question. Few of them are deceived by the owlish talk about amending special schedules or changing particular rates. They know that the whole thing hangs together, that everything depends on everything else, and that when the question is opened up it will be opened up wide. Free hides, for instance, would, unless the boot and shoe duties were correspondingly lowered, mean just so much protection to the manufacturers of boots and shoes. There is many a manufacturer who will subscribe enthusiastically to the doctrine of free raw materials, who would fight bitterly any attempt to lower the duty on his finished product. This is not true of all of them, but it is true of many.

So the problem is not so simple. Our republican friends have been taught to believe that the Dingley tariff is the perfection of legislation; they point to the prosperity that we have had with it in force; and the men who oppose any revision are insistent in their argument—of which we have heard so much—that we should let well enough alone. All the same the question is one which the republican party will sooner or later have to face. If it runs away from it some other party will have to do the work. There are powerful influences among the republicans favorable to reform, but the question is whether they are as powerful as the financial-political combination opposed to change. At present the latter appears to be the stronger. But its history may be short-lived. For after all the power is with the people, and the question is whether that power can make itself felt. It is not very important what this or that member of congress may think about this or another matter. For our congressmen have many times shown that they can turn somersaults with remarkable neatness and dispatch. Even those of them supposed to be subject to trust and corporation influence want to know first of all what their constituents think, and it is by the opinions of these latter that they govern themselves. Therefore, we would suggest that those republicans who want to see the tariff reformed shall inform their senators and representatives of their wishes.

LATE POLITICAL COMMENT.

——The new congress is the LIX., and it will put in its best "lix," or be downed by the deficit.—Albany Argus.

——Republican economy calls for five additional millions for next year's administration. Spendthrift extravagance might cost less.—St. Louis Republic.

——The trust's advances in the prices of sugar are made probably to cover the losses in campaign contributions. One result will be the souring of public opinion.—St. Louis Republic.

——Perhaps President Roosevelt fears that the tariff would need revision more than ever after the elements now on top in the party got through revising.—Chicago Daily News (Ind.).

——It is too early for profitable discussion of democracy's future, and the wise democrats are doing more thinking than talking. But no sane man imagines that the party is dead or has any notion of going out of business. It has never been disheartened by defeat. If its discretion had been equal to its courage, it would have escaped many afflictions, and would have been far more useful to the country. Yet it possesses one of the qualities that are attributed to truth. When crushed to earth it rises again.—Washington Post.

——Robert P. Porter, the stepfather of the Dingley bill, on his return from abroad declares for tariff revision. Again the awful influence of the Cobden club and British go-o-o-id!—Albany Argus.

——Secretary Shaw is also in favor of tariff revision—in spots, but he declines to specify the spots. This is as much of a concession to tariff revision sentiment as he is disposed to make. There is an apparent effort on his part, however, to create a diversion by directing attention to the drawback provisions of the existing tariff.—Springfield Republican (Ind.).

SOME HIGH TARIFF FACTS.

Republicans Waking Up to the Justice of Democratic Arguments.

Even some of the republican papers of Pennsylvania are waking up to the fact that the high tariff duties ought to be changed by the incoming congress. When the republican press of a state like Pennsylvania joins the ranks of tariff reformers, surely there must be good reason to complain, says the Indianapolis Sentinel.

During the campaign the republican papers and many of the campaign spellbinders said there was nothing in the democratic argument for tariff reform. Now some of these newspapers are using the very same arguments democratic speakers used on the subject. Every one seems to recognize that there is no justification for the high duty on steel rails. The duty on the rails is just seven dollars per ton of 2,000 pounds.

It is notorious that the price of steel rails in the United States is arbitrarily fixed by combination. It was pegged at $28 per ton in the spring of 1901, and if we are not mistaken that is the price f. o. b. at the mills that has been charged ever since that time. It is possible that when steel rails were delivered in the summer of 1898 at $17.50 per ton at New York city there was not a wide margin of profit to the manufacturer, for this must have represented f. o. b. at the mills about $16.50 per ton. But it seems to us clear that if no duty were imposed upon imported steel rails with the protection which costs of transportation both by water and land would give, the manufacturers of steel rails in the United States would be in a position to secure a full, round, legitimate profit. What they are now charging behind the tariff barrier of seven dollars a ton is simply a monopoly price, furnishing an entirely unjustifiable profit. This is in some degree shown by the willingness of these manufacturers to take orders for steel rails in foreign countries in free competition with the manufacturers of the world. When, as happened not a great while ago, a steel rail mill in Ohio can send rails by land and water transportation to Australia and sell them there at a price which defies English, Belgian, German and French competition, it is pretty clear that no domestic protection is required to enable this mill profitably to sell its output in the state of Ohio.

FRIENDS OF THE TARIFF.

The Republican Party Must Soon Make Some Move for Reasonable Reduction.

Prior to the opening of congress the question of tariff revision was foremost among the topics of discussion at Washington. There was a general impression that President Roosevelt, in accordance with intimations given out immediately after election, would arrange to call an extra session next spring for the express purpose of dealing with the tariff. Meantime, the initial measures necessary to prepare for such action were to be taken, says the Chicago Daily News (Ind.).

All speculation of this character has been silenced with the definite announcement that the plan to call an extra session a few months hence has been abandoned. There will be no extra session and no revision of tariff schedules until next fall, at the earliest, while action may be postponed until the regular session of next winter. It is evident that the president's attitude in this matter was fixed after consultation with the party leaders and with the congressmen as they arrived fresh from their constituencies. Some of these are of the opinion that there is no general demand for tariff revision. Others affirm that while the tariff should be revised it is a physical impossibility for the members of the ways and means committee to prepare themselves for intelligent action until after several months of hard work.

Admitting the force of this last contention, it is manifest that the republican party must soon make some move in the direction of more reasonable tariff schedules if it is not to be convicted of self-stultification. It could do much to promote popular confidence just now by establishing a nonpolitical tariff commission with instructions to go into the tariff question as a problem in pure economics and to deal with it practically and scientifically. This the party seems unlikely to do. Many of its leaders are disposed to let matters drift as they are.

If they are to continue in this attitude with what grace do they expect to be able to repeat their shibboleth about letting the tariff be revised "by its friends" when again they seek the favor of the voters?

——The president does not expect that this session will devote any of its time to the tariff, although he indicates that "our long-continued governmental policies," while being kept "substantially unchanged," should be "applied in a progressive spirit to meet changing conditions." Undoubtedly he has left it for a special message to inform congress whether in his opinion conditions have changed, and, if so, to urge the application of this progressive spirit to a consideration of existing tariff rates.—Chicago Evening Post.

——"Uncle Joe" Cannon finds two circumstances in which it is unwise to revise the tariff—when crops are good and when they are not.—N. Y. World (Ind.).

——A just and adequate overhauling of the Dingley tariff would very largely increase our income at the custom houses. We have no idea that the republican party will accomplish anything like an adequate revision of the present law, but no revision, however moderate, if undertaken in good faith, would lessen our revenue from duties. A more abundant revenue would be the immediate and natural result of lower customs taxes.—N. Y. Times.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

THE BEEF CARCASS.

Breeders of Beef Cattle Should Be Familiar with Location of the Different Cuts.

The breeder that intends to carry on his breeding operations for a series of years must have an ideal in his mind or he will be unable to make progress. Without some form toward which to breed one is as likely to breed away from the most profitable carcass as toward it. There are a good many men that know comparatively little about beef animals, though they are trying to produce them of a quality that will demand a big price in the market, says the Farmers Review. There are many such that could not possibly tell from what part of the carcass the porterhouse is taken, nor could they tell the relative value of a pound of neck meat and a pound of sirloin.

Realizing this deficiency, and with the idea of adding to the knowledge of such matters, the United States government issued a bulletin in which it showed the relative proportion of the cheap and expensive cuts on a carcass. We reproduce it here for the instruction of those readers that may not be perfectly familiar with the location on the carcass of the different cuts. The diagram shown here is that of a grade steer cut up by Chicago butchers. The prices are retail. In some markets in Chicago the prices for the finest cuts are somewhat higher than those shown here, but in those same markets the cheap cuts sell at a very low price. It not infrequently happens that the markets that charge for the poorer cuts less than they can be bought for in the low-priced markets. This is because in the neighborhoods in which the high-priced markets are situated there is a large demand for fine meat, but almost none for the cheaper cuts.

The lesson to be learned from the diagram is that the animal must be enlarged to those portions where the prime cuts of rib, porterhouse and sirloin are located. An animal must be grown long bodied, so that as much meat as possible will be included between the "chuck" on the shoulder and the rump at the hind end of the animal. The object of intelligent breeding is to reduce the quantity of cheap meat and increase the quantity of expensive meat. The legs are shortened so that there may be little "shank" and "shin." The neck also must be made as short as possible, as it is worth pound for pound only about one-seventh as much as the porterhouse, and not half as much as the round.

POULTRY PICKINGS.

In fattening turkeys for market use old corn.

Oats are exceptionally good for growing fowls.

If the perches are level the chicks won't crowd. (Make 'em movable.)

No bird can develop rapidly without a balanced ration.—Farmers' Review.

Be sure to give plenty of fresh water every day. When the weather is cold warm the water.

If eggs are wanted for hatching purposes, do not have too many cocks. One male to 15 hens for the farm is much better than two, if all run together.

Do not attempt to winter more than 25 hens in one flock. Divided into flocks of this number they will do better than where 100 are compelled to run together, and the profits will be greater.—Commercial Poultry.

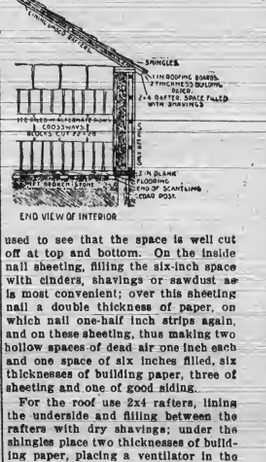
Dispose of all hens that are past the profitable age, which is, generally speaking, three years; and do not expect fertile eggs from cocks four to six years old. It is best to use either one or two-year-old males.—American Tribune.

Bad Air in Hen House.

Constantly breathing impure air soon makes us sick. Yet many men allow their hens to live in an atmosphere that is thick and heavy with disease germs, and then wonder why their birds sicken and die. We have heard of a case where the loss from death has been 75 per cent. during the last three years. No specific disease has been in the flock, but a general debility that caused death in one of several ways. This is an extreme case, although we know of several cases where the percentage of loss has taken all the profit from the business. These cases are among farmers who keep comparatively small flocks. —American Dairyman.

Clover Hay.

Well made clover hay is an excellent corrective for concentrated feeds in winter. For pig feeding clover hay should be run through the feed cutter and the chaffed material well soaked by pouring scalding water over it. To the material so softened add meal and feed the mixture once a day to all pigs except those in the last stages of fattening.—Orange Judd Farmer.



PREPARE FOR ICE HARVEST

Plans for Storage House That Will Protect the Ice During the Hot Days of Summer.

The time of preparation for harvesting the ice crop is again at hand. Some who have employed very temporary structures for the storage of their ice in the past are now thinking of building something better and more permanent. Others will cut ice for the first time this year. We are glad to see this, as an abundance of ice on every northern farm should be considered not a luxury, but a necessity.

If the site chosen be on a little rise above the adjacent ground level, surface drainage will give no trouble; otherwise provision for it, as well as for the water from the melting ice, must be made. For preparation for the foundation of the house, which can be placed on stone or cement walls, or on cedar posts set in the ground two feet, at least, excavate at least one foot below sills, and fill with cobble stones or very coarse gravel, the whole of the inside of the sills, smoothing off the surface with fine gravel or cinders. If the digging shows a clay soil, a drain should be put in to carry off surplus moisture, carrying drain well under the gravel. Scantlings can be bedded in the fine gravel on which to place a floor of cheap lumber, placed one inch apart to permit the water to pass through readily.

It takes on an average from 40 to 45 cubic feet to hold a ton of ice, consequently a building 12x16 feet by 12 feet high would hold about 45 tons of ice well packed. For a house of this size use 3x12 sound plank for sills and for uprights 2x6 scantling 12 feet long, placed two feet apart, at each corner, putting in an extra piece to catch lining on the inside. On the top spike 2x6 scantling doubled for plates. On the outside of house nail sheeting of common lumber, on which tack a double thickness of building paper, then strips 1x2x12 feet long; over this a double thickness of building paper and finish with matched siding. This gives a hollow space of dead air one inch to preserve heat of the sun penetrating to inside lining, care being used to see that the space is well cut off at top and bottom. On the inside nail sheeting, filling the six-inch space with cinders, shavings or sawdust as is most convenient; over this sheeting nail a double thickness of paper, on which nail one-half inch strips again, and on these sheeting, thus making two hollow spaces of dead air one inch each and one space of six inches filled, six thicknesses of building paper, three of sheeting and one of good siding.

For the roof use 2x4 rafters, lining the underside and filling between the rafters with dry shavings; under the shingles place two thicknesses of building paper, placing a ventilator in the center of the roof, made so that it can be closed inside if desirable. The door should be made in two halves, and a door in the gable over the plate to put in and take out the ice for two top layers. The gables should be built the same as the walls. If the outside of the building is painted white it will help to keep the building cool. The following is the bill for lumber for such a house; by securing prices from your local dealer you can readily determine the cost of material:

	Feet.
Sills, 2 pieces, 3-12-12 equal	72
Sills, 2 pieces, 3-12-16 equal	96
Cornice boards	75
Studs, 32 pieces, 2-6-12 equal	384
Plates, 4 pieces, 2-6-12 equal	48
Plates, 4 pieces, 2-6-16 equal	64
Studding for:
Gables, 4 pieces, 2-4-14 equal	37
Rafters, 16 pieces, 2-4-9 equal	192
Strips, 60 pieces, 1-2-12 equal	120
Three thickness sheeting over all	2,268
Roofing	325
Lining roof	250
Flooring	140
Scantling for floor, 5 pieces, 2-4-10 equal	33
Siding matched, 450 feet.
Shingles 2¼ square XXX cedar.
Twelve rolls sulphite building paper.

In lieu of some of the dead air spaces in above some pack sawdust around the ice, leaving a space between the ice and the wall wide enough so that more sawdust can be worked down in case of any loss around the sides. In sections where sawdust is plentiful very satisfactory results may be obtained with a very cheap building by using more sawdust. At a little additional expense a cold storage room can be built into the house, adjoining the door, with a tank where the milk and cream cans can be kept submerged in ice water and with shelves where fresh meats, butter, eggs, fruits and vegetables can be kept. Such a house should, of course, be placed convenient to the dwelling. An ice saw and tongs are all the extra tools necessary for the filling of a small house. In filling the blocks of ice should be placed on edge.

The pond, whether temporary or permanent, from which the ice is to be taken should also receive attention at this time. It should not only be cleared of all brush and other trash that will interfere in a mechanical way with the ice harvest, but it should be so cleaned that the ice will be clean and pure.

THE USE OF TIME

New Year's Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, Dec. 25, 1904.

Text: "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."—Psalm 90:12.

OUR text is a prayer—fervid and brief. It is credited to Moses, the man of God, and if this great organizer and law-giver and leader needed to pray thus, how much more we, who have come after, and have entered into the heritage of that greater era which knows the Leader of leaders, of which Moses both wrote and spoke. There is nothing in this world which God has given into the hands of man so valuable as time, and there is nothing of which he is so profligate. Time! What is it? Stroughton puts it pungently and forcibly thus: "Time is life's freightage, wherewith some men trade, and make a fortune; and others suffer it to molder all away, or waste in extravagance. Time is life's book, out of which some extract wondrous wisdom; while others let it lie uncovered, and then die fools. Time is life's tree, from which some gather precious fruit, while others lie down under its shadow, and perish with hunger. Time is life's ladder, whereby some raise themselves up to honor and renown and glory; and some let themselves down into the deeps of shame, degradation and ignominy. Time will be to us what, by our use of the treasure, we make it—a good or an evil, a blessing or a curse." With time so laden with possibilities for good and evil; for this life and the life to come, well may we pause at this season of the year, and Make Moses' prayer our prayer: "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." So impress us with the value of time that wisdom shall become our teacher, and we shall no longer waste or misuse that which is so precious.

HOW often one hears the words spoken with regretful sigh: "If I had more time, I would do so and so," referring to some neglected duty, some unimproved opportunity, some kindly word or service left undone. And the soul would unconsciously seek refuge in the thought that the fault lay not within the individual, but was chargeable to time itself. But we have all the time there is. We have all the time which God intended we should have. He has placed 24 hours in each day, for which we are accountable to Him, and surely this is responsibility enough, without wishing that the day were longer, that we had more time. Idle is the wish for more time. Reckless and unrighteous is the longing for the hours to pass swiftly and bring another day. It is not a case of the changing of time, a retarding or a hastening of its passage. It is a matter of the use to which time is put. God does not come to you and to me and ask us how many hours we had in the day, but how did we use those hours. And He from Whose hands the hours have come with such faithful regularity is the One to Whom we must render our accounting. I do not think it is possible for man in and of himself to decide how best he can use the time which is given him. He needs Divine guidance in the use of that which God treasures so highly as to give it with frugal hand, moment by moment. Fenelon has said that God has done this that He might impress man with the worth of time. "He never gives us two moments together, nor grants us a second till He has withdrawn the first, still keeping the third in His own hands, so that we are in perfect uncertainty whether we shall have it or not."

"SO TEACH us." We need to enter God's school and learn of Him just how to use time. We need to know the Divine values and to understand the highest uses to which time may be put. With what unworthy aims and motives man fills the moments as they pass. With what greedy hand he reaches out and gathers from the fleeting days the treasures of this life which perish with the using. With what thoughtless endeavor and aimless purpose he fills the hours as they pass. But man, even at his best, if left to his own counsels and wisdom, is more than apt to misuse the time. How futile and needless are some of man's best efforts as they stand revealed in the light of the experiences of subsequent days. How often we have to look back on past endeavor and admit that it was misdirected and useless. Our purpose may have been the purest, our energies wisely directed, our ideals the noblest, but, notwithstanding all this, we realize at last that human conceptions and expectations have failed, our plans have miscarried, and the time spent has been practically thrown away. But if we had looked to a higher wisdom than our own, if we had been obedient to a leadership which was unerring and faultless, we would have done differently, we would have written a different record, time's pages would have had a different story to tell. Ah! if the prayer, "So teach us," had been on our lips, and within the heart there had been the humble spirit of dependence upon God, we would not have to mournfully say:

"The key of yesterday
I threw away,
And now, too late,
Before to-morrow's close-locked gate
Helpless I stand—in vain to pray!
In vain to sorrow!
Only the key of yesterday
Unlocks to-morrow."

GOD alone, Who sees the end from the beginning, Who knows our down sittings and our uprisings, Whose searching eye penetrates the human heart deeper than man's eye can ever go, is able in infinite wisdom and love to aid man in the highest and best use of time. As we begin the day, God knows how many hours are to pass into our hands, and He alone can teach us how to use those hours to the best good of man, and to the honoring of God. A day thoughtfully, prayerfully, begun is more than half-conquered. A day feverishly and hastily plunged into is filled with the pitfalls of failure and disappointment into which are dumped many a precious moment and hour. If the Spirit of God so ruled in the life as to make it sensitive to the Divine will, and the moments were used as He would have them, life would take on new meaning; business, social and domestic affairs would be dignified with higher ideals and holier methods, and the hours of recreation, the play time which is essential to healthy, vigorous life, would be wholesome and ennobling. The prayer of our text is justified by the innumerable promises of God that He will give wisdom, that He will guide and direct. James sums it all up by saying: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." It is the privilege of God's children to draw on the banking house of God for unlimited supplies of wisdom. No check properly drawn and presented is ever dishonored. Man may have all the help he needs in wisely and faithfully using the time as it passes. And in the purpose and will of God each moment may become studded with priceless gems of enduring brilliancy and beauty. Using the time as God would have us is building for eternity.

WE ARE all familiar with the story of the lady, who, floating over the sea in a boat, was suddenly wakened to discover that her magnificent necklace of pearls had become unfastened by some accident and the loose end hanging down in the water was dropping the precious pearls one by one into the unrecoverable depths. So with us. We let the pearly moments slip into the unredeemable past. May we awaken to a sense of our loss. The lines of Susan Coolidge's "The Lost Days," come to me:

"As, each in turn, the Old Years rise and
gird them up to go,
The days which were their servitors, press round them sad and slow.
The happy days, the hard days, the bitter and the dear;
And they front us with reproachful eyes
as they wend forth with the year.

"The lost days which except for us so blessed might have been,
Blighted by our perversity, or shadowed
by our sin.
The waning days, the moody days, the days of stress and pain,
The shrill, perverse, unhappy days, we face them all again.

"'Come back, dear days,' we cry; 'we will atone for all the wrong;
Your emptiness shall be made full, your discords turned to song.'
Only the echo answers; all vain the grieving sore.
The past is past, the dead is dead, the chance returns no more.

"But, as the sweetest hopes are born of sharpest suffering,
And midnight is the womb of day, and winter of the spring,
So, winning blessing from despair, lost opportunity
May serve to make the fruitful soil of harvests yet to be.

"For each day heavy made by us, some day may gather wings,
Be every failure that we mourn the germ
of happier things,
And all the sadness of the past the seed of hope new-born,
Till out of defeated night bursts the triumphant morn.

"The Old Years, stern, inexorable, may go their ways in vain;
The days we marred and mourn shall smile
if from their perished pain
Distills a perfume, shines a gleam, to make the future way
The brighter and the easier because of yesterday."

ANOTHER thought which we would emphasize in connection with this matter of the use of time is the importance of gathering the odd moments as they pass. In large endeavors and purposes we may be splendidly working out the will and purpose of God. We may be using the time in the wisest and best way possible, and yet, while our eyes are on the larger interests, we may be letting the fragmentary moments slip unused away. He Who told His disciples to gather up the fragments after the 5,000 had been fed, so values the precious moments that He would have us gather up the fragments that lie about unused. In the palace of industry one of the world's great expositions were several curious specimens of art, wrought by humble individuals out of such fragments of time as they could secure from their regular occupations. Boyle remarks "that sand-grains are easily scattered about; but skillful artificers gather, melt and transmute them to glass, of which they make mirrors, lenses and telescopes. Even so, vigilant Christians improve parenthetic fragments of time, employing them in self-examination, acts of faith, and researches of holy truth; by which they become looking-glasses for their souls, and telescopes revealing their promised Heaven." Jewelers save the very sweepings of their shops, because they contain particles of precious metal. "Should Christians, whose every moment was purchased for them by the blood of Christ, be less careful of time? Surely its very minutiae," exclaims Coley, "should be more treasured than grains of gold or dust of diamonds."

NOTES ABOUT ANIMALS.

The cat, besides its liking for valerian, has shown a taste for caffeine, which brings painful and fatal results.

Elephants are always particular about their food, and will not touch their hay unless it is sweet and clean. The process of digestion is a very rapid one, and for this reason these animals require an enormous amount. One elephant usually consumes about 600 pounds of fodder every day.

When large flocks of wild ducks and geese have to travel long distances, they invariably form a triangle, to cleave the air more easily, and the most courageous bird takes position at the forward angle. As this is a very fatiguing post, another bird ere long takes the place of the exhausted leader.

An extraordinary use of the same sleeping quarters by diurnal and nocturnal animals is recorded by a naturalist of Ceylon. Barberyn Light-house island, 35 miles south of Colombo, is inhabited by day by fruit bats or flying foxes, and at night by crows, and at sunrise and sunset may be seen the curious spectacle of two immense flocks flying in opposite directions across the strait separating the island from the mainland, the flying foxes at a greater elevation than the crows. The cross migration, lasting about half an hour, is attended by great chattering of flying foxes and of cawing crows.

It is not generally known that the common porcupine is an inhabitant of both southern Italy and Spain, and that its flesh is a regular item of consumption. As the animal is a very clean feeder, the meat is of fine quality and has a taste something between that of chicken and of pork. It is believed to have been naturalized in Italy by the Romans, just as they probably brought the rabbit to England. In South Africa porcupines are regularly hunted at night with dogs. Lions and leopards also eat them, though they suffer severely from the quills. Old and decrepit lions eat them when they can get no other food and are sometimes killed with the quills sticking in their jaws.

RELATED OF WRITERS.

The late Louis de Moulin, Denmark's prolific novelist, used to write half a dozen stories at once.

The late George Gissing, an English novelist, left an estate worth $5,265. And yet he received good prices for his writings.

The archbishop of Canterbury will shortly publish the sermons and speeches he delivered in America under the title of "The Christian Opportunity."

Copenhagen has lost its most prolific novelist by the death of Louis de Moulin. He used to write half a dozen stories at once. Many of them were printed in the Danish Review, and he is said to have been bound by contract to furnish at least five murders in each story.

Eduard von Hartmann is the first German philosopher who has lived to see one of his works reach its eleventh edition. It is his "Philosophy of the Unconscious," which first appeared in 1869. At present he actually deplores the popularity of that book, which gave him the reputation of being an atheist as well as a pessimist.

John Forster, who wrote the biography of Charles Dickens, was a person of pompous manner. Dickens was one day dining at Forster's house. Boiled beef was put on the table and the host noticed that the usual carrots were missing. He rang the bell and the maid came. "Mary," he said, "carrots!" The girl said that there were none. "Mary, was the stern rejoinder (with a wave of the hand), "let there be carrots!"

NOT SUCH A FUNNY TRICK.

Drummer's Joke on Waiter Turned Out a Costly One On Himself.

"I suppose there comes to every man a desire to do something smart on an occasion," said the drummer, as a sigh took the place of his smile, according to the New York Times.

"Well, such a desire came to me as I was leaving a certain southern city after a week's stay. The waiter at my table had called me 'General' and been at great pains to care for me and I made up my mind to reward him with a $5 bill. It was a counterfeit with which I had been stuck, but I thought it would be the biggest kind of a joke to work off on Bob.

"I had got a hundred miles away when I was arrested on a telegram for passing counterfeit money, and when taken back I was arraigned in a United States court and had to give bail and appear on three different occasions. I had a lawyer and other expenses, lost a good three weeks altogether and just escaped prison by the skin of my teeth. In addition to this I had to make good to the waiter, who sorrowfully shook his head when he received the money and said:

"I'ze sorry for you, General, but dis may be de means of savin' your contemptible soul from the gallus!"

JUST LIKE PRISON ROUTINE.

Boastful Traveler Brought to a Pause by a Very Embarrassing Question.

The scene was a third-class smoking compartment, five on a side. The speaker was stout, florid, with short-cut grey hair, and was very self-satisfied. The effeminate degeneracy of modern young men was his theme, relates London Tit-Bits.

"Look at me! Sixty years of age—never had a day's illness in my life, and can do my four miles an hour! Why? Because from when I was 20 to when I was over 40 I lived a regular life. No delicacies for me! No late hours! Every day, summer and winter, I went to bed at nine, got up at five, lived principally on porridge, worked hard, and mind you, from eight to one, then dinner, then an hour's walking exercise, and then—"

"Beg your pard'n, guv'nor," interrupted a young working man sitting opposite, "but wot was you in for?"

Hensley, Ark., Dec. 26th.—(Special)—That a sure cure for Backache would be a priceless boon to the people, and especially the women of America, is admitted by all interested in medical matters, and Mrs. Sue Williams of this place is certain she has found in Dodd's Kidney Pills the long-looked-for cure.

"I am 38 years old," Mrs. Williams says, "and have suffered with Backache from much for three or four years. I have been treated by good physicians and got no relief, but thanks to God, I have found a cure at last and it is Dodd's Kidney Pills. I have taken only one box and it has done me more good than all the doctors in three or four years. I want all sufferers from Backache to know that they can get Dodd's Kidney Pills and get well."

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Thompson, of Lillydale, N. Y., Grand Worthy Wise Templar, and Member of W. C. T. U., tells how she recovered from a serious illness by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am one of the many of your grateful friends who have been cured through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and who can to-day thank you for the fine health I enjoy. When I was thirty-five years old, I suffered severe backache and frequent bearing-down pains; in fact, I had womb trouble. I was very anxious to get well, and reading of the cures your Compound had made, I decided to try it. I took only six bottles, but it built me up and cured me entirely of all my troubles.

"My family and relatives were naturally as gratified as I was. My niece had heart trouble and nervous prostration, and was considered incurable. She took your Vegetable Compound and it cured her in a short time, and she became well and strong, and her home to her great joy and her husband's delight was blessed with a baby. I know of a number of others who have been cured of different kinds of female trouble, and am satisfied that your Compound is the best medicine for sick women."—MRS. ELIZABETH H. THOMPSON, Box 105, Lillydale, N. Y.

Thousands upon thousands of women throughout this country are not only expressing such sentiments as the above to their friends, but are continually writing letters of gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham, until she has hundreds of thousands of letters from women in all classes of society who have been restored to health by her advice and medicine after all other means had failed.

Here is another letter which proves conclusively that there is no other medicine to equal Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered with poor health for over seven years, not sick enough to stay in bed, and not well enough to enjoy life and attend to my daily duties properly. I was growing thin, my complexion was sallow, and I was easily upset and irritable.

"One of my neighbors advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I procured a bottle. A great change for the better took place within a week, and I decided to keep up the treatment.

"Within two months I was like a changed woman, my health good, my step light, my eyes bright, my complexion vastly improved, and I felt once more like a young girl. I wonder now how I ever endured the misery. I would not spend another year like it for a fortune.

"I appreciate my good health, and give all the praise to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. M. TILLA, 407 Habersteen St., Savannah, Ga.

IT was certainly very kind of Senator Platt, of New York, to send a delegation to Mr. Odell, telling him that the machine had decided to allow Senator Depew another term, and that it is perfect folly for him to butt in.

IT is not as to who will be Governor of Colorado, Adams or Peabody, until after the legislature meets to decide the matter. The legislature is largely Republican, and straws show which way the wind blows.

THE salary of the Governor of Indiana is $8,000 a year with an allowance of $1,000 a year for house rent. The office would have the same incumbents at less than half of these two amounts, and they would be just as good officers.

WHEN looking for political machines do not neglect casting your eyes towards Indiana, where about four men is all that is necessary to select a United States Senator for that great State, depriving the legislature of all its voice in the matter save voting for the choice of the machine.

The annual report of the Dawes Indian Commission reviews the allotment of lands to the five civilized tribes. This work, if completed as expected by July 1, 1905, will have occupied seven years. It involves 20,000,000 acres of land, and, while the records are voluminous, the cost, it is stated, will be less than ten cents an acre.

IN a recent issue the Cincinnati Enquirer announced that it will never again follow the leadership of Bryan nor Parker, something of which the public did not know that that paper had ever been guilty. If the Enquirer ever rendered any political party any assistance that party is the Republican party, which has grown in Hamilton county and the State of Ohio in the last few years until it is becoming hard work to find enough Democrats to act as officers of the elections. The Enquirer is certainly a great paper but its greatness is not because of its soundness politically.

IT has been found that the Federal Government can not appropriate money to care for the tomb of Zachery Taylor, near Louisville, for the reason that the strip of land on which it stands belongs to the State of Kentucky and the United States can not care for it unless the title is with the Government. The State acquired the land in 1878. Governor Beckham last year vetoed an appropriation for the care of the burial ground on the ground that the State's money could not legally be used for such a purpose. The neglected condition of the last resting place of the hero of the Mexican War and President of the United States has often been commented on, but it appears that there is no remedy for the neglect only private subscription.

Jottings on the Way.

[By Old Reliable]

To the Editor of the Recorder:

In company with a friend I left Burlington a few Monday mornings since for a trip through a considerable portion of the county, partly on business and partly for pleasure. We left town real early, and while jogging along the Petersburg pike, about two miles out, we met W. A. Gaines, of Idlewild, driving a large drove of nice cattle. He was the same good-humored, smiling Billie of yore. As we past on the thought came to me what a pity it is that Boone county has not a great many W. A. Gaineses. We noticed all the farms along the road are in first class condition and the out-buildings and fences in tip top shape, an unmistakable evidence of the prosperity of their owners.

Not far from Idlewild we met W. D. Cropper, the genial Billie. He was leading the poorest excuse of a dog we ever laid eyes on, and when asked what he would take for him he bluffed us by saying $20 would not buy him. We asked Billie if it was true that he opposed the introduction of the free rural delivery on the Burlington route because he liked to go there after his mail. He smiled and said, "I must go home and feed my dog."

At Idlewild we met a crowd of the cleverest men in the State—Fred Pfalzgraf, Jim Brown, John Winston and Luther Scothorn, which was joined in a few minutes by Hon. N. S. Walton, who told how his son, the good-natured-never-get-out-of-humor, Courtney, clad only in a pair of slippers, drove the hogs out of his yard one morning when the thermometer was down below freezing. N. S. was given the certificate and we left for Petersburg, where we arrived at high noon and partook of a first-class dinner with the jolly, good-natured Ben Crisler, whose table we will recommend to anybody who wants a good meal. In the course of our business we became acquainted with Berkshire & McWethy, proprietors of a large drygoods store on the principal street in the town. They are clever men, but we think they could increase their business by patronizing the advertising department of the RECORDER. They carry a large and carefully selected stock. We called also at the business houses of E. T. Krutz and M. L. Gordon, each of whom is doing a good business in his particular lines. While in Petersburg we were introduced to James B. Tolin, the noted newspaper writer. He was found at the millinery emporium, and very busy inspecting ladies' hats. We dropped in at E. L. Helm's, where we found the neatest barber shop we ever saw in a country town. Mr. Helms is very accommodating and attentive to business and the most popular man in Petersburg. The next man sought was our old neighbor and political opponent, Billie Stephens, but as we were informed he had a cold and could not talk, we held Col. George R. Berkshire up for a twenty minutes interview. He is the Russell Sage of Petersburg. He unbosomed himself and explained the cause of the great November political land slide. The Colonel is a fine reasoner, and it is no trouble for him to locate the cause when the effect is known.

About 3 p. m. we left for Bellevue. Just below town we saw our friend Frank Smith at a distance, and was sorry we had not time to chat with him. He has a fine farm which he keeps in first class condition. Not far from Mr. Smith's lives the old-stand-up-and-never-sit--down--always--for-the-under-dog-in-a-fight, Elijah Parker. He has not changed much since we went to school with him in the forties. He has always taken great interest in politics and keeps well posted in current events. He has a very fine recollection, and describes most vividly the exciting events in which he took part while in the rebellion. From Mr. Parker's we passed into the Bellevue bottoms, where our attention was attracted by the excellent condition in which James Rogers and sons are keeping their fine farms, among the best in the county. We were soon on the streets of the city of Bellevue, where we met Dr. Williamson, who had been indisposed for several weeks At Rogers, Eugene Kelly, Wili Grant, Henry Clore and Mike Corbin, each of whom is as clever a fellow as one wants to meet. We were sorry that we did not meet our old friend C. H. Acra, the veteran newspaper correspondent, as he would have been able to give us some desired information. As we passed through McVille, we saw Geo. and William Williamson, the accommodating ferrymen at that point, who have improved the ferry property and are laying aside something for the rainy day period in life. It was dark when we reached Rabbit Hash, where we cast our lot for the night with Capt. Ben Wilson, who has been doing business there for about a quarter of a century as ferryman. He and his family are very clever people, especially so is Mrs. Alice Clore, their daughter. Next morning we called at C. G. Riddell's store where we met several persons, among them Z. T. Kelly, B. C. Calvert, J. H. Walton and Geo. W. Ward, who are among the leading farmers of that community. We spent a few minutes with Dr. Hopkins, who was trying to get his baby to sleep by singing an opera from Florodora. The Doctor enjoys a large practice and is liked by the people in the neighborhood. On down the river we went into East Bend, where we found many changes had been made since our last visit. The first we met down there were the Hager boys, Pete and Reuben. Their large farms are kept in a high state of cultivation. One of the hard workers and successful farmers of this neighborhood is Frank Scott, son of Esquire Moses Scott. The Hodges in this neighborhood are numerous, and are all industrious and quite successful farmers. It was noon when we reined up at Mosby Allen's, where we were invited to as good a meal as anyone would wish to sit down to. It would be very difficult to find a cleverer family in this State. About 2 o'clock we arrived at Wood Miller's store. He is the clever man of yore—the same as when we use to meet him on the base ball diamond. He has a very neat store and is doing a good business It was here that we met Dr. Slater, a recent comer, and who is already enjoying a good practice. Ed Bradley, Jack Baker, J. L. Jones and Joe Green were exchanging yarns around the stove, but took time to show us all the courtesy possible. Our time being limited we did not get to see Dr. Ryle. We stayed that night with B. H. Stephens up in the hill country. Mr. S. is an accomplished story teller and kept us amused until a late hour. He told us the following good one on the Editor of the RECORDER: "I dreamed that I died and went to heaven, and when St. Peter met me at the gate, instead of showing me the way to the golden streets as I expected he would, he took me into a large field, in the middle of which there was a ladder reaching up into the sky out of sight. He told me heaven was at the top of the ladder, and in order to get there I must take the big piece of chalk he gave me, and slowly climb the ladder, writing on each rung of it, some sin I had committed. Just as I was trying to think of something to write on the second rung, I looked up and saw the Editor of the RECORDER coming down. I asked him why he was coming down, and he said, 'after more chalk.'" After an early breakfast I reluctantly bid Mr. Stephens adieu, and proceeded to Hathaway, stopping at the store of Houston & Weaver, two clever and accommodating gentlemen. A large crowd was about the stove listening to Raymond Smith telling about his new boy trying to talk. In the crowd was W. S. White, W. L. Stephens, Claud Ryle, S. H. Marshall and others, each of whom was in the best of humor. Having finished our business we left for Burlington about 10 o'clock, expecting to get home about dinner, but when we arrived at Dave Williamson's our plans were upset, for anybody who knows Dave knows it is impossible to pass his house at meal time—for he wont let you until you eat with him. So we had to stay until after dinner. When Dave comes to Burlington get him to tell how he and his brother Gum caught the two coons. It was about four o'clock when we reached Burlington, much pleased and gratified at the result of our trip from both business and social standpoints. With Many thanks to all, with whom we came in contact, for the many kindnesses and courtesies shown us, we will now say farewell.

ORVILLE VAUGHN

Accidentally Shot and Killed While Out Hunting with his Nephew, Chester Tanner.

Just as the period of good cheer was dawning, a pall of sorrow was spread over Gunpowder and Hopeful neighborhoods by the accidental shooting and killing of Orville Vaughn, a very popular young farmer of that part of the county, and homes where a merry Christmas was anticipated are all darkness and sorrow. Mr. Vaughn and Chester Tanner, about 17, son of Henry Lewis Tanner, and a nephew of Mr. Vaughn, started out last Thursday morning for a rabbit hunt. They had gone but a short distance from Mr. Vaughn's residence, when they came to a pile of brush in which they suspected there was a rabbit. They both mounted the brush pile and tramped over it, but no rabbit came out. When they got off of the brush pile, young Tanner laid his gun across his arm to let the hammer down, and his hand being gloved it let the hammer slip, discharging the gun, the entire load taking effect in the left side of Mr. Vaugh, who was standing near. He died in a few minutes, the only words he ever spoke after the accident being, "Chester, you have shot me." The immediate neighbors were all away from home and it was some time before the body of the unfortunate man could be taken to the house, where his wife was almost prostrated by the sad accident.

Chester Tanner's grief over the unfortunate affair is intense.

Coroner Murat, of Constance, was called and held the inquest, and returned a verdict in accordance with facts.

Orville Vaughn is a son of John Vaughn, of Florence, who has had three sons to meet tragic deaths. About 20 years ago a son just large enough for that kind of work went to the pasture to catch a horse, and being gone too long was sent for and was found lying in the field, having been kicked by a horse. The child lived but a few hours. Several years ago a son who was brakeman on the Q. & C. railroad, was killed in a collision, and last Thursday another was shot accidentally and killed.

Orville Vaughn married Miss Laura Sebree, daughter of the late John Sebree, who, several years ago, lived on Gunpowder near what is known as the Weldon farm. To them was born one child, a son, who is about 11 years of age.

Geologists claim that the bed of the Ohio river once covered the land now occupied by cities in the valley. A find made at Portsmouth the other day gives additional evidence to the truth of their contention. A contractor, in sinking a dry well, unearthed, at a depth of thirty-one feet a relic supposed to be of an age prior to the records of man. It was nothing more or less than a half-pound lump of coal, rounded polished by the action of water. That it had been washed along the bed of the stream and worn to its present form seems certain and is proof that Portsmouth as well as other Ohio river towns are built upon the bed of a prehistoric stream.

With trees rapidly disappearing from the fields and rain fall on the decline the water problem here is becoming serious. The earth is now very dry and unless there is considerable rain fall between now and the cropping season another drought is inevitable. When rain falls now it runs off before the earth can take it up to any great extent, and amount of moisture contained by the ground has been at the minimun in this part of the country for several years.

Heard this good one a few days since on, until recently, a citizen of Bullittsville, whom, for brevity, we will call Mr. G. Mrs. G. had been trying for several days to get him to take some eggs and set a turkey hen, but without effect. On this occasion she was making the request in somewhat of an emphatic manner when he replied, "Oh pshaw!——, that turkey is not half as anxious to set as I am." He was allowed to set.

The official canvass of the votes cast in the forty-five States November 8th for presidential electors shows that the total vote was 13,968,574 in 1904. Roosevelt received 7,627,632 votes and Parker 5,080,054, as majority over Parker of 2,547,573, and over all of 1,746,768. The vote for Roosevelt was 409,322 more than for McKinley in 1900, while that for Parker was 1,277,772 less than for Bryan.

A month or six weeks ago Dr. C. E. Barnett, one of the professors in Ft. Wayne, Indiana, Medical College, visited Dr. W. O. Rouse, of this place, and the Doctor gave him for analysis a specimen of water taken from the well at the Baptist church, near the Forks of Gunpowder, and a few days since he received the following analysis:

"Qualative Analysis, mineral water from springs from Boone county, Kentucky. Sample furnished by Dr. C. E. Barnett was 90cc.

Saline Reaction.

1. Magnesium carbonate, Test good
2. Magnesium sulphate, " "
3. Potassium carbonate, " "
4. Potassium sulphate, " poor
5. Sodium sulphate, " good
6. Potassium nitrate, " faint
7. Ferrous oxide, " strong
8. Silica, test very good
9. Calcium carbonate, test good
10. Calcium phosphate, " trace
11. Sulphur, " "
12. Lithium carbonate, test not good

This analysis compares fairly well with the Navajo water.

The Christmas tree at the public school house last Friday afternoon was the principal event of the season among the juvenile population. There was a general exchange of presents among the pupils, who had been busy for several days preparing their gifts, many of which were indeed very nice, and highly appreciated by the recipients. Before the distribution of the presents an appropriate program was rendered by the school, at the conclusion of which, Mr. Ab Gaines, disguised as Santa Claus, appeared and gladdened the hearts of the pupils, both large and small, by delivering to them the fruit the tree bore for them. The school gave Prof. and Mrs. Hughes a set of silver teaspoons and a sugar shell.

A timely discovery prevented the Erlanger Baptist church building from burning, one day last week. A lady who chanced to be passing discovered a small thread of smoke coming from the basement, and gave the alarm just as the fire was getting a start. How the fire originated is not known.

W. J. Rice lost a yearling heifer in a very peculiar manner one night last week. He had cut a hole in the ice on a pond so his cattle could get water. The calf went to get a drink when all its feet slipped through the hole in the ice in such a manner as to fasten and hold it until it died.

The stove pipe at the bank was on a strike, last Monday morning, and Cashier Revill had to summon Henry Webb to assist him to put the obstinate pipe in operation. By the time they got the stove in working order, they had the bank floor a beautiful black color, which it took some time to clean off.

A fifteen year-old son of William Bowman, jr., of Garrison, while out hunting yesterday accidentally discharged his gun, the load of which so mangled his foot as to render amputation necessary. Last year Mr. Bowman lost two children of pneumonia within two weeks of each other.

Not a minute should be lost when a child shows symptoms of croup. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, will prevent the attack. It never fails, and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all Druggists.

Last May an Eagle creek farmer gave out the following crop forecast in the Williamstown Courier:

"This is going to be the most favorable summer in forty years, to those who sleep not too long. Corn is going to be worth $2.50 to $3.00 this fall. Tobacco from $4.50 to $25.00 per hundred, according to quality. Wheat high, and all crops will bring a good price, but hard to raise and save in Kentucky. Large shortage in tobacco acreage, and much of the land in the tobacco belt is worn out. Hold your tobacco this fall for an average of ten cents and you will get it."

All animals on the farm prefer foods that may not be relished by some others. The farmer should take advantage of this fact and utilize all the materials that might be wasted if there were some animals that would not accept them. A judicious use of the feed cutter, mixing a little bran or meal with the cut food, and tempting the animals with a variety will render serviceable even such foods as wheat straw. There are several modes of serving corn fodder that will make it acceptable to dainty animals.

REFORMS IN RUSSIA.

Emperor Nicholas Holding Councils Daily With Ministers.

Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky, M. Witte and Count Solsky Favor a Policy of Concession—The Others Are in Opposition to It.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 22.—Emperor Nicholas is holding councils daily at Tsarskjos-Selo, at which, it is understood, the internal situation in Russia is being thoroughly discussed. Among those who are attending the councils are Grand Duke Michael, the brother of the emperor, ministers and members of the council of the empire, including Prince Sviatapolk-Mirsky, minister of the interior; M. Witte, president of the ministerial council; M. Pobodontsoff, procurator general of the Holy Synod; M. Muravieff, minister of justice; M. Kokovzoff, minister of finance; Count Vorontzoff-Dashkoff, head of the Russian Red Cross; Count Solsky and Mm. Ernioff, Fritch, Eichter and Hesse. Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky laid before the council the addresses and resolutions adopted by the congress of zemstvos which was held here last month.

Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky, M. Witte and Count Solsky favored a policy of concession, but the others opposed such a policy on the ground that the demands of the zemstvoists were subversive of the essential principles of the autocracy. In the opinion of the council it is not the time to entertain proposals looking to a change in the existing form of government while war is in progress, and it was decided to discourage political agitation. Measures will be drawn up relative to the distress consequent upon mobilization.

STEAMER LADY MITCHELL.

It Reached Port Arthur With Supplies, Ammunition, Etc.

London, Dec. 22.—The Daily Telegraph's Chefoo correspondent says that the steamer Lady Mitchell, which sailed from Tsingao with supplies, ammunition and dynamite, reached Port Arthur during a snow storm four nights ago. He also says it is reported that the Japanese were compelled to evacuate their position on Etse mountain, owing to a flanking fire from other forts and the explosion of Russian mines, from which they lost heavily.

The Japanese, the correspondent adds, are employing thousands of coolies making strong forts at Dalny and around Port Arthur. They express a determination to capture Port Arthur before the Chinese new year. An attack is now preparing that will be on a hitherto unequaled scale, and it will mean either success or terrible disaster to the besiegers. The correspondent concludes by saying that it is stated that Gen. Nogi has asked for 60,000 reinforcements from Japan.

HICKORY WOOD.

There Is An Increasing Scarcity In That Class of Timber.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—Increasing scarcity of hickory wood in the United States has alarmed the manufacturers of wooden vehicles to such an extent that a meeting here Wednesday of over 200 representatives of these manufacturers the advisability of taking the matter before congress was discussed. Hickory trees recently have been attacked by an insect, which, it is said, is fast destroying that class of timber. At Wednesday's meeting it was declared that unless the government took action in devising means whereby these insects could be kept from breeding, in ten years practically all hickory trees in the United States will have been destroyed.

BIG TRACTION DEAL.

Alliance of Philadelphia, Indianapolis, Cleveland and Cincinnati Interests.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 23.—An alliance of traction interests from Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Toledo, Cleveland and Philadelphia is being completed that will give to Western Ohio and Eastern Indiana the most important, far-reaching and comprehensive system of suburban lines in the world. The plans are so far along now that the success of the plan can no longer remain a subject of doubt.

The main spirits of the undertaking are the Elkins-Widener traction interests of Philadelphia, represented by W. Kelsey Schoepf, manager of the company's lines in Cincinnati, and Hugh J. McGowan, manager of the company's lines at Indianapolis and through that part of Indiana.

The plans call for through lines from all the large cities reached and will bring hundreds of miles of traction under one management and in one system.

Back of the report that the Cincinnati, Dayton & Toledo Railway Co. is to be taken over for a long term of years by a leading company, and the other report that the Western Ohio railway interests are to build an extension of that system from Lima to Findlay, lie the plans for this, the most important traction development in the history of the state.

Carried to what now appears definitely as its goal, the plans will give a trolley connection tying together the lines from Cincinnati to Toledo to Indianapolis and Cleveland, forming the first trans-state and long-distance interstate traction system in that portion of Ohio. It will enable travel between Indianapolis, Toledo, Cleveland, Fort Wayne and Cincinnati over trolley lines between any or all of the cities, and promises to weld with one traction system the entire western portion of Ohio and the eastern portions of Indiana.

News of Its Proceeding West From Singapore Causes Interest In Russia.

STATE NEWS ITEMS

FOR THE DEFENSE.

Senator A. H. Hargis, One of the Defendants, Took the Stand.

Winchester, Ky., Dec. 22.—After Judge Beaton overruled the motion of defendants for peremptory instructions and had ordered defendants to proceed the defense introduced Senator A. H. Hargis, one of the defendants. He is 45 years old and lives in Clark county, but has extensive farming and mercantile interests in Breathitt. He has been a school commissioner of Breathitt county and served one term as state senator. He is a democratic voter, his party ticket, and contributes to the campaign fund, but has taken no active part in politics for years. He denied specifically that he had conspired with any one to kill Marcum, and had been a friend to Marcum, and when the latter came to Jackson he had given him employment and had done all he could for him until he learned that Marcum had stated that witness had killed Logan Cockrill, who met death when witness was a boy. The witness told D. D. Hurst, the father-in-law of Marcum, that the latter had wronged him and for the sake of his family Marcum should explain or retract this statement. The witness did not say he approved of the killing of Jim Cockrill. Witness had no knowledge that Marcum's life was in danger, and had no conversation on the subject with Mrs. Marcum, Mrs. Patrick and Mrs. Johnson, and did not tell them or either of them that the Hargises would not kill Marcum, but that Ed Callahan would. The witness did not know Tom White until after the killing of Marcum. Curt Jett was a nephew of witness, but the two had not spoken since Jett came to the store of Hargis Bros. in 1902, when Jett fired several shots into the ceiling, and when Joe Hargis escaped to the basement to prevent being killed.

Winchester, Ky., Dec. 23.—At the opening of court Judge Benton excluded all evidence in the Marcum case in relation to the petition of Senator Hargis in his suit for damages against the Lexington Herald and Louisville Herald for publication of articles concerning him. Also all reference to the latter of Mrs. Marcum, published in the Louisville Herald. The first witness Thursday morning was B. F. French, one of the defendants. He has lived in Winchester for 14 years. Engaged in the practice of law and other lines of business. He has known Marcum for 15 years. Their relations were always friendly and Marcum was attorney for witness in several cases. When he was killed in June, 1902, the witness went to see his brother, who was ill in Perry county. He passed the house where the mother of Mose Feltner lived. Witness had heard that Feltner had threatened his life because witness had prosecuted him for the murder of Jess E. Fields. Had a talk with Mrs. Bailey about Feltner's case but did not ask for a conference with Mose. In 1902 in this city he had a conversation with Mrs. Bailey, who came to ask him to let up on the prosecution of her son. Witness promised not to prosecute him further and had kept his promise. Saw her last summer at his home in Leslie county, but he did not tell her that we could arrange to get Feltner out of his troubles. Did not say that Mrs. Marcum would probably get judgment for $8,000 or $10,000, which defendants could easily pay. He had no conversation with her.

BITS BY THE BABES.

A little boy who was asked where a spider got the thread to make his web, answered:

"It's the raveling of his shirt. I saw him take it."

"What bird is called the bird of freedom in America?" asked the teacher.

"The turkey," answered the boy at the foot of the class, who was thinking of his Thanksgiving dinner.

Tommy had drawn the picture of a locomotive on his slate and his father asked him why he didn't draw the cars, too.

"Oh," answered Tommy, "the locomotive can draw them."

During the Thanksgiving dinner Tommy was nearly choked by a tendon which he encountered in a leg of the turkey.

"Mamma," he said, a little later, "the cook forgot to take that old turkey's garters off."

Little Fred was told of a new arrival in his uncle's family. "Is the kid any relation to me?" he asked.

"Yes; he's your first cousin," answered his mother.

"Huh!" exclaimed Fred, "I should think he was my last one."

"Jimmy," said the teacher, after reading the youngster's "note from his father" excusing his absence from school the day before, "it seems to me your father's writing is very much like yours."

"Yes," replied Jimmy, unabashed; "Pop ain't had no education, and I'm learnin' him."

The first time small Bessie attended a funeral she asked why the lady died. "Because God called her," she was told.

A few days later she was tied in her little chair because she had been naughty. After sitting quietly for a time she said:

"Mamma, if God called me now I couldn't go, 'cause I'm tied fast."

FACETIOUS FLINGS.

He—If I had never been in love before how would I have known what ailed me?

She—I would have told you.

Higgins—Here's a funny typographical error in this paper. It speaks of a man's "mother-in-jaw."

Wiggins—Well, isn't that all right? I can't see anything wrong about it.

Miss Passay—You may sneer at pet dogs, but they're faithful, anyway. I'd rather kiss a good dog than some men.

Mr. Sharpe—Well, well, some men are born lucky.

"What would you do if you were a king?" asked the man of vaulting ambition.

"I don't know," answered the matter-of-fact person, "I suppose I'd follow the fashion and wear a look of worry and a bullet-proof shirt."

"Now, if I were only an ostrich," began the mean man at the breakfast table, as he picked up one of his wife's biscuits, "then—"

"Yes," interrupted the patient better-half, "then I might get a few feathers for that old hat I've worn for three winters."

A JOINT INDICTMENT.

Dr. Leroy S. Chadwick and Wife Charged With Forgery.

As Soon as the Grand Jury Reported Sheriff Barry, of Cleveland, Made Arrangements For Dr. Chadwick's Extradition.

New York, Dec. 22.—Nathan Loeser, receiver in Cleveland of the affairs of Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick, made a demand Wednesday through his legal representative in this city on J. P. Caddagan, the proprietor of the Hoffman house, for all the jewelry and other valuables alleged to be in his possession, being held for the owner, Mrs. Chadwick. Under date of December 19 Mr. Loeser wrote to him as follows:

"I wired you this morning as follows: 'I hereby demand of you all the property of Cassie L. Chadwick now in your possession or under your control and I hereby notify you not to deliver same to any other person.' Information has reached me that certain property, consisting partially of valuables and jewelry belonging to Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick, is now at the Hoffman house and under your control, and I shall hold you responsible for a faithful accounting for same. If you will advise me as to the charges which you have thereon, I shall arrange to pay the same that the property may be delivered to me in Cleveland."

Cleveland, O., Dec. 22.—The Wade Park bank, of which Iri Reynolds is secretary and treasurer, together with two branches, was taken over Wednesday by the Cleveland Trust Co., which will conduct the business of the three institutions. The Cleveland Trust Co. has within the last few days taken over the business of five banks located in this city and its suburbs.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 23.—Dr. Leroy S. Chadwick and his wife, Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick, were jointly indicted by the county grand jury Thursday afternoon on the charge of having forged and uttered a $5,000,000 note signed Andrew Carnegie.

Dr. Chadwick is now on his way to New York from Paris and is expected to land next Wednesday. As soon as the indictment was returned Sheriff Barry, of this county, made arrangements to secure Dr. Chadwick's extradition. He will meet the steamer on its arrival.

This is the third time that Mrs. Chadwick has been indicted by the county grand jury, but it is the first instance of her husband's name appearing in the legal proceedings in the case. The indictments already returned against Mrs. Chadwick are similar to the one given Thursday except that they cover notes of $250,000 and $500,000, signed Andrew Carnegie.

Mrs. Chadwick was reclining on a couch before her cell in the jail when she was informed Thursday afternoon of the action of the grand jury. She appeared not the least concerned and asked only if there had been any one else indicted, mentioning the name of a person who has figured in the case to some extent. She declined to make any comment, saying:

"It will do no good to discuss my affairs in the newspapers. There has been so much misrepresentation that I have decided to do no further talking, and I am also acting on the advice of my attorney in this respect."

The grand jury's action was somewhat unexpected. It was thought at first that its report would be made Saturday. Prosecutor Keeler counted on a delay in securing the necessary papers for Dr. Chadwick's return and feared that the steamship on which he is a passenger possibly might arrive before they were secured. Action was then taken and the indictment returned.

Sheriff Barry arranged to obtain the requisition from Gov. Herrick, of Ohio, and will leave Sunday night for Albany, N. Y., to obtain extradition papers from Gov. Odell. Dr. Chadwick, it is expected, will not resist returning to Cleveland.

"There are many things which Dr. Chadwick will have to explain and I hope he will do so," said Prosecutor Keeler Thursday afternoon. "Mr. and Mrs. Chadwick may be tried on the indictments separately or together."

The grand jury has spent more than two weeks in its investigation of the Chadwick affair. It is understood that it was mainly on the testimony of President Beckwith, of the Citizens' National bank, of Oberlin, O., which failed recently, that the jurors voted to indict Dr. Chadwick.

Boston, Dec. 23.—On behalf of Herbert D. Newton, it was authoritatively stated Thursday night that civil proceedings in his interest would be instituted against Dr. Leroy S. Chadwick upon the latter's return to this country. The action will be brought for the recovery on paper given by Dr. Chadwick to Mr. Newton and having a face value of $90. Mr. Newton has cabled to Southampton and satisfied himself that Dr. Chadwick is a passenger on the Hamburg-American line steamer Pretoria.

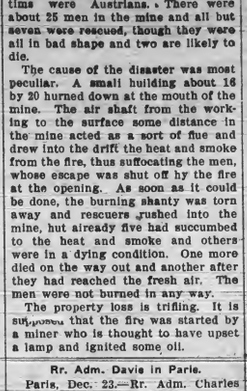
A MINE DISASTER.

Seven Men, Mostly Foreigners, Suffocated in a Peculiar Manner.



Bolivar, Pa., Dec. 23.—Seven men were suffocated Thursday in the No. 2 soft clay mine of the Reese Hammond Fire Brick Co., near here. The victims were Austrians. There were about 25 men in the mine and all but seven were rescued, though they were all in bad shape and two are likely to die.

The cause of the disaster was most peculiar. A small building about 16 by 20 burned down at the mouth of the mine. The air shaft from the working to the surface some distance in the mine acted as a sort of flue and drew into the drift the heat and smoke from the fire, thus suffocating the men, whose escape was shut off by the fire at the opening. As soon as it could be done, the burning shanty was torn away and rescuers rushed into the mine, but already five had succumbed to the heat and smoke and others were in a dying condition. One more died on the way out and another after they had reached the fresh air. The men were not burned in any way.

The property loss is trifling. It is supposed that the fire was started by a miner who is thought to have upset a lamp and ignited some oil.

Between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 Bushels Awaiting Transportation.

The railroads are doing all in their power, but Thursday were compelled to refuse 5,000 cars of grain that was offered for transportation. The inability of the roads to handle the stuff is laid to the lack of equipment.

FRAUDULENT CONCERNS.

The Number Has Been Reduced By Enforcement of Postal Laws.

Washington, Dec. 23.—R. P. Goodwin, assistant attorney general for the post office department, in his annual report to Postmaster General Wynne, says that the number of fraudulent concerns has been greatly reduced in consequence of the vigorous enforcement of the postal laws. The result is shown by the marked decrease in the number of complaints received. There were 144 fraudulent orders issued during the year and 23 orders were issued against foreign lottery companies and their agents who were found to be operating through the mails.

Ogden presided and seated with him at the table were Gov. Myron T. Herrick, of Ohio; Gov. Franklin Murphy, of New Jersey, and Rev. Dr. William H. P. Faunce, president of Brown university. Dr. Faunce spoke on "Our Pilgrim Fathers;" Gov. Murphy, on "The Commonwealth of New Jersey," and Gov. Herrick's subject was "The Puritan Microbe in the Newer States."

THE FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Second Session.

Washington, Dec. 20.—Senate.—No business of general importance transacted Monday.

House.—The house of representatives Monday emphatically disapproved the proposition to hold the inaugural ball in the capitol building. The committee having the matter in charge had substituted for the pension building as provided for by senate resolution, the congressional library, but Mr. Morrell (Pa.), who called the matter up, announced that the opposition to the latter building was so great the committee had concluded to substitute the capitol building. A storm of protests came from both sides of the chamber. The resolution offered by Mr. Morrell was voted down, the result being to delay action until the next District of Columbia day in January. The house also voted down a resolution making special order on January 5 the bill to restore to the naval academy three naval cadets who were dismissed for hazing. The effect of the vote in the house on the resolution providing for the inauguration probably will be to cause the District of Columbia committee to withdraw its amendment and accept the senate provision to hold the inaugural ball in the pension building.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Senate.—The senate met Wednesday and adjourned until January 4, 1905.

House.—An objection by Mr. Mann (Ill.) to unanimous consent to take up the inaugural resolution in the house of representatives Wednesday, sent the whole matter over until after the holidays. Mr. Morrell (Pa.), on behalf of the committee on the District of Columbia, was directed to move the passage of the senate resolution, which among other things provided for holding the inaugural ball in the pension building, as heretofore, but Messrs. Underwood (Ala.) and Mann insisted that a quorum of the house should be present to consider the matter. Immediately after Mr. Mann's objection the house adjourned until January 4, 1905.

Representative Livingston (Ga.) introduced a joint resolution Wednesday providing that hereafter electors for president and vice president and representatives in congress shall be voted for in each state on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in September and that the 59th congress shall assemble and hold its first regular session on the first Monday in October, 1905.

Representative Henry (Ct.) introduced a bill Wednesday "to secure the full use of the United States rural mail equipment and to place the rural service on a paying basis."

The bill provides "that within the limits of the respective rural routes, served by post wagons, parcels of mail matter shall be collected and delivered house to house, by the carriers, in weight up to 200 pounds, and in dimensions up to a barrel, no parcel, however, to be more than six feet in length."

The bill specifies that the rates on parcels shall be one cent for eight ounces or less, two cents for a pound; five cents for from 1 to 11 pounds; 10 cents for a half bushel, 30 pounds; 15 cents for a bushel; 20 cents for a half barrel, and 25 cents for a barrel.

KINGDON GOULD.

Fired Shots at Students Who Attempted To Haze Him.

New York, Dec. 21.—While being pursued in Upper Broadway Tuesday afternoon by a crowd of Columbia university sophomores, who were bent on capturing him, Kingdon Gould, the son of George J. Gould, drew a revolver and fired over the heads of the crowd. He then fled to a fraternity house, which was soon surrounded by the sophomores, and from which he was rescued by his father, who took him away in a carriage under the guard of three men supposed to be detectives.

On a previous occasion young Gould, who is a freshman in the Columbia school of mines, escaped from the second year men by drawing a geologists' hammer, which he flourished in the manner of a pistol.

The Total Was 19,694,855, of Which 12,804,616 Were Paid.

The free admissions included from 20,000 to 30,000 workmen who were admitted daily for several weeks to complete the work of construction of buildings and installation of exhibits.

London, Dec. 21.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Hong-Kong says he has learned on trustworthy authority that a powerful Japanese squadron of battleships and armored cruisers is proceeding south, accompanied by 15 colliers and transports, to attack the Russian Baltic squadron.

When the Year Begins

There Is No Reason Why It Should Be on January First.

It is a common saying that "there is a reason for everything, and usually a good one;" yet no one has yet found any sensible ground for beginning the New Year with the first day of January. If it were made to occur in March, as the old Romans placed it, there might be sense in it. It would be the more reasonable if it began March 22, the vernal equinox, or at the autumno-vernal equinox (September 22); or June 22, or December 22. Excellent astronomical reasons could be assigned for such a reckoning.

Higher civilization is in the northern hemisphere; yet January in this part of the world is a season of cold and snow or chill and rain. It is a season when moving is not only inconvenient, but next to impossible. It is a time of the beginning of nothing, coming ten days after the winter solstice and 70 days before the spring equinox.

The day was chosen, probably, upon the assumption that any time is good enough for a general starting point, provided everybody agrees to it, and it will probably have to go at that. It is queer, though, that in setting back the beginning of the year two months, the names September, October, November and December should have been suffered to remain. These were, as their origin implies, the seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth months when the year began with March, but now that January is first, they are the ninth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth months, respectively. Consequently they are decided misnomers.

Yet there is no use of finding fault, where no amount of it will correct the blunder complained of. It has been made and stuck down a mile-post of time by all the civilized nations, and no profane hand will be suffered to pull it up and set it forward. It has been hallowed by usage, and must be and abide until the coming of another civilization.

Whatever its origin or causes, the day brings in with it thoughts and associations that should prove serious to the reflective mind. Unerringly as the clock records the passing minutes and hours, the New Year writes down the passage of the years as they come and go. The birth of the new is the death of the old year. It proclaims that the past is gone and cannot be resurrected. That time which was lost in it can never be regained; that follies committed, that sins indulged, that vices practiced, while past, have left their impress upon mind and character. It tells of good deeds that will never die, of manly actions, of heroic suffering for the right. All of these are in the dead past, irrevocable, and useful only as the good done has made better and stronger the character, and evil done has made one less fitted to meet the duties and responsibilities of the hour.

The New Year suggests the beginning of things. It is a time of good remorse or sorrow for the past, and of good resolutions for the future. The trouble is that too many good resolutions are made in this first day of the year and too many of them are broken. It may be well to purpose to do; but it is far better to do and to hold fast. Broken promises, whether made to self or to others, tend to lower character and render one more fertile in pledges to do, because of the very ease of breaking them.

The New Year is a time with business men for casting up accounts. They figure out losses and gains for the year that is past, and upon the result lay plans for the year just begun. Here is serious work in which there can be no self-deception, no false hopes and no false pledges. Business is made up of fact, of work, of energy, of will. It will stand no false estimates and will not delude itself with idle fancies.

"The king is dead; live the king." The year is dead; live the year. The old year is gone; the new year is on. And so go on our lives, made up of years, or many or few, as the case may be, each one bringing us nearer to the shores of that sea which is shoreless and that country in which time is not reckoned.

With the saddening and subduing reflections come those of cheer and good feeling, and we greet our friends with a "Happy New Year"—happy, it may prove, if past errors and follies are corrected and each one lives, with brave heart, in the light that is given him.

WILLIAM ROSSER GOBBE.

Sure of a Call.

Newitt—It seems the old custom of making New Year's calls has died out altogether.

Borroughs—Not altogether. Our friend Markley will surely make one on me this year. A three months' note I gave him will fall due on that day.—Philadelphia Press.

Getting Ready.

"It seems to me," remarked the frank friend, "that you are hitting a pace that is a little too swift."

"Not at all, not at all," replied the youth. "I am merely arranging for a suitable case of remorse to strengthen me in my usual New Year's resolution."—Chicago Post.

Breckinridge, of national fame, who represented us in the house of Representatives."

Two hundred years have elapsed since the capture of the Rock of Gibraltar by the British. A writer in "The Nineteenth Century and After," says that the capture of this fortress was an accident and that it became a British possession in the first instance because at a time when we happened to be at war with one of the rival claimants to the Spanish throne our admiral in the Mediterranean happened to have no particular objective point in view, and, having failed in his only enterprise of that year, was unwilling to return home with a fine fleet that had done nothing for the honor of the flag. So he thought he might as well make an attack on Gibraltar as do anything else. Nevertheless, his action has to be reconed among the notable "deeds that won the empire," and one that on its centenary deserves to be had in remembrance.

No more thrilling was the escape of Eliza, of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" fame, across the ice-filled Ohio than was the three-mile trip of Elizabeth Feldhaus and Elvin Markesberry, of Hamilton, Ky., from Rabbit Hash, Ky., to Rising Sun, Indiana, Wednesday night in a skiff while on their way to be married.

Great cakes of ice filled the river as they pushed into the current at the same place where Eliza is said to have crossed. Several times during their trip to Rising Sun they found the channel almost closed and several times their skift narrowly escaped being ground to pieces between the ice. But the groom's trained eye and hand guided their frail craft safely through, and with in half an hour after reaching Rising Sun they embarked on a far greater flood—the sea of matrimony.

Although apparently eloping, yet such was not the case, the extraordinary trip having been suggested and undertaken purely through a mutual love of romance.

Markesberry, who is a prominent tobacco broker of Hamilton, Ky., and who is well known to all Cincinnati tobacco dealers, by prearrangement met Miss Feldhaus at her home in Hamilton, and together they drove in a buggy to Rabbit Hash, ten miles away, and then completed their journey in the skift.

Upon reaching Rising Sun they were informed that the only minister in town at the time was Rev. Robert Rumblay and that he was then engaged at the trial of James Gillespie at the Courthouse. As soon as the trial was completed for the day they went to Rev. Mr. Rumblay's home near the Courthouse and were soon made man and wife. They then drove to Lawrenceburg and from there came to Cincinnati via the C. L. & A. traction line.

They went to the home of the bride's uncle, Dietrich Feldhaus, Gilbert and Hewitt avenues, where they announced their wedding.

A luncheon, at which were present all the relatives of both parties, was given last night at the Feldhaus home in their honor. They will make their home at Hamilton, Ky., where a snug new home, recently built by Markesberry, awaits the bride.—Commercial Tribune.

The United States cannot get along without the South and her splendid sons. It was a Southerner that wrote the Declaration of Independence and framed the first measure abolishing slavery. It was a Southerner who conducted the Revolution to a successful issue. It was a South Carolinian who drew the framework of our immortal Constitution that was adopted and followed by the colonial convention. It was a Virginian that promulgated the Monroe doctrine. It was a Southerner who conducted the revolution to a successful issue. It was another Virginian, about 100 years ago, who announced the cardinal principles of civil scrvice reform.

It was a Kentuckian who originated and fathered protection—the cardinal principal of the Republican party—in this country. It was a Southerner who added to the republic the great empire of the West embraced in the Louisiana purchase. It was a Tennesseean who smashed the British at New Orleans and crowned the war of 1812 with success. It was the military genius of the South that won the Mexican war. It was a Southerner who marked out the Gulf stream and brought about the establishment of the Naval Academy. It was a Kentuckian who guided the ship of state through the war of secession and freed the slaves.

It was a Tennesseean who commanded the Federal fleets during the civil war and became one of the three admirals the country has had. It was a Southerner who was in command of the fleet at Santiago that destroyed the naval power of Spain. Instances might be multiplied of the genius, the enterprise and the valor of the sons of the South; but we have named enough to prove that the country cannot do without the South.—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

The term "three acres and a cow," which was at one time quite prominent in English farm discussions, was originally suggested as a remedy for the lack of employment among mechanics and laborers. The idea was that if each workman could secure possession of a small place, he would become, in a measure, independent during a period of hard times. The actual suggestion was three and one-quarter acres, the one-fourth-acre to be devoted to an orchard in which the cow could graze occasionally. The rest of the land he desired to devote as follows: Potatoes, one half acre; turnips, one fourth acre; winter vetch, one-half acre; spring vetch, one-fourth acre; barley, wheat or oats, three-fourths acre; clover and grass, three-fourths acre. He estimated that the product of this land would be worth about $100, and would keep the occupier above actual want.

Suit has been filed in the State Fiscal Court at Frankfort by Attorney General Hays against Henry Bacon, Samuel and John A. Fulton for the sum of $24,260.84, claimed as an overcharge on printing 19,000 school registers and books. It is charged that the printers were paid $28,260.84 by the State for the work, which was not worth over $4,000.

The current notion that perjury is one of the crimes that are on the increase is not borne out by the figures just issued relating to the German empire. In 1882 the number of persons convicted in that country of perjury was 1,607; in 1902 it was only 1,292, the decrease having been steady from year to year. Allowing for the great growth of the population, this means a decrease of nearly 50 per cent in two decades.

This season's potato crop of the United States is the largest ever known. As the United States are not exporters of potatoes, but for the last few years have frequently imported enough to make up for the deficiency in the supply here, the 288,700,000 bushels of this year's crop will provide three and a half bushels for every man, woman and child in the United States, which is a little more than the ordinary consumption. Maine is the champion potato state, with a yield of 200 bushels to the acre, and New Hampshire next with 145. Iowa holds the record among the Western States in potatoes, as in corn, with 118 bushels to the acre. New York has the largest acreage, with Michigan second, but New York's yield per acre is only 86, less than the average of the United States and much lower than the yield of the states situated further north. The acreage planted in potatoes has varied slightly in the last four years. Almost the same amount is planted every year and the difference in crop comes from the variation in yield. The prices this year are lower than usual and during the present month considerably lower than they will be in the spring.

It has always been said, how truly we do not positively know, that the sunflower turns its face ever toward the sun; that it bows a genial welcome to the king of day when that monarch first lifts the curtain of night and peeps over the horizon upon an awakening world, and that it follows the imperial visitor in his majestic march across the heavens and nods a good night to him as he passes with his retinue of golden beams and silvery shadows behind the western slopes. This may be an exaggeration of the sunflower's conduct, but we believe it is at least partially true, and that the Kansas flower does respond in some degree to the attractions of the great luminary. Anyhow, the thought of this handsome product of the prairies turning its frank, open face ever toward the light and responding to the ardent wooing of the sun with reciprocal affection is inspiring, isn't it? It is a symbol of the ideal soul—the soul that loves the light, that glows in the presence of things that are lovely, the receptive soul, the soul that is responsive to truth and beauty—in a word, the sunflower's soul.—Marion (Kan.)
